The Social Pirates

Story, No. 12
The Disappearance of Helen Mintern

Plot by George Bronson Howard.
Novelization by Hugh C. Weir.
Copyright Kalem Company.

The girls did not have long to wait for the appearance of Casper Carson at their flat. They had hardly finished dinner when he was announced, and his face showed that he had no news even before he shook his head. At Mary's excited story of the sequel of their fruitless pursuit of the taxicab, he looked grave, and when the girl described how it had ended, and the appearance of the unknown man whom they had traced, his gravity increased. Without a word he reached into his pocket and produced a small wallet, from which he extracted two newspaper clippings. The first gave a two-column likeness of a rather grim-faced, close-shaven man, at sight of whom both girls cried out in recognition.

"That is Dan Slatern, political boss of the upper tenderloin," explained Carson slowly. "He is a bad man, and a dangerous one. He held out the second newspaper clipping, and Mary read aloud a recent interview with Carson, given to an energetic reporter, in which the young millionaire had set forth certain vigorous views on what he termed "The Socialism of So-Called Beauty Parlor," declaring that many of these establishments were operated largely as a cloak to gambling houses and that they were playing their illegal trade under the protection of a clique of men high up in the political control of the city.

"One of those pieces, which I had in mind, when I gave the interview," said Carson, as Mary finished, "is one other establishment of Madame Suro—and the man, whom I believe, has given his endorsement and protection to it is none other than Dan Slatern. I have been working for months for evidence that would prove my suspicion and convict him in a court of law."

Last week we found ourselves entirely sold up of Summer wearing apparel, and we were forced to go into the open markets for merchandise, and, of course, at this time of the year, manufacturers are awaiting buyers of quantity and at cash especially, so Livingston's were quick enough to take advantage of the good things, and hence these remarkable values. Consider each item separately, then come.

TO START SCHOOL BUILDING
Enola, Pa., July 7. — Work will be started within the next two weeks on Enola's new $27,000 school building to replace the one destroyed by fire on April 18. The building will contain ten school rooms, an auditorium seating 500, rest room and book rooms. The building will be of strictly fire-proof construction. The school board will elect their teachers at their regular meeting this week.

WILL RETURN TO CHINA
Special to the Telegraph
Harrisburg, Pa., July 7. — The Rev. and Mrs. Clifford A. Funk, of Philadelphia, the former a pastor of the United Brethren Church from 1912 to 1915, but now of the First United Brethren Church, at Philadelphia, will go to Southern China late in September to serve as missionaries under direction of United Brethren Church. They served several years in China.

New Post Office Division Has 100,000 Employees

Washington. — A new division in the Post Office Department, to be known as the division of post office service, provided for by the recent act of Congress, with entire supervision over the handling and movement of the mails in every city and town in the United States has been created.

The division absorbs the divisions of city delivery and salaries and allowances and that part of the division of miscellaneous transportation relating to the mail messenger, pneumatic tube and screen wagon service. The change is expected to result in improved mail service, as well as in the elimination of confusion which had resulted from the division of executive authority over related postal functions.

Goodwin D. Ellsworth of North Carolina, is in charge, assisted by William S. Ryan, of New York, former heads of divisions abolished. They will have under them more than 100,000 employees, scattered throughout the country, and will supervise the disbursement of more than $150,000,000.

Removes Hairy Growths Without Pain or Bother

(Modes of To-day)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delicate handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y. — "I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it." — Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Carson Gives Mona Instructions.

"Do you think that the affair of the taxicab has any bearing on the inside operations of Madame Suro?" asked Mona thoughtfully.

"I don't know if there is any doubt about it," he said, the emphatic rejoinder. "I can't see yet its exact connection, if we could only get out who the woman was in the taxicab." He broke off, pacing the floor, his hands clasped behind his mouth, an unlighted cigar in his mouth, which he was chewing nervously.

Mona spoke up suddenly, with her eyes flashing.

"I have an idea—which will get us not only the information of the taxicab and its occupants, but which ought to give you just the evidence you want about Madame Suro and Slatern." She then unfolded the plan. "What do you think of it?" she asked.

Carson and Mary agreed and an appointment was made for him to meet Mona the next evening at the Metropolitan Cafe—an establishment frequented by actresses, chorus girls and men about town.

Slatern was to remain in the background for the present, but there was every indication that when she was needed in the line of Mona's planning her role would be no small one.

There was a definite reason behind the dinner appointment. Slatern was one of the establishments most patronized by Slatern, and where his appearance was the signal for every uncoupled waiter in the house to quicken into activity. Carson led the way through the brightly lighted doorway, with a mental register of protest at the character of his surroundings, but Mona concealed her feelings cleverly, and none of the diners would have suspected from her attitude of unaffected enjoyment that she was counting the moments before their task would be done, and they would be free to depart. The two found a table in an deserted rear section as possible, and from which both could command a view of the door. Slatern had not yet appeared, and Mona was beginning to worry for fear that her might vary his routine of habit on this occasion when the political boss sauntered in, escorted by a very elegantly-dressed young woman, who showed obvious pride in her " conquest."

Slatern and his companion were ushered to a table in a prominent position, and Mona and Carson delayed their chairs without arousing suspicion, and also directed her attention to the other end of the table. Carson, however, continued their meal as though unconscious of the scrutiny. When Slatern and his companion finally left, the waiter and Carson were just behind them.

The two couples reached the walk at almost the same moment. As the door closed, Mona broke away from Carson's arm, and raised her voice angrily.

"I am done with you—for good!" Carson took a step toward her, and tried to regain hold of her arm. But she shook him off.

"You are a tight-wad, a disgusting tight-wad!" She saw that her voice had reached the ears of Slatern, and that the other was looking over his shoulder curiously. "I don't want any more of your promises! I am through—from this moment!"

GERMAN SOLDIER WITH ALLIES

Deserted Teutons and French to Fight With Belgians

London, Ju —The record of Max Kohler, a clever and crafty German, aged 26, who made a brief appearance at Marlborough Street police court, London, is interesting. His record follows:

Served in the German army and deserted.

Served in the French army and deserted.

Joined the Belgian army.

Married a French girl in Paris two years ago.

Married an English girl six months ago.

Was being taken from England to France as a deserter in the Sussex when she was torpedoed.

Was rescued and taken to Folkestone, where he escaped rearrest and came to London.

Worked in the West End and was again arrested, when he admitted that he was a German.

Kohler speaks English, French and German fluently.

At the age of 20 Kohler was called up for service in the German army, but after a few weeks' service, he deserted from the army and made his way to England, and then to America. He served in a weird variety of occupations. He is an electrician by profession, but he has been a sailor, a mechanic, a waiter, a pantryman, a fitter and an associate of criminals.

From America he went to France and for some time lived in Paris, where he was captured by crime. Bonnot, the famous motorcar bandit, was one of his friends. A few months before he was broken out he married a French girl in Paris. He joined the French army at the outbreak of war and was among the first troops to be sent to the front. On the very first day he was in action—August 22, 1914—he was reported to be missing and later it was found that he had deserted and had been taken by the Germans at Charleroi. He told them he was a German and persuaded them to allow him to make his way through Belgium to Holland.

He then saw a chance of coming to England. He posed as a Belgian refugee and as such was admitted. He visited several towns in England and Scotland, where he obtained employment in a well-known munition works. That was in the early part of 1915.

In Newcastle he made the acquaintance of the daughter of the foreman of one of the departments in the munition works, proposed to her, was accepted and they were married about six months ago.

Good Panama Hat Costs but $64,000 in Mexican Money

St. Louis, Mo. — Honestly now, how would you like to fork over $6,500 for a suit of clothes?

Or shell out $64,000 for a Panama hat?

Or dig $2,000 just to have your trunk moved?

These are prices and charges they hurl at you down in the City of Mexico when you try to use Carranza currency as a medium of exchange.

Tom Randolph, chairman of the board National Bank of Commerce, is authority for the statement that these prices really do exist, the information having been sent him in a letter just received from a friend in Brownsville, Texas.

It is presumed stores do not want Carranza currency and have named the high prices to stimulate the flow of United States gold and currency.

Hunted Marriage License, Got Locked in Courthouse

Brazil, Ind. — Clark McGranahan and Miss Helen Stough, of Brazil, went to the courthouse just at closing time to obtain a marriage license. They had made arrangements with the deputy clerk to meet them just after closing time, but the clerk forgot her engagement. The janitors closed the building and locked all the doors, and they were prisoners in the courthouse more than two hours. Sheriff Garrigue returned from Michigan City, where he had taken a prisoner and found Mr. Granahan and Miss Stough, who then called the deputy clerk and obtained the license.

Reward Came to Autoist Who Offered Man a Lift

Cape Girardeau, Mo. — Just by being a good fellow, Joseph Haas, who lives near Cape Girardeau, saved three of his best Spring chickens the other night. Mr. Haas was motoring home from town, when he saw a man carrying a sack. Halting his car to give the man a lift on the road, he became inquisitive about the sack and upon investigation found it contained three frying size fowls from the Haas hen-nery. Their necks had been wrung and the Haas family had an involuntary chicken dinner.
