AID SOCIETIES' BOYS' CAMP IS JOY SPOT

In charge of the camp, which opened in July and will be closed early in September. Six more boys will be sent to the Franklin county farm next week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, who have charge of one of the fraternity houses at State College, are cooking and keeping the camp in order for the boys. The use of the farm land is given free by Dr. Black, who has also provided a garden for the boys to raise their own vegetables.

A regular schedule is followed each day, the boys rising at 7 in the morning. Breakfast follows, after which there is a drill and singing class. The next two hours are spent working in the garden and in recreation. The boys then hike a quarter of a mile to the swimming hole.

After the swim, luncheon is served. In the afternoon short tramps through the woods, berry picking, ball games, horseback riding and occasional auto rides "with the doctor" keep the youngsters busy. "Early to bed, early to rise," is the rule of the camp, and there is seldom any need for a lamp.

Plans are being made by John Yates, secretary of the Associated Aid Societies, to have twice as many boys in the camp next year. Mr. Yates originated the idea this year, and the plan was made possible only by the contributions of residents of the city. The cost of equipping the camp this year will increase the expenses, and Mr. Yates said that additional contributions will be a big help. One of the features will be two prizes to be given by William Strouse to the boys showing the most progress in efficient training during their stay in camp.

Seven men who control about 20 per cent of the $1,000,000 of underlying bonds of the railroad, comprising the Peabody committee. The committee holds that under the receivership the security of its bonds has been injured. The Peabody committee includes Percy Rockefeller, Allan A. Forbes, William A. Day, Alexander Hemphill, Albert W. Harris, Charles A. Peabody and John H. McClelland.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Fool's Revenge," one of William Fox's latest productions, will be shown at the Colonial Theater

"The Fool's" to-day and to-morrow. Revived at the Victoria Theater with the Colonial second episode of "The Grip of Evil." The new Fox production features William H. Tooker and Maude Gilbert. The story deals with a clown, who, seeking revenge, unknowingly gives his only daughter into the hands of a wealthy libertine. The second episode of "The Grip of Evil" promises to be even more entertaining and thrilling than the first. Each episode is a complete story in itself, and it is not necessary to see every part to enjoy it, for each part is just as enjoyable as any two-reel picture ever placed before motion picture theater patrons.

How cowboys act in dress suits, sleep in brass beds with bouncing springs, consume rich food and expensive plate and silver, and Millicent confesses the tragedy of her situation. Piffle's love is so great that he offers her the protection of his name, asking nothing in return. She accepts and the two leave the house, are married and Piffle returns to the circus life, taking Millicent with him.
