FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

AMAZING BUT RARELY SUSPECTED TRUTHS ABOUT THE THINGS YOU EAT

By ALFRED W. McCANN

suits so serious that they inspired interference by the United States Department of Agriculture.

So many thousands of diseased cows were "plugged" with secret doses of tuberculin in several counties of Illinois for the purpose of concealing the evidence of their diseased condition that Sept. 12, 1914, the United States Department of Agriculture was forced to issue quarantine restrictions against the counties where the traffic in "plugged" tubercular dairy cows was especially active.

Governor Dunne of Illinois, co-operated with the Federal Government in this effort to root out the conspiracy which the evidence indicated had been hatched in Elgin, Ill., the one-time center of the dairy industry.

It was proved that the "plugging" gang, operating under the protection afforded by the Illinois legislature, were putting tuberculin to such legitimate uses that the health of the entire cattle industry of the United States was being menaced by their operations.

Their custom was to receive diseased stock from dairymen and to sell such stock after "plugging," as choice dairy animals.

Certificates were obtained from private veterinarians declaring that the animals were free from disease.

One of the farms most active as a center of this sort of devilry was partly in Illinois and partly in Wisconsin. The "plugged" cows, after being declared free from disease on the Illinois side, were shifted to the Wisconsin side of the farm and sold from that end.

The federal officials declared that tremendous damage had been inflicted on western and eastern dairy herds, to say nothing of the menace to human health by this system of trading in diseased cows, aided, encouraged, and protected by the Illinois legislature.

At the time of the discovery of these outrages in Illinois the cow men succeeded in introducing a bill before the legislature at Albany for the purpose of discrediting the tuberculin test in New York State.

When the bill was introduced to show that officials connected with the New York State Department of Agriculture had actually been winking at the "plugging" of diseased cows for years, and that New York State's cattle men were carrying on a widespread traffic in "plugged" cows, the bill was defeated.

These facts, while in themselves sufficient to inspire public vigilance in connection with the nation's milk, butter and ice cream supply, are even more valuable in revealing to federal and State authorities the actual conditions now existing among dairy herds.

They index such a grave state of affairs that in addition to the necessity of vigorous action on the part of public health officials which they so clearly reveal they also teach the common people why no milk or milk product, such as butter, ice cream, or potcheese, should be consumed unless pasteurized.

The facts about to follow emphasize the importance of this great but generally neglected health measure.

Shot and Near Death, Asks For Watermelon

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 22.—Regardless of the fact that he had a large caliber revolver bullet imbedded somewhere in the center of his chest, where in the bullet of his chest, James Sagers, a negro, aged 30, a resident of 11 Roach street, calmly submitted to an examination by Grady hospital internes, and immediately afterward requested that the "doctors" furnish him with a large cool slice of watermelon.

Sagers claims that a negro named

"Charlie" shot him, but states that he does not know who Charlie is. He was carried immediately to the hospital and placed on the table. A hurried examination was made in an effort to locate the bullet, but because of the fact that the bullet was evidently lodged near the heart, it was considered best to take an X-ray picture before continuing the probe.

Subsequently the flow of blood was stopped, the negro made as comfortable as possible and carried to his cot in the ward. Placed in his bed, Sagers sat up and began to ask questions.

"Is it hurt much, white folks," he asked.

"Pretty bad, Jim," replied Dr. A. E. Culberson, who conducted the examination.

"Humph," grunted the negro. Then: "Is it goin' ter get well?" he asked.

"Can't tell, Jim," replied the man in the white apron.

Jim thought it over for a while, scratched his head and looked at the doctor in a "sheepish" manner.

"Doctor," said Jim, "kin I have jes' one thing?" His face broke into a broad grin.

Dr. Culberson nodded his head.

"What I wants more'n anything right now," declared Jim, "is just one red, juicy piece of watermelon."

He got it.

Dogs Are Not Cited in Regimental Orders

Paris, Sept. 22.—Citation of dogs in regimental orders is now common at the French front. Fox, of the 19th company of the Sixth regiment, is one of these illustrious quadrupeds. The "ferocious war bulletin" of July 16 contained the following:

"An enemy raid directed against one of our small posts in the Pas-

Does Your Husband Drink? Druggist Tells How to Cure the Liquor Habit at Home

Free Prescription Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store and Given Secretly

H. J. Brown, 409 West Superior Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, was for many years a confirmed drunkard. His friends and relatives despaired of ever redeeming him. His sister sought the best medical men in Europe in the hope that she might find something which would cure him. Finally she was recommended to an eminent chemist who gave her a private formula (the same as appears below) and told her how to use it. She had it filled at the drug store and gave it to him secretly. The results were startling. In a few weeks he was completely cured. That was over eight years ago and he has not touched a drop since. He now occupies a position of trust and is enthusiastic in his efforts to help others overcome the liquor habit. He feels that he can best do this by making public the same formula which cured him. Here is the prescription: Go to any first class drug store and get 14 Tescum powder. Drop one powder twice a day, in coffee, tea or any liquid. It is harmless, tasteless, odorless and cannot be detected. You can use it without the knowledge of anyone. A lady who recently tried it on her husband reports: "My husband was on a spree when I got the powder, and he usually stays drunk from three to four weeks at a time. After putting the powder in his coffee for four days, he sobered up and has not taken a drink since and says he is through with it forever. He also complained that whisky did not taste the same. I shall not tell him what did it, but I am grateful for this help and I shall recommend it whenever possible."

NOTE—A leading druggist when shown the above article said: "Yes, tescum is a very remarkable remedy, perfectly effective and is having an enormous sale. I advise everyone who wishes to destroy the liquor habit to give it a trial." It is sold in this city by H. C. Kennedy, and all other first class druggists, who guarantee it to do the work or refund the money.—Advertisement.

chendaal region, failed under our fire." It is learned from an official source that the failure was due to Fox, who was thus referred to in next day's regimental orders: "Fox, Serfes F 4, No. 221, Kennel A., prevented a raid attempted on one of our first line trenches by the Germans. Taking advantage of the darkness, and when a gale was blowing, the enemy succeeded in reaching our barbed-wire without being seen or heard. The dog, Fox of the 19th company, on sentry at the end of the trench twice gave the alarm and thus allowed us to receive the enemy with grenade fire. The surprise attack failed."

Two other dogs, Diana and Cybela, have been distinguished in the same way, and all three have, besides, been introduced by moving pictures to the Paris public.

Anecdotes of occasions on which these "war dogs," as they are known, have saved critical situations during actual fighting by acting as dispatch runners are innumerable, and staff officers have calculated that in one section of the front alone six thousand soldiers were saved from death or danger by these always modest auxiliaries.
