KENNEDY HOST AT RECEPTION

Prominent Men Attend Big Function at Ragged Edge, Near Chambersburg

Men prominent in railroad, banking, professional, official and political life to the number of 300, including many Harrisburgers, to-day were guests of the Cumberland Valley railroad, at Ragged Edge, his country home, near Chambersburg. It was President Kennedy's annual reception and dinner to his railroad friends.

To-day's gathering was the largest and most representative of many parties of distinguished citizens at Ragged Edge. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy and Miss Kennedy received the guests as they arrived. The delightful weather added to the pleasure of the occasion and the lawn was beautifully in bloom for the occasion.

The guests marveled when they found apples growing on locust trees, grapes on maples and pears on spruces until they discovered that they had been cunningly fastened to the boughs and were placed there to be eaten. Under one large tree was a barrel of apples and the first man to refresh himself therefrom was ex-Governor Stuart.

Four special trains took the guests from Chambersburg to Ragged Edge at noon. They started from Harrisburg at 11 o'clock, with prominent Pennsylvania railroad and Reading Railway officials and Harrisburg guests. One special train was from Baltimore, and railroad officials in their private cars came from the East, West, North and South.

SCHWAB PREFERS PEACE BUSINESS

Advices Nation to Prepare For Peace in Time of War; U. S. Is Building

In time of peace prepare for war, is an old axiom, but Charles M. Schwab, the great steel master, takes the opposite view, his motto being "In time of war prepare for peace." That is what he is urging upon the American Government, upon American industries, and, more important, upon the American people. No other concern in the world has profited in like degree from the war than has Schwab's great Bethlehem Steel Company. Nevertheless, Mr. Schwab realizes that war orders are a false prosperity, that they are not born of sound economic conditions and therefore are of a fitting character. "After the war," he says, "orders that count most," says Mr. Schwab, and under this title he has written a timely and interesting article dwelling on post-bellum conditions for "System, the Magazine of Business," for October.

Germany Not at End of Resources. Schwab says: "In the time of the war, Mr. Schwab says: 'I do not consider the war to end suddenly or within a very short time. At the beginning of the war I was prepared to struggle for five years. The last time that I heard from him, which was not long before his death, he said that he then saw no reason to change his original estimate. By most recent advices from England it is that the people there expect an early peace. But I can find no basis for their belief, and certainly the allied countries, when you consider the scale of their production at home, are not putting down on their foreign orders to a degree which is at all commensurate with the magnitude of their home production. The better condition is the economic condition of Germany. That exact condition is a matter of speculation, for apparently reliable reports are in variance. Certainly, however, Germany is not nearly at the end of her resources.'"

Looking to the future, Mr. Schwab says: "I am an optimist as to the future of the United States. It provides the business of the nation and the business of the individual are managed on sound, far-sighted, economic lines. We should be able not only to keep all that we have, but to get more. I do not think that this is a time for idealistic experiments in economics by those who have not a working knowledge of business and little of economics."

U. S. at Peak of Productive Power. "The United States is at the very peak of its productive power, every business is prosperous and we have an ample supply of money. We are in almost the best conceivable position to take a permanent leading place in the world. Our problem is not the difficulty of one of building up, but of maintaining it. It is a problem of readjustment. We must be able to change in conditions and we must be vigilant to guard against an insidious economic weakening rather than a sudden onslaught."

"Look at our position. He has discovered, as a nation, the elementary fact that a permanently on-sided trade is impossible. We have discovered that the nations that change in conditions and we must be vigilant to guard against an insidious economic weakening rather than a sudden onslaught."

EIGHTY-FIVE YEARS AGO we believed that our first duty was to safeguard our deposits by conservative investment.

While keeping our methods and service modern, we have never departed from this policy, and our steady growth during this period extending for nearly a century confirms our depositors' belief in this principle.

STOCK TRANSFER IS NOT A BIG PAYER

Total Amount Received in Nine Months Considerably Less Than Expected

Pennsylvania's stock transfer tax has yielded the State Treasury just $129,156.54 in nine months. During the month of September the revenue from the tax amounted to $8,211.34, which was about the average for the last few months. The transfer tax, which was one of the revenue raising measures passed last session, has not yielded anything like what was predicted. It was hoped that it would produce at least half a million dollars, but although there has been marked activity in the stock market the receipts have not been as large as expected. The tax is two cents upon the hundred dollars of value.

Among these are some jitney cases from Schuylkill county and the application of the borough of Ringtown, in the same county, for approval of the construction of a municipal plant. Another will be the case of the borough of Mt. Union, which contends that fire protection is inadequate at certain points within the borough. On Wednesday the commission will hear arguments in the cases of Greensburg and other towns in Westmoreland county against the rates and service of the Westmoreland Water Company. These cases are among the largest water cases heard by the commission.

Twenty-Three Closed.—According to a statement issued by the State Game Commission, twenty-three counties of the State have been closed to the hunting of deer, Bluff, Butler and Indiana, until October 10, 1917. Others are closed until the Fall of 1918 and in some cases until 1919. Ten counties have been closed for hunting of wild turkeys and eleven for hunting of quail. All told, twenty-seven counties have been closed to the hunting of one or another kind of game for one or two years.

In some instances, notably Bucks and Montgomery, hunting of five kinds of game has been forbidden for certain periods. This action in closing counties has been taken by the game commission on petition of people in the county in order to permit game to increase.

Guard Muster Out.—Pennsylvania soldiers now in the Federal service will automatically become members of the National Guard of this State again as soon as mustered out of the Federal service. The Adjutant General's Department has arranged for the taking over of property and other details connected with the muster out of the troops now on the way from the border. In cases where men live in distant parts of the State from their home stations or the organizations of which they are members at present, transfers will probably be arranged.
