WHAT IS YOUR WORTH TO WORLD

Own Fault if There Is No Place For You in Scheme of Life

By Beatrice Fairfax
"So long as we love we serve; so long as we are loved by some one, I would almost say that we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend."—Robert Louis Stevenson.

"There isn't any place for me in life. Nobody wants me," a sad little girl I know sighs over and over. To her mere living is a desperate burden that she is hardly willing to carry. To her and all the other morbid souls who cannot find a place for themselves in the scheme of existence I want to talk to-day.

"So long as we love we serve," and the beloved "R. L. S." whose own handicap of desperate ill health did not prevent him from leaving the world books which are a veritable anthology of cheerfulness.

If there seems to be no place for you in life, isn't it because you are failing to give out to life any affection? The girl of whom I speak looks upon men as ravening wild beasts. Her attitude toward the whole scheme of existence is one of criticism. She sees nothing anywhere to like or admire or approve.

If she meets some one who is kind and unselfish she persists in regarding that person as a strange exception to the general rule. Within herself she has created a world that does not know kindness or love or unselfishness. And having created that world she lives in it without trying to give anything of help or service to the tangible world that lies about her.

She persists in regarding herself as an unhappy and lonely creature—and this in spite of the fact that she possesses one friend whom she knows she can trust, one friend who is loyal and kind, one friend for whom she feels affection and in whom she can place faith.

It never occurs to her morbid little soul that she owes something to that friendship, that because someone worth while cares for her she has even at the moment of her greatest unhappiness a place in life, and that she is of use to the world, in fact and in potentiality, because she has the friendship of a fine and admirable soul.

Every human being has a definite place in the scheme of things. It may be tiny now—perhaps it is going to be tiny for always, but at least it is a place; no one else can fill it, and the individual who is put into it is a link in a chain.

Just being alive carries with it a certain responsibility. How does any of us know that any other human being can do the work we find to hand? How does any of us know that anyone else can do the work we shirk in the mere fact that we fail to look for it?

None of us can look ahead so much as an hour; none of us knows what to-morrow will bring. It is possible that just by being at a given place at a certain time we may prove of inestimable value in the scheme of things—but more than this we all owe to life a state of "preparedness."

To educate yourself so that you may be of service to the world in general and of value to those who care for you is a part of your duty.

Even though you feel friendless and unnecessary in the scheme of things you have no guarantee that the state of affairs is going to last in a world of change. How then dare you throw away your chance to make ready to be of value to life?

Being of service to the world is in itself valuable. It is the responsibility of life. No one has a right to sit around and think how miserable and lonely and unhappy and abused he or she is without recognizing the fact that there are plenty of people in like state.

ABOVE LOCH LOMOND
Yes, it's up above Loch Lomond
That I'd like to be to-day,
In the highlands of my homeland—
Ah, it's long I've been away!
And though I cannot roam about me,
I can shut my eyes and see
The green grass above Loch Lomond,
Where my pastures used to be.

In the morning bright and early
I can see my sheep graze,
And the purple of the heather
Is veiled over by the haze,
And my dog walks close beside me,
And the gentle breezes blow
O'er the fields above Loch Lomond;
Ah, it's there I'd like to go!

How the bullets whistle past me!
How my comrades stumble, fall!
While the powder smoke hangs heavy
Like some ghastly funeral pall.
I can hardly see the sunlight
Through the blur of brown and gray;
For my heart is in the highlands
Of my homeland far away.

There's a crash!—did something strike me?
There's a throbbing in my side...
God—I see it—blue Loch Lomond!
Clear as glass it is—and wide!
Am I falling? Am I—dying?
Ah, this looks like home to me...
My green fields—above Loch Lomond!

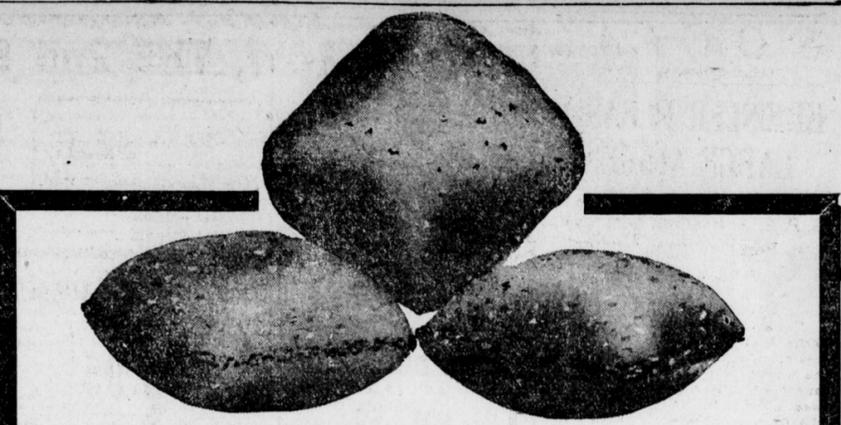

Is it heaven that I see?

HOW TO HANDLE CELERY

Cultivate every week, for this helps to make a quick growth and helps crisp, tender celery. As soon as the celery is 12 to 15 inches high some water or bleach should be provided. Paper, straw and boards are good for bleaching early celery or celery that is ready for market before the hardest frosts; then follow with dirt for later winter celery. Celery that has had a good frost on it is sweeter than that which has had no frost.

It takes 1000 feet of lumber for each 1000 celery plants. The boards are strung end to end on each side of the row. Two men, one at each end of a board, slide the board under the leaves and raise it up; then the one on the other side is set up in the same manner. Each man has some wire hooks about six inches long and one of these is put across each end on the top of the two boards which holds them in place.

I always bank winter celery with manure as high as we can get it, says C. E. Beckwith in Farm and Home. When shipping celery from the field, as soon as the celery is bleached good it is cut, trimmed, washed and tied 12 to 15 plants in a bunch, size considered, and packed in cases holding 8, 10 and 12 bunches.

Actual Size of Briquettes

Gamble Coal Briquettes Are Not An Experiment

The Days of experimenting with coal briquettes are past. Gamble Coal Briquettes, made of river coal, are a perfect substitute for high-priced Coal.

The response to our first announcement was so great that increased delivery facilities were made necessary. Hundreds of Harrisburg homes are now burning Gamble Coal Briquettes and are convinced that they can be used for every purpose for which coal is now being used and besides effect a great saving over the price of coal.

Gamble Coal Briquettes positively give greater heat—do not burn clinkers—less ashes—burn freer—fire can be started more quickly and will hold heat and fire longer than the best grades of coal.

DEPENDANTS GET COMPENSATION

Two Awards on Claims Presenting Unusual Features Made by Mackey

Dependents are awarded compensation in decisions filed late to-day by Chairman Harry A. Mackey, of the State Workmen's Compensation Board, in two claims presenting unusual features. In both there were refusals to consent to operations and removals from one hospital to another where operations took place. Death occurred in both instances.

pendent of an employe of the company. The mother refused to permit an operation which was urged and had the man removed to another hospital where an operation took place. It is held that the refusal to consent to an operation does not amount to refusal of medical or surgical aid and does not defeat right to compensation, the decision saying in one part: "There is no obligation on the part of the injured to submit himself to an operation, the result of which is so problematical that his life is at stake."

In the second case, Christian Sims, of Windber vs. The Homer City Coal and Coke Co., the deceased refused an operation and insisted upon being removed to another hospital, where a bone was transplanted. The question was whether the man died as a direct result of the original injury or because of his refusal to be operated upon at the first hospital. Mackey holds that the claimant is entitled to compensation saying that there is "no evidence to show but that the same C. Frick Coke Co., the claimants were stepfather and mother and de-

Wealthy Police Commissioner Not Sure on Ram Question

JAMES COUZENS.

Detroit, Oct. 12.—James Couzens, multi-millionaire and former associate in business of Henry Ford and now police commissioner of Detroit at a salary of $5,000, is not clear in his own mind whether the Sunday saloon and the all-night saloon constitute a crime.

"In the matter of morals, there can be no compromise," he declared, to-day. "Crime must be stamped out."

Couzens, who broke with Ford over the preparedness issue, after Ford had declared against it, succeeds John Gillette, who resigned as police commissioner. Couzens admitted that he contemplated many reforms in the police administration of Detroit.

If I Had Eczema

I'd simply wash it away with that soothing liquid, D.D.D. Prescription. The first drop instantly stops that awful itch. We cannot absolutely guarantee a cure every time but we do say this. If the first bottle does not relieve you, it will not cost you a cent. Try D.D.D. Soap too. It will keep your skin healthy.

Noted Doctor Accuses Girl of Blackmail

MRS. JOSEPH C. LE DUC

Concinnati, Oct. 12.—The arrest of Miss Margaret Gorey, a trained nurse, charged with blackmail, in the office of Dr. C. A. L. Reed, a prominent physician here, has revealed a series of attempts to obtain a confession from Miss Gorey by means of the dictaphone. One of those attempts was successful, according to the police.

In a statement, directly following the arrest, Dr. Reed said Miss Gorey had sought employment from him. She had been refused, and following repeated attempts to induce him to employ her, he said, she had threatened to begin a suit against him on a charge of immoral conduct.

Dr. Reed stated that Miss Gorey had confessed while the police were on the other end of the telephone device and were listening to the entire conversation. He said she knew the charge to be false, but that she knew he could not prove it was false.

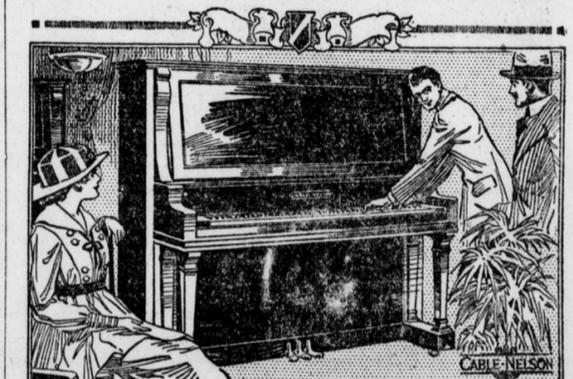

The doctor said she offered to settle for $25,000. Otherwise, he said, she demanded $25,000 in case she was forced to begin suit.

She is a relative of a prominent Newport, Ky., clergyman. Dr. Reed is a former president of the American Medical Association and a close friend of ex-President Taft.

SAVE THE GREEN TOMATOES
When frost threatens make haste to gather the green tomatoes that are left on the vines. Many of them will color and ripen and bring a larger price than when every vine is bearing heavily, says the editor of Farm and Home. There is also a good demand for green tomatoes for preserving.

Tomato vines which are well loaded with fruit should be pulled up by the roots and hung in a light warm cellar. The fruit will continue to ripen until all but the smallest have colored and it is frequently possible to pick tomatoes at Christmas from such vines.

Another method of keeping green tomatoes is to wrap each fruit separately in paper and pack them carefully in boxes. Most of the larger fruits will color up nicely, and while they have not the flavor or quality of vine-ripened tomatoes, they prove very acceptable when there is nothing better to be had. We have kept them until Thanksgiving in this way. A bushel or two of green tomatoes wrapped old newspapers will give the family a daily treat for a month or more.
