A GIRL AND A MAN

A New and Vital Romance of City Life by Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXXVIII
Copyright, 1916, Star Company.

When Agnes told her aunt good-night on the evening that Hasbrook Bainbridge's roses arrived, Miss Morley recollected something.

"Did you see the letter I put on the mantel in the sitting room?" she asked suddenly.

"What letter?" Agnes questioned.

"Oh, dear—I'm so sorry to have forgotten to mention it!" Miss Lucy apologized. "It came for you this afternoon."

"All right," Agnes said.

She put out her aunt's light and went back into the front room. She was curious to know from whom the epistle was. The letters were in the occurrence with her. She had, for a moment, a secret hope that this one might be from Philip Hale, but a glance at the envelope showed her the Spencerian handwriting of Randolph Pickens!

It seemed a strange coincidence that with this second gift of roses near her, she should receive a message from her discarded suitor. She thought swiftly of his poor little bunch of sweetpeas.

"Dear Miss Morley," Randolph wrote, "while I understand the wisdom of your kindly-expressed decision on the occasion of my last call upon you, I am now presuming to take the liberty to ask if you will be so gracious to forget the subject-matter of our last conversation and allow me to come to see you occasionally as a friend. I promise not to trespass too frequently upon your goodness if you condescend to grant my request.

"You have always been an inspiration to me. I am a lonely man, and it would cast a ray of light across my pathway could I have the honor of your friendship. Do I presume past pardon? Always faithfully your humble servant—Randolph Pickens.

"Poor chap!" Agnes half sighed, half smiled. Her own worries made her very compassionate. "Of course he may come to see me. I do not believe that he could ever again summon courage to make the mistake of talking affection to me. I am sorry for him. It was pitiful—his offering me those sweetpeas while those great flaming roses were here on the table."

Her remembrance of the incident was distinct as she answered Mr. Pickens' letter.

Certainly you may regard me as your friend," she wrote, "and if it will give you any pleasure or lessen your loneliness to come to see me sometimes, I will be glad to have you come."

"But I hope he will not come too often," she mused as she laid the letter where she would be sure to see it and take it out to be posted to-morrow morning.

Returning to the sitting room, she bent over the roses. They were very beautiful, yet her heart beat no faster as she thought who had sent them. But she could not forget that Mr. Bainbridge was very kind to her, and that, just now, for him, her life would be colorless.

With this reflection uppermost, she went downtown the following day. She had been in the office for a half hour before Mr. Bainbridge entered.

"Good morning!" he greeted her cheerily. "And how is your aunt today? Better, I hope."

"She had a very comfortable night," the girl said, then added hastily, "I hope to thank you, Mr. Bainbridge, for the roses you sent me. They are wonderful. And so were the first you sent. I did not suspect—with a little laugh of embarrassment—that those others were from you, or I would have thanked you for them."

"Ah? Who did you suppose sent them?" he queried teasingly.

She flushed as she remembered that she had actually fancied they had come from Philip Hale.

"I—I do not know—I had no way of knowing," she stammered.

"There was no card with them?"

"No," he said, "I put none into the box, for I was a bit afraid you might disapprove of my sending you even a trifling remembrance. I am glad you did not know the flowers came from me."

"Why?"

Bainbridge proposed "Because," he explained, "I saw that you had presented the fair Miss Rooney with some of them. I hope that, had you known they were from me, you would not have given any of them away. Am I very presumptuous?"

He drew nearer as if he would take her hand. She felt vaguely uncomfortable and withdrew a little.

"I don't know," she said. "Perhaps I would have done so, no matter who gave the roses."

"I hope not," he repeated softly, his eyes fixed steadily on hers. "I like to think that you would value my gifts too much to give them to another."

He gazed back at him, startled. She had never seen just that expression in his eyes before.

"You have been a very good friend to me," she said hastily.

His manner puzzled her. Should she resent it? She recollected that she had made herself ridiculous once by resenting what he had intended as no offence. He saw her embarrassment now and laughed indulgently.

"Am I worrying you, little girl?" he said. "Well, I won't then. Only—I am always ready to be your very true friend."

"Thank you," she murmured, drawing her breath more freely.

Catching her hand in his, he lifted it quickly to his lips.

"You are a dear child!" he exclaimed. Then, with a swift change of manner, he turned to his desk. "It is getting late," he said. "Are you ready to begin work?"

All at once he was the business man again—the man for whom she had been working these past days. Yes, it would have been foolish for her to act as if she were afraid of him!

A Sure Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement

CHECKS POPULAR FOR SCHOOL GIRLS

Overdressing Is Avoided When Patterns Like This One Are Used

By MAY MANTON

9171 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) Girl's Dress, 8 to 14 years.

This is a frock that will surely find welcome with the schoolgirls. It is so pretty and smart and at the same time so simple. Here, the material is a shepherd's check with trimming of soldier's blue silk and the blue on the black and white makes a very charming effect, but there are of course, many other materials adapted to such a frock. Serge is always in demand and similar light weight wools, and if something more dressy is wanted for afternoon wear, taffeta could be used. Plain taffeta trimmed with plaid or plaid taffeta trimmed with plain or with serge would be pretty, although in the latter case, the sash should be made of ribbon. The blouse is a perfectly simple and easy one to make with only the shoulder and under-arm seams and the skirt is in two pieces, gathered at the upper edge.

For the 12 year size will be needed, 7½ yards of material 27 inches wide, 4½ yards 36 or 4 yards 44, with ¾ yard 36 inches wide, for the sash and trimming.

The pattern No. 9171 is cut in sizes for girls from 8 to 14 years of age. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

CUT OUT MEATS IF KIDNEYS ARE TROUBLING YOU

Uric Acid in meat excites Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Noted Authority says we must flush Kidneys with Salts if Back hurts.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Mummers to Take Part in Hallow'en Fete

At a meeting of the Mummers' Association, at the Mayor's office last night, it was decided that the members will participate in the Hallow'en celebration this year, on Tuesday evening, October 21, the date set for another parade of the Market Square.

Members of the association will take one of the leading parts in the big fancy parade of the evening, ending with a dance in Market Square. The action of the Mummers' Association will not interfere with the plans of that organization for a big parade on New Year's Day. Plans for this celebration on January 1st were also under way.

C. Floyd Hopkins was elected president of the association last night and other officers will be elected at the next meeting of the organization, which will be called by him.

CHICKEN COMBINATIONS

Queen's Chicken
Remove the cooked meat from the bones, cut in small pieces, and serve in a sauce made as follows: Dissolve two tablespoons flour in two cups sweet milk, add two tablespoons butter. Cook until sauce thickens, then mix in one hard-boiled egg chopped fine, two tablespoons green peppers chopped fine, one teaspoon grated onion and half teaspoon salt. Five minutes before serving stir in the chicken.

Sunday Evening Feast

To three cups cold boiled rice add two tablespoons fine-cut chives, four tablespoons chopped parsley, four tablespoons green peppers cut fine, one teaspoon curry powder, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon onion juice, one teaspoon melted butter, one hard-boiled egg chopped fine, and six olives pitted and chopped. Make a nest of the rice and in it put two cups chicken meat. Set in refrigerator until wanted, and just before serving garnish top with parsley or watercress and very thin slices of lemon.

Corn With Chicken

Put one can of corn, half cup flour, one tablespoon butter, one beaten egg, half teaspoon salt and half as much pepper in a double boiler and cook, adding a little sweet milk if it seems too thick. Lastly, add two cups of chicken mibstock. When corn juice, in cold slices and fry in hot butter or cold chicken fat, if you have it. Serve white hot.

Jellied Chicken

Disjoint and wash a small chicken and boil slowly until nearly tender. Add one teaspoon salt and one chopped onion, and cook 20 minutes. Remove from fire, take out chicken, and set stock aside to cool, then skim off fat. Return to fire, add the chicken, one or two green peppers cut in thin strips after seeds are removed, and one envelope of gelatin dissolved in cold water. Heat (but do not boil), for five minutes, pour out in cold mold, and set on ice until hard.—Farm and Home.

ABOUT APPLES

Apples that are well matured will keep better than those that are picked earlier. They should be rushed into storage without delay—the day of picking, if possible.

THE SONG

He was just a street musician, and he played a simple song
In the softness of the twilight as the shadows flickered long
But a boy who hurried long him stopped to listen to his play,
And a girl whose feet had faltered found the grace to pause and pray.

Yes, the song was very simple, but the boy saw mountains green,
An ad shining, thread-like river, and a tiny, homelike scene;
Saw a farmhouse, stained by weather, and he knew the door was wide,
And he knew that love was waiting just across the sill inside;
And he murmured softly, "Mother," and his heart within him cried.

And the girl remembered dimly in the land of long ago,
How she knelt beside her window and had watched the sunset glow
Out across the golden cornfields—when her heart was free from sin,
When she had not known the city with its fever and its din—
And her tears were near the surface as she breathed, "I'll fight—and win!"

He was just a street musician, and he played a simple song;
But it echoed through the twilight as the shadows flickered long,
And it hovered o'er the city, pure and light as silver foam,
And it touched two hearts that wandered, and it told them not to roam—

He was just a street musician, and his song was "Home, Sweet Home."

WELL KNOWN

The young daughter of a prominent Western man, while on her first trip East, attended a reception at which she was presented to the President. "I am pleased to meet you, Mr. Wilson," she gurgled. "I have often heard papa speak of you."—The Christian Herald.

ONLY POWERFUL MEDICINE WILL END RHEUMATISM

It matters not whether you have had agonizing pains from rheumatism for 25 years or distressing twittings for 20 weeks. Rheuma is strong enough to drive rheumatic poisons from your body and abolish all misery or money back.

H. C. Kennedy and all druggists sell Rheuma on a no-cure-no-pay basis for not more than 50 cents a bottle, and after you take a half-teaspoonful once a day for two days you should know that at last you have obtained a remedy that will conquer rheumatism.

For over five years throughout America Rheuma has been prescribed by broad-minded physicians and has released thousands from agony, pain and despair.

SORE THROAT CAUSE

Exposure to cold seemed to be a less frequent cause of sore throat than infection. Damp clothing is not to be especially feared if it is changed before a chill takes place. Hot, unventilated rooms make an ideal breeding ground for germs. It is because cold weather drives us into our heated, stuffy houses that the impure, air-borne diseases—such as bronchitis, influenza, pneumonia, scarlet fever, chickenpox—are most prevalent in late winter and early Spring, and drop almost out of sight in July and August, when fresh air circulates through the house night and day.

It is evident then that the first step in avoiding sore throat is to ventilate thoroughly and to avoid disease germs. In spite of all we can do, we are sure to come in contact with some bacteria. If the vitality and resistance of the individual are low, these find fertile soil. Poorly oxygenated blood, flabby flesh, and faulty digestion, all increase susceptibility to infection. So build up resistance by plain, wholesome food and frequent bathing. The sponging of the throat

TREAT MANY CIVILIANS

Paris, Oct. 12.—British surgeons have treated 16,000 cases and performed 463 operations on civilian patients in the zones of their armies in France since the beginning of the war. They had not only to treat all the current ills of the region but were required to combat the epidemics that follow the war. All the inhabitants of the British zone were vaccinated against typhoid and special hospitals were created for the children. A considerable number of civilians wounded by shell fire also require their attention.
