Fire Marshal's Report Shows That Activity Was Much Hampered Last Year

Lack of laws is declared to have hampered the operation of the State Fire Marshal's department during the year 1915 by Charles D. Wolf, who is acting fire marshal during part of this year makes the annual report to Governor Brumbaugh. Mr. Wolf points out ten places where the law falls short and says that while encouraging results have been obtained in spite of the fact it is the hope that the next Legislature will enact amendments which will give the marshal power to enforce his orders.

"Thirty States have fire marshals and where their authority is not limited a gratifying reduction in fire waste and incendiarism is shown and it has paid the States for the amount expended by returns to the public in the reduction in insurance rates and the added security enjoyed," says the report. "With the adoption of amendments it would permit the Fire Marshal to inaugurate a general inspection throughout the State, compiling reports as to conditions and take means to remedy such defects as found and compel owners to remove or repair dilapidated buildings and eliminate all objectionable and fire breeding menaces in the interest of fire prevention. It is the hope that the next Legislature will give favorable consideration and the Governor approve amendments which will enable the enforcement of the law which is intended for the public benefit and then the efforts put forth will give the people the State's freedom from the many unnecessary fires caused by carelessness and laxity in care of buildings by empowering the State Fire Marshal with authority to compel compliance with all orders issued from his office.

"In the endeavor for betterment of conditions many bulletins have been issued through the assistants in cities, boroughs and townships and every effort has been made to interest them in the work which will benefit every individual and community in the State.

The department made 2,542 inspections of bad fire hazards, investigated 1,301 incendiary fires and brought 272 prosecutions.
