A GIRL AND A MAN

A New and Vital Romance of City Life by Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLII

(Copyright, 1916, Star Company)

Miss Watson, the trained nurse, had come and was comfortably established in Miss Lucy Morley's room.

Jennie O'Neill had gone home for the night. The few dinner dishes had been washed and put away.

Dr. Martin had looked in just after dinner to see how his patient was progressing and to give some orders to the nurse.

When he had gone Agnes had come into the little living room, sitting down by the window, thought long and deeply of what lay before her.

Not only was there the numerous incidentals to a serious illness, such as medicines, certain articles of food, etc., to be paid for during the next few weeks, but there was a trained nurse for, perhaps, a month to come, a consultation with some specialist, not to mention the fact that Miss Watson was another person to be fed.

To one in comfortable circumstances this last item might seem too trifling to be considered. To one whose income is small, each additional person in the household is a perceptible drain upon one's resources.

What did other people do she wondered, when illness assailed them?

The answer came to her at once. They went to the hospital. But with the answer came the remembrance of the anguished appeal in Miss Lucy's eyes only a few hours ago, when, seizing Agnes by the hand, she had made her promise, that, no matter how ill she was, she might "stay in her own home."

"I cannot stand a hospital!" the ill woman had gasped. "I cannot!" "There, there, dear! Agnes had soothed. "You shall stay right here. And she must stay right here. But—where was the money to come from? The door bell rang softly—as if the person pushing the button downstairs were fearful of awakening the sick woman. Agnes hastened to the kitchen to turn the switch that opened the front door.

She caught her breath in surprise, when opening the door of the apartment, she came face to face with Hasbrook Bainbridge. He panting from the upward climb of many stairs, but he held out his hand to her with a genial smile.

"A Great Surprise" "I know you are astonished," he said in a low tone, as one speaks in the house of illness, "but I could not sleep until I knew how your aunt is—your anxiety is any less. It hurt me to think of you as worried and lonely, with nobody to help you."

"But I have someone to help me," she began, then added, "won't you come in? We can talk better in the living room."

She led the way stooping to light a gas-jet over the center table. As the flame flared up he interposed. "Turn that lower," he advised. "It's a warm night and the gas makes the room hot."

She did as she was bid, turning the light down as it had been turned last night when Randolph Pickens and she had talked here.

"You are very kind," she replied shyly, "to take all this trouble." "Nonsense!" he exclaimed. "I came because I wanted to—and because I want to know what I can do for you."

"Nothing," she said. "I can hardly credit that," he smiled. "Yes I will sit down and so must you—for you are tired. Then I want you to tell me the truth."

He drew a chair up near the window for her, and pushed a footstool under her feet. Then he seated himself in front of her.

"Now," he said, "I am going to exercise the prerogatives of a friend and demand that you answer all the questions I put to you. Are you ready?"

ONE-PIECE FROCK IN NEWEST STYLE

The Cut Shows Latest Development of Design So Popular This Season

9190 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) One-Piece Dress for Misses and Small Women, 16 and 18 years.

This is one of the newest and smartest of the one-piece frocks. At the front, it is cut all in one giving long unbroken lines, but at the sides and back the skirt is joined to the bodice and to effect that joining, the skirt is lapped over the bodice and is finished with a band. The result is a most attractive and a novel one, and the bands of trimming accentuate it. Here, that trimming is champagne colored broadcloth while the gabardine is chestnut brown in color, but this is a frock that can be made of any suitable wool material or of silk, and silk would be pretty trimmed with broadcloth or with velvet, or the material itself could be used embroidered with some little design and perhaps edged with bands of fur.

For the 16 year size will be needed, 6 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide, 5 1/2 yards 44 or 54, with 1/2 yard 50 inches wide for the trimming.

The pattern No. 9190 is cut in sizes for 16 and 18 years. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

Miss Fairfax Answers Queries

DON'T DO THIS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am 18, and have just finished high school. I don't live with my parents. I have worked my way through the four years of high school, and have saved a little money besides, but have been advised by several of my teachers that it would be folly to attempt to work my way through college without a little help.

Now, a girl of 20, who makes over $25 a week, is in love with me. She has promised to support me through college, provided I marry her when I graduate.

This girl is not all pretty, and I do not love her, but I promised to marry her part of the agreement I would hold mine.

Now, Miss Fairfax, since I was a child of six it has been my main ambition to go through college, but I was suddenly thrown upon my own resources when I graduated from public school. I determined to work myself through high school, but gave up all hope of ever going to college.

BENJAMIN J. W.

GRATEFUL FOR THE SHADE The midsummer heat of the Kachil Plain, Beluchistan, is so great that an official recently wrote: "The sun beats fiercely even above the masses; I have met tribesmen, and in their praises of the telegraph service along the Nushki trade route; it was not the speedy dispatch of messages that appealed to them; that they have found at times an unmitigated nuisance, the grateful shade shed by the telegraph poles all along the road."

going about with a young man of twenty-three for a number of years.

He told me he cared for me, but could not think of marriage on account of his parents, he being their only support. I have not heard from him for a year. I haven't really found anyone else I care for. By writing to him I could not get a sufficiently clear answer. Would it be proper for me to go to the city, where he is at present, to the Y. W. C. A. and try to interview him? I want it to come to some final point, because I have had chances and have refused on account of him.

I've heard from friends that he still cares for me and in my heart I believe he does. IRENE.

Since this young man has not communicated with you for a year, if fancy he is not considering marriage. And if you follow him to the town where he is working and demand a statement of his intentions you will put yourself in a position where the world will be likely to criticize you and where he will lose all respect for you. There would be no particular harm in your writing to him if you are not too proud to humble yourself a little by seeking him out. But I think the wisest thing you could do would be to resign yourself to the fact that he cannot have any active part in your life.

TRY TO HELP HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am nineteen and have been going around with a man of twenty-two for three years. I love him and I am sure my love is reciprocated, but the thought that he is a mere working man and at the present time has no position makes me feel at times that I do not care for him. Sometimes I tell him not to call, but later, I have to write to him to call again. If I would not do this I know that I would not enjoy life unless he is with me, as I am heartbroken during the time he is away.

On the other hand, he is a very good man in every respect, but somehow cannot obtain a position and is at a loss what to do with himself.

Kindly advise me what I should do. READER.

If you really love this young man you can give him the encouragement of your faith and belief in him, and the incentive of having you to work for so that he may forge on toward success? Possibly the knowledge that you look down on him and consider him a failure discourages him and acts as a handicap. Either try to act as an inspiration or take yourself out of his life, for if you torment him by being present and yet unattainable you will probably keep him from attaining an honest, well-directed effort such as can not fail to lead to success.

PERCHES ON POLE TO WORRY

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—To brood undisturbed over domestic complications, Theodore York mounted the top of a telegraph pole. He was found clinging to the pole by Policeman Sack. "I'm dependent," said York, sadly; "I was married three days ago. I brought home my first week's salary Saturday. My wife paid $5 for a bottle of perfume and $6 for a pair of stockings. Then she left me, saying she could not possibly exist on my wages, $20. I wanted to be alone. I thought I could worry at the top of the pole without being wounded."

ON 63D BIRTHDAY HE TAKES HIS FIRST SMOKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 23.—After 63 years of abstinence from tobacco, W. M. Roberts, jury clerk of Wyandotte county, has been led to smoking through politics. This morning Roberts, who is celebrating his 63d birthday, smoked his first cigar.

"Politicians have thrust so many cigars at me the last few days," he explained, "that in order to be thrifty I feel that I must use some of them."

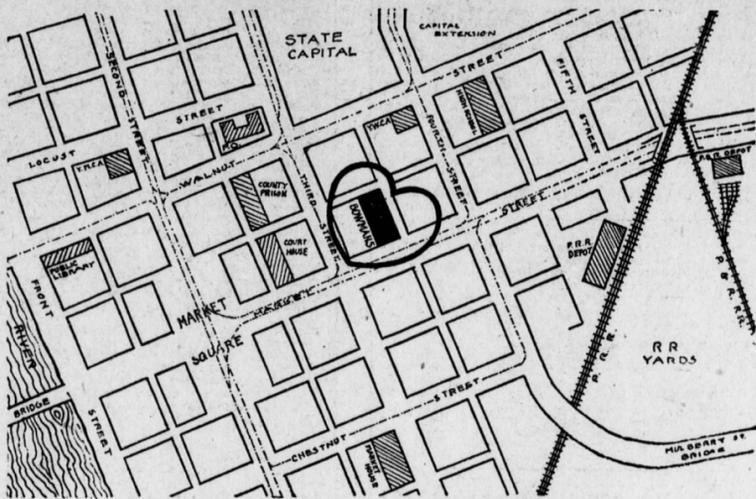

ACCORDING TO FORMULA A tramp, says the Christian Herald, knocked at a kitchen door and said: "Please, kind lady, I'm a sick man. The doctor gimme this medicine, but I need something to take it with." The lady was ready to help. "Poor fellow!" she said, "do you want a spoon

WOMEN SEEKING BAKER'S HEAD

Demand War Secretary Resign For Slur on Men of 1776

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—A demand for the "immediate resignation" of Newton D. Baker as Secretary of War and for the "repudiation" of Mr. Wilson of Mr. Baker's comparison of the men who fought in the American Revolution with the "bandits" of Mexico of to-day, was made here in a resolution signed by officers of eleven women's patriotic societies with headquarters in the District of Columbia.

The societies represented by their officers are: National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Society of the Children of the American Revolution, Woman's Relief Corps, Dames of the Loyal Legion, Clara Barton National Memorial Association, Ladies' Union Veteran Legion, Legion of American Women, United States Daughters of 1812, Daughters of the Founders and Patriots, Society of the Army of the Tennessee, National Lineal Society of the Spanish War.

Copies of the resolution are being forwarded, it is said, to every patriotic society in the United States. The resolution adds to the demand that President Wilson repudiate this comparison the statement that "we call upon every loyal and patriotic man and woman in America to repudiate this odious comparison and unjust and untrue attack upon our forefathers, the founders of the Republic and the Declaration of Independence."

Secretary Baker made his comparison of the soldiers of 1776 with the Mexican soldiers of to-day in a political speech in Chicago on October 16. The resolution of the officers of patriotic societies quotes three paragraphs from his speech, one of which reads as follows: "Washington's soldiers in the march to Valley Forge stole everything they could lay their hands on. They stole the silver vessels of the churches and melted them up to buy drinks; they drove ministers of the gospel and preachers of churches out of their churches and out of the country. Whenever you hear somebody say they can't understand the President's Mexican policies, tell them to read the Declaration of Independence and the Golden Rule."

Rising their action upon these words, the officers of the patriotic societies attacked Mr. Baker in vitriolic language. His words are called "libelous and false statements" likely to have a most pernicious influence on the ideals of the youths of the country, and Mr. Baker is referred to as not a fit head for the army of the United States of America.
