ORPHEUM -- To-night -- The Yale Dramatic Association.

Saturday, matinee and night, December 30 -- Philadelphia Grand Opera Co. -- Matinee, The Barber of Seville; Monday (New Year's), matinee and night -- Gus Hill offers "Hans and Fritz."

Tuesday, evening only, January 2 -- John Drew in "Major Pendennis."

There is no doubt that William H. Rosenbach, managing director of the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company, is a baritone of the highest type. There are few, if any, mezzo sopranos superior to Margaret Jarman in the dramatic role of "Azucena." For a long time the tenor, has come into instant popularity and his splendid voice has been given full praise.

Not a dull minute or a dreary moment fully explains "Mother Goose" at Majestic.

William S. Hart, one of the most admired actors on the motion picture screen, and the world's greatest portrayer of the colonial characters, will be seen at the Colonial Theater in "The Devil's Double."

R. Dirks' brain children have come to life; the originator of "The Katzenjammer Kids" has arranged with Gus Hill to have "Hans and Fritz" staged.

R. William Church, the sweet tenor soloist with the Al. G. Field Minstrels, has developed an imitation of the Hawaiian ukulele that is one of the hits of the first part of his season.

Al. G. Field Minstrels The local entertainment for the season, Church spent the summer in the city of Honolulu, and while there studied the sounds of the peculiar instrument. He is able to reproduce the music with his voice, and Al. G. Field, as soon as he heard it incorporated it into the performance.

THE BRILLIANT JAPANESE ACTOR, SESSUE HAYAKAWA, supported by Myrtle Stedman, will be shown at the Regent.
