COMES BACK WITH SEVERAL MILLIONS
Jesse Livermore, Who Went Broke, Tells How He Got New Start

New York, an. 19.—Jesse L. Livermore has come back. Nine years ago Livermore "cornered" the New York cotton market. He amassed a fortune of several millions, and the papers teemed with stories of his palatial country estate, his $300,000 steam yacht and his wife's million-dollar jewels.

Then came the crash and two years ago this Wall Street plunger went into bankruptcy. When the proceedings were over his liabilities amounted to $1,108,000, according to report, while Livermore himself to-day said the figure was $2,000,000.

How He Came Back
To-day in the office of Harriman & Company, at 111 Broadway, Livermore told a reporter how he "came back" and gave his views on the stock market.

According to his own statement, Livermore is a philosopher and a psychologist. He has ceased to be a gambler in the market, but is what he terms a "business speculator." He refused to say whether the rumor that he had recently made $3,500,000 was technically true or not, but he did say:

"I must have made a very large amount, for I have paid in full for my mistakes of the past, and they cost me $2,000,000. I went into bankruptcy to get a chance to get on my feet again. If I had not done so, I would have to have made a million a day to have gotten anywhere. So, when I finally came back I paid all my creditors in full, although I was not legally liable for the debts, as I had been discharged from bankruptcy."

"I did not make this new fortune as I made my former one. It was not a case of gambling all on one turn. I made this fortune on several issues—cotton, grain and 'war brides'."

"This Wall Street game is a psychological one. The first requisite to success is confidence in one's self. I never lost my nerve."

"Usually a man buys and then, when the stocks go up a few points, he is fearful that it will go down again and he will lose the little he has made. That is the wrong time to fear. He should know that the very fact that the stock has gone up proves he is right and he should hold on. But he sells through fear."

Newspapers $1.50 Each Now in Mexico City
Washington, Jan. 19.—Newspapers in Mexico City are selling for $1.50 each, Mexican money, according to advice received at the State Department. The Mexican peso, worth normally 10 cents in American currency, has dropped to one cent United States money.

TOKYO'S PROLIFIC SLUMS
No tourist crosses the Sumida river, unless it is to visit the great amphitheater for a wrestling bout or a chrysanthemum show; yet there is where the real secret of Tokyo's future lies. It is the factory and slum section of the city, and the population there has increased in the last decade ten times as fast as has the population in the district of Kojimachi, which surrounds the palace, and the visitor to Tokyo, seeing the streets crowded with people, does not realize that in the suburbs the growth in population has run from 250 to 500 per cent in the last decade.—Maynard Owen Williams, in the Christian Herald.
