REVIEW OF MAJESTIC BILL

All Around Good Bill Specializing in Comedy and Song For Last Three Days

The bill at the Majestic for the last half of the week opens with a novel musical number by Monsieur Herbert, who, from a setting of a restaurant table supplied with food, brings forth all kinds of music. Keefe, Langston and White sing and spring a bit of nonsense, most of which takes the form of pantomime, but the singing is the best thing they do, and they do it well. Kelson and Leighton present a variety skit, "Here and There in Vaudeville," which is just what the name implies, and brings forth some rather clever bits. Crawford and Broderick are a bit boring at first, but warm up to their act after a short time until the close. Their specialties are wit and dancing—singing is a bit less. But their words appear in its present form. The songs are tuneful, and the various actors are good, but the lyrics written in rhyme become a bit sing-songy, which makes them appear somewhat ridiculous. With a bit more punch in the tunes, the act would be improved. The type is one that should take generally, and the company can interpret the act to much better advantage.

MAX ROBERTSON.

ORPHEUM — All week, with daily matinees — "A Daughter of the Gods." Monday, January 29 — "The Little Cafe." Tuesday, January 30 — "Mother Love." MAJESTIC — Vaudeville. COLONIAL — "The Female of the Species." REGENT — "The Martyrdom of Philip Strong." VICTORIA — "My Official Wife."

A great many people who read of the making of "A Daughter of the Gods," which is at the Orpheum all this week, with daily matinees, in and about Southern waters, and the climate and mermaid costumes linked together in mind and thought, it would be done the way through. William Fox, however, was anxiously aware of the truth and somewhat over the matter of the importance of clothes. He knew that he was preparing for the screen the most elegant and beautiful ever seen, and that every detail of his historical and mythological dress, from sole to crown, would be faithfully portrayed. In order to expedite this colossal dressmaking venture, he sent Mrs. Irene Lee, the mother of the baby mermaids—with plans and specifications and six New York assistants as overseers, to organize the seamstresses of Jamaica into one great sewing circle. All available sewing machines on the island were brought to the factory, and the machine workers there was a veritable army of handstitchers, sewing under the shade of trees.

The charm and attractiveness of "The Little Cafe," which is said to be the last word in musical comedy, is the fact that the vast majority of amusement seekers still delight in this style of entertainment, provided the ingredients which go to make it up are intelligently put forth, as they have been by C. M. S. McLehlan and Ivan Arty, the librettist and composer.

As a play, "One Girl's Experience" is acclaimed. It is said by the theatergoers as a tremendous success. "One Girl's Experience" — One of the striking features of this gripping story of a girl who works for a living in New York City is in the second act, where "Lucy" for her honor sake struggles with the son of her wealthy employer. The son turns out to be the brother of this good and beautiful girl in later developments. Nearly crazed by the revelation, the young man is later converted into a good and useful citizen, but the girl—well, the company comes to the Orpheum Wednesday, matinee and night.

At the Orpheum Mrs. Fiske and her supporting company will be presented for the second time in Harrisburg on Saturday, matinee Fiske and night February 3, in "Erstwhile Susan," which had a run of six months in New York last season. Mrs. Fiske appears in the

(Helps to Beauty)
Science has aided in simplifying the banishing of hairy growth from the face, and according to a beauty specialist, the most effective treatment yet devised consists of applying a delicate paste to hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. When this paste is removed and the skin washed every trace of hair has vanished. Be sure to get real delatone.
