SECOND MURDER CASE ON TRIAL

James Anthony, Accused of Killing Michael Ury, Before Carlisle Court

Carlisle, Pa., Feb. 12.—Establishing a precedent, the second murder trial for one term of Cumberland county court, will begin this week, when James Anthony, a Southern negro, will be called to answer for the alleged killing of Michael Ury, foreman for the Mason-Hanger Company at Newville. Anthony is alleged to have struck Ury with a shovel and fractured his skull.

This case is listed for this week, as are those of John Humbert, who tried to shoot Farmers' Trust Company officials when payment of a check for $50,000, made out by himself, was refused. A charge against the supervisors of West Pennsboro township, charged with maintaining a nuisance in the shape of bad roads will also come up.

The Anthony murder case follows the trial of Archie Miller and marks the first time that two cases were ever heard at the same term of court in which murder was the charge.
