CHURCH WEDDING FOR MISS BRIGHT

Attractive Harrisburg Girl Is Bride of Homer Light Spangler, of Lebanon

A pretty wedding was that which took place at 4.30 o'clock this afternoon in the Derry street United Brethren Church when Miss Helen Jane Bright became the bride of Homer Light Spangler, of Lebanon.

The church was attractively decorated with palms, ferns, snap dragon, mignonette, a profusion of spring flowers breathing an atmosphere of the new season.

STORY TELLING LEAGUE MEETING

There will be an open meeting of the local branch of the Story Telling League to-morrow evening at 7.30 o'clock in the hall of the Public Library.

Tales of the Springtime will be the general theme, with Miss Ella Yost telling "Victory" by Tagore; Miss Mary M. Snyder giving a Greek Myth, "Hyacinthus"; Miss Alice Cusack one of Mrs. Edna Grace Delih's children's stories, "Why the Robin Redbreast Sings at Easter," and an original spring story by Mrs. Anna Hamilton Wood.

Mrs. Harry G. Keffer, the club league president, went to Mechanicsburg to-day to participate in "An Evening in Story Land" before the Woman's Club of that town.

The bride wore a white crepe-de-chine gown with garnitures of pearls. Her shower bouquet was of roses and valley lilies. Miss Mabel E. Bright, a sister, and other attendants of the bride, wore a gown of pink crepe-de-chine and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Goodrich Engaged to Mary Reading Man

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Lida Keffer Goodrich, daughter of Ambrose W. Goodrich, and George J. Lerch, son of Mrs. M. F. Lerch, both prominent in Reading society.

Miss Goodrich is the granddaughter of the late Luther R. Keffer, who was a State Senator from Schuylkill county for many years and one of the leading figures of his day in Pennsylvania politics.

M'ILHENNY TELLS OF CHICAGO TRIP

No Truth in Stories of Commission From Itner, He Says

School Board officials intimated to-day that President Itner might have a statement in a day or two in reply to an interview given out last evening by George W. McIlhenney, denying rumors that he had offered to procure the one vote necessary in the School Board to make William B. Itner, of St. Louis, architect for the new High schools, providing Itner paid him one per cent. of the commission he would receive for the work.

Mr. McIlhenney said that in February, Mr. Petre, of Philadelphia, chief salesman of the American Seating Company, of Chicago, which firm Mr. McIlhenney long served as agent, and a Mr. Stewart, of Philadelphia, general agent for that corporation, visited him at his office in Harrisburg and asked him to use his influence with one or more directors to vote for Mr. Itner. They came, he said, at the direction of T. M. Boyd, president of the School Board, and is proud of the fact, but now says he is down and out and admits it.

Mr. McIlhenney frankly admits that for twenty-five years he was "boss" of the School Board, and is proud of the fact, but now says he is down and out and admits it.

"We discussed the matter for some time and these men suggested to me that I should try to get the vote of one of the directors. I told them that I did not want a commission—that a commission would not help me to support Itner, and Itner called to their attention the fact that if I had any interest at all in the question, it naturally would favor a 'look out' for the school board."

"I then sought to know whether or not I would consent to go over the question with Mr. Itner, if a meeting could be arranged for the near future in Chicago. I told them I thought it could be arranged and they left me, saying they would take the matter in Chicago."

"Along about the 14th I was told to leave the next day and that my expenses would be paid. I got into Chicago on the 15th and went to the Illinois Athletic Club, on Michigan avenue.

"On arriving at the club I was directed to room—I think it was 802—the room had been engaged for me, and there I met Mr. Petre. We chatted for ten minutes and then Mr. Petre beckoned the person to 'Come in' and a man entered. This man was introduced to me as Mr. Itner, and then withdrew from the room and I felt somewhat puzzled because I thought it was a trap set for me. I came out of the room and looked searchingly for a dictagraph but felt assured it was no trap.

"Well, the Mr. Itner and I of course immediately went into a discussion about the architect question. I took along a map of the city of Harrisburg and used it during the conversation. I pointed out the school buildings, the school population, the sites of the proposed buildings and went into some detail as to the future growth of the city.

"I told him that I had been the boss of the school board but that I was now down and out and admit it, and was in no way responsible for the action the board had taken on the architect question. He asked me about the matter and I told him I was willing and did tell him that, while I took an active interest in school affairs, I always sought to take care of the local man, and that in this instance, that I didn't care much about helping the Democrats, but that if a Republican came to me and urged me to have a contract made for a stadium, brick and other material, so that the contractor would be on the same plane as the other contractors to bid in at the school, I usually pronounced my support."

THE HILL SITE

"That didn't always mean that the local man could get the contract, but that the local man had an equal chance with the other fellow. While we were talking about the future growth of the city I mentioned something about a plot of ground on Fourteenth street.

"I said it is owned by Democrats but that I think it is the right place for a school building. I told him that, if Harrisburg buys that ground now, fifty years later the city will be eager to erect a monument to the men who bought it."

"I told him that the city can buy that site for one-third the cost of any other school building site because of the fact that it once was offered to the city for $69,000 and that Max Copelin, who made that offer, said he would return $5,000 toward a stadium at the school."

"We talked about one thing and another and then Mr. Itner suggested to me, 'If I am selected architect, can't arrangements be made to meet you—I was going to say in Harrisburg, but I will say in Philadelphia? I would be willing to insert in the specifications such material as you would like to designate.' That was agreed upon and that virtually ended our conference. He said nothing of a commission.

"He told me that he would be willing to go out and look at the Fourteenth street ground and he would recommend to the board that it be purchased.

"I was paid all my expenses, car fare, meals on the train, room at the club and everything, I understand, by Mr. Boyd, of the American Book Company. It was $52.85."

"Mr. McIlhenney said that on his return to Harrisburg he was called upon by Stewart and Petre and informed that Mr. Itner would not commission for votes. He said also that he was told that a deal of time that a meeting with him in Chicago might be misunderstood and would reflect on Itner's reputation, but he was told there was no fears of that."

acquisition of the 537 properties. This commission will be named by the Governor and will work in conjunction with the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings, which is composed of the Governor, Auditor General and State Treasurer. It will have charge of the actual work and relieve the Board of the details, turning over to the State a completed park, embracing both the present and the extension.

Provision will also be made for the exchange by the city and the State of strips of ground to enable the harmonious development of the boundaries of the park extension as far as the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The plans which the noted landscape architects will explain to the House Appropriations Committee to-morrow are those which were adopted recently and which were outlined in full in the HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH. As yet no appropriation has been asked for the work of grading and planting of red oak trees, but that will be taken up by the committee when the list of items for the public grounds is reached.

P. G. Diener "He sells Diamonds"

New Styles in Wedding Rings

The significance of the wedding ring is, of course, paramount, but the bride of to-day desires beauty as well as significance. So styles have changed in wedding rings. Young women of culture and refinement approve seamless bands of pure gold or platinum, hand-engraved in designs in keeping with the message the ring carries.

Often such a ring set with diamonds is preferred. Diener is showing the new fashions in wedding rings. It is an interesting display we invite you to examine. Prices range from $8 to $55.

Plain gold band rings, $2.50 to $12.
