

WILSON BACKED DEFENSE FOE

Word Shows Gray, Praised by President, Fought 20 Preparedness Moves

Washington, July 2.—Declaring that President Wilson's anxiety to bring about the return of a Democrat from the Sixth Indiana district to succeed the late Judge Comstock "permitted his regard for the faithful statement of facts to be thrown into the discard," Representative Wood of Indiana bitterly attacked to-day a letter written by the President. In the letter the President asserted Finley H. Gray had supported the administration during his previous service in the House.

Gray was defeated in the primaries by Judge Comstock. When the latter died Gray ran against Representative Elliott, the Republican candidate. Gray had a notable record as an anti-preparedness man, a pacifist and an off-reservation Democrat.

President Wilson wrote to a friend of Gray the following letter for campaign purposes, under date of June 19: "I am very glad indeed to reply to your letter of June 15 that the Hon. Finley H. Gray throughout his membership in the House has given the present administration the most generous and cordial support. It would afford me the greatest gratification to see him return to the House of Representatives. Cordially and sincerely yours, WOODROW WILSON."

Representative Wood outlined from the records nearly twenty votes and speeches in which Gray had opposed preparedness measures, in fact every such measure advanced by the administration during his services in the House. Recounting, he said: "Since the declaration of war with Germany, a vast majority of the members on the Republican side of this House have unfailingly stood by the administration in every step proposed by it for the increase of the army and navy and for the expenditure of vast sums of money to accomplish the same."

"In the consideration of all these great measures there has been found an entire absence of partisanship or any attempt to unfairly advance an issue on behalf of the Republicans in the House."

"Not one of these measures could have been passed had it not been for the passage upon the Democratic vote notwithstanding the fact that the Democrats have outnumbered the Republicans in this House since this session of Congress began."

"In view of all this it is almost astounding that the President should find it necessary to write the letter he did in behalf of the candidacy of Mr. Gray. Especially is this letter astounding in the light of the facts as disclosed by the Congressional Record to which I have referred. It seems passing strange that the absence of partisanship, so marked in the House at present, cannot be emulated by the President of the United States."

LANE MAY QUIT WILSON CABINET

Political Drive Seen in Attack by Secretaries Baker and Daniels

Washington, July 2.—A political drive to force Secretary Lane out of the Cabinet and to arouse public distrust of the nation's men of business who have offered their services in mobilizing the industries. That is the judgment passed by friends of the Secretary of the Interior on Secretary of War Baker's letter to Director Gifford, of the Council of National Defense, which denounced the tentative scale of prices agreed on between the coal committee of the council and the coal operators last week.

It can be stated with certainty that Mr. Baker's letter and the accompanying announcement by Secretary Daniels that he was "going to get the cost" came as a complete surprise to the coal committee of the council and the coal operators last week.

On behalf of Secretary Lane and the Peabody Coal-Production Committee of the Council of National Defense, it is stated that Lane had been made by them to fix a price for coal which should apply to legal or binding until Congress should empower some person or board other than the president to fix a legal price. They had not departed one iota, it is stated, from the proper function of the Council of National Defense and its advisory commission to determine such measures as may be practicable to stimulate production for the national emergency, and the question of price is bound up in the larger problem of establishing greater output and quicker distribution.

The price of $3 a ton for bituminous coal at the mines might or might not be the price ultimately fixed, but meanwhile as a provisional price below the market standard it was offered to the departments because the factor of time and increased output are of overwhelming importance to the speedy conduct of the war.

It is freely predicted that an issue is raised in the attack of the Secretaries of War and Navy on the action of Secretary Lane and his advisory production committee that must result in Mr. Lane's asking the President either to vindicate his course or to resign. The committee's action in this prediction is the assertion that the attack is actuated by jealousy toward a Cabinet member whose administrative services have been used by President Wilson and who has been especially strong in the public estimation throughout the country.

I THANK SANPAN

Says Mrs. S. B. Shiley, 340 High St., Middletown, Pa.

"I surely was miserable, it was an effort for me to do my housework. I had everything was an effort and a burden. My liver had bothered me for a long time, then too, I was troubled with indigestion which seemed to rob me of my strength and ambition. It caused intense pains in my stomach, back and under my shoulder blades. I was very nervous, could not sleep soundly, had no appetite, and what little food I did eat, did me no good, in fact it made me feel miserable, so that I dreaded the next meal."

"I was feverish at times, then again I had a creepy feeling. I took treatment extensively, but nothing gave me any relief. Finally a friend recommended Sanpan, and I decided to give it a trial. This has proven a very wise move on my part. I now feel fine, that bloated condition has gone, I am not bothered any more with pains in my stomach or back, can eat everything, and enjoy it. I thank Sanpan for restoring me to health, and recommend this wonderful medicine to all who are ailing."

Sanpan is now being introduced at Keller's Drug Store, 405 Market street, Harrisburg, where the Sanpan man is explaining it to the people.—Adv.

Life's Problems Are Discussed

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

Once on a long railway journey across the continent I fell into conversation with a middle-aged traveling salesman, who proved to have interesting views on many subjects, and who showed himself to be a shrewd observer of men and things.

I told him that I envied him his opportunities of studying human nature. "One has to be up in psychology, that's true," he replied, "if one wishes to be a good salesman, and the shrewdness of a good accountant. In one sense, all the world's a territory, and all the men and women merely drummers. Everybody has his or her best 'line,' and is doing his or her best to make the 'trade' think it's a little better at the price than the goods their competitors are offering."

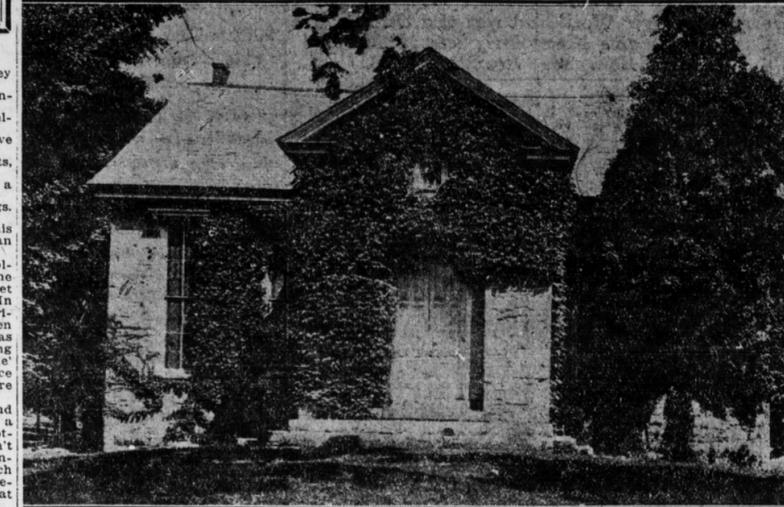

"I'm trying it in my way, and you in yours, and my wife, who is a little home-body, is attempting it in hers. 'In her trade,' don't you see, and her job in life is to convince me that I can't find as much solid comfort, enjoyment and amusement anywhere on earth as in that little, old home of ours back East."

"Some 'Emma McChesney' she is at it, too," he proudly opened his watch case to show me a photograph of a pretty woman holding a chubby baby. "It would take a mighty strong argument to make me board other than the standard of coffee and buckwheat cakes. 'With other women,' he continued, 'the 'trade' they are after is position, or admiration, or a cause, or a job for their 'line'—whether it be beauty, or intellect, or experience, or capability for all they are capable of. And men are just the same. From the man with a Presidential bee in his bonnet to the peddler with his pocket in a word, they're all trying to put it over that ours is the only genuine and undiluted sure-fire stuff and that all other make are rank and rotten and not worth buying at any price. Believe me, there's many a good drummer under the frock coats of our statesmen, and a lot more among those who never lifted a sample case and wouldn't know an order slip if they were introduced to it."

"I can understand that," I finally got a chance to say in a word, "I made the most of it. 'It's the same principle that makes a child indifferent to his wholesome bread and butter, while he centers his soul upon cake. One represents to him the humdrum monotony of everyday existence, while the other stands for luxury and indulgence. 'And that's what the side line represents to the traveling salesman, isn't it? He goes to town to his income which permits him to enjoy certain extravagant tastes and fancies? No very subtle psychology about the matter. Even a baby will reach for the 'side line' if he is given a chance. 'I suppose you are right,' he agreed. 'The side line is where the heart is. I'll wager that if you loathe the side line, you will almost invariably find that it is carried as a side line.'"

"And that's the matter over in my mind for a few minutes, and then admitted that, so far at least as my experience went, his assumption was correct. "Isn't it very largely true? The reporter as he plods on his rounds is always dreaming of his play or novel he has on the stocks. The actor, as he moves through his part, is dreaming of his farm and calculating the price of hay. The broker, as he watches the ticker, is calculating the chances of the theatrical venture he is backing. The lawyer is considering his game of golf. "Nor is it always for pecuniary reasons that the side line is so energetically pushed. More often than not it is at a distinct sacrifice of both money and comfort. Take the sportsman. Sir Thomas Lipton is a fair example. He has made the recapture of the America's cup his side line, and to that one object has devoted years of study and planning, and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The political boss is usually regarded as one who is working for his own pocket all the time, and where this is true, it will be found that he is generally less interested in politics than in a racing stable, or in breaking into society, or some other line. But there are quantities of men with political interests in this country which impoverish rather than enrich them, and whose only reward is abuse, loss of business and the excitement of the game. "And so it goes. Men and women will labor unthankingly and unrewardingly along some cause or to advance the success of some association, club or organization with which they are connected. "But there's a reason, an instinctive one. Our fads are our safety valves. In amusing ourselves with them we are blindly but surely obeying the first law of life, self-preservation. A lot of the nervous breakdowns are due to prolonged concentration on one's work. The side lines are very often life lines. The people who never take their minds off their daily task, who live with it and eat with it and sleep it, are the ones who snap under the strain. "We Americans know far too little of the art of relaxation. And by relaxation I don't mean lolling about in rocking chairs or throwing one's self determinedly upon a couch with the desperate intention of relaxing one's mind and body even if one has to die doing it. True relaxation comes in stages. You first give your mind time and thought and attention to your job while you're doing it, and then, knowing you have done the best you could, you shed all considerations of it from your mind and play just as wholeheartedly. "People say they can't do it. But they can, if they'll honestly give their minds to it. It's purely a matter of training. "An old man told me on one occasion that the bicycle craze spread not only his reason, but his business also. He said that a crisis in his affairs was facing him and it was necessary for him to make two or three momentous decisions. He stood between the devil and the deep sea. Finally he became convinced that whichever way he decided would be the wrong way, and with the immediate necessity for some move before him, he found it impossible to act.

Historic Old Church Is Given Silk American Flag

The congregation of old Silver Springs Church, in Cumberland county, was presented with a handsome silk American flag yesterday at the morning services, by Miss Anne McCormick. The presentation was made to the church, the Rev. Thomas J. Ferguson, by the Daughters of the American Revolution and the American Legion, and the service was attended by nearly three hundred people, members and friends of the church. The Silver Springs Church was erected in 1783, and in its churchyard, guarded by a beautiful memorial gateway, erected several years ago by the Daughters of the American Revolution and Daughters of 1812, are buried thirty soldiers of the Revolution and two of the War of 1812.

WANTS TO LEARN THINGS; IN JAIL

Lebanon Girl Who Went to Johnstown With Harrisburg Man Arrested

In the Johnstown prison is a young woman, rather well dressed and attractive, who fled from here with D. A. Wonders, and doesn't want her father and mother in Lebanon to know of her predicament. But Mayor Franke, of Johnstown, has informed her that her father will be notified and that he will be asked to get her. Marie O'Leary said that she left home about three weeks ago, and came to Harrisburg, where she met D. A. Wonders and the came to this city. Both were arrested on charges of suspicion. Marie said that she was twenty years old, and she knew Wonders was married, but that he had told her he did not live with his wife. Her parents knew she was not married, but did not know her predicament. "I have fine parents," said Marie, "and I want to go back home. 'You've had your experience, have you?' inquired Mayor Franke. 'Yes,' replied Marie, smiling. 'That's the only way you can find out anything; to go out into the world.'"

U. S. TO BUILD BIG NAVY BASE

Warships and Airplanes to Be Stationed at Jamestown

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Plans for the utilization of the Jamestown exposition site, outlined to-day by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, embrace the following: A training station for 10,000 men. Submarine base. Aviation operating base for a double coastal unit. Oil fuel storage for fuel oil, gas, gasoline and lubricating oil for fleet use, with piers fitted for discharging cargo for fueling battleships, destroyers, submarines and barges. Fleet storehouses to accommodate all fleet stores ready for delivery, avoiding the expense and unnecessary rehandling of fleet stores in and out of the navy yard and yard storehouses and delay in the delivery of such stores to the fleet. Mine and net storehouses, where piers, cars, tracks and men will be available for handling this bulky material. Torpedo storehouses for reserve torpedoes. Medical storehouse capable of storing enough equipment and stores to equip an advance hospital, at least one hospital transport and store reserve supplies for the fleet and hospital ships. The acquisition of this property makes possible the development of Hampton Roads, the normal anchorage of the North Atlantic fleet, of one of the greatest naval bases in the world, said Secretary Daniels. "This is something we have needed for many years, and ours is the only big base which does not possess such a base."

American Gun Crew Saves Liner From U-Boat Attack

London, July 2.—The gun crew of an American liner fired upon two German submarines during her voyage from the United States to England. Both targets were at a considerable range, but the report to Washington of the commanding officer will express the belief that one periscope was shattered. A third submarine was sighted, but at a great distance, and it submerged immediately. The passengers expressed the greatest admiration for the marksmanship of the American gunners as shown both in practice and against the enemy. One member of the crew of the liner was formerly a gunner in the British navy, and he won applause from the American gunners by making a bullseye hit on a barrel target during the practice. On one occasion the Americans made seven bullseyes out of eight tries.

FLIES IN FRANCE

Philadelphia, July 2.—Major Robert E. Glendinning, banker and birdman and one of the pioneers of aviation in this vicinity, is flying for Uncle Sam somewhere in France. Without the least fuss or feathers he left this country recently on an important mission abroad and has been on a period of intensive training at the western battle front. His tutors were those who have been successful in fighting the Hun in aerial combats which have embellished the war history with picturesque individual feats.

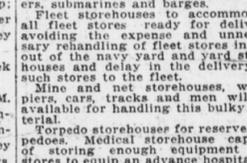

25 LOST ON PASSENGER SHIP

Paris, July 2.—The French steamship "Paris" left New York for Bordeaux on July 1, with 204 passengers and crew, but was sunk as the result of an explosion in the Mediterranean. One hundred and seventy-six persons were saved.

WHY WOMEN TALK

Men and women who find their offices all day and have a chance to talk. The women have to stay at home, and the men have to go to work. The woman next door, there is nobody to talk to. That is why why wife talks her husband's ear off when he comes home at night. Husbands, who through years of experience, have grown accustomed to this merely answer "huh-huh" without hearing. Sometimes the wife will catch them unawares and between remarks will insert a request for ten dollars to buy a new dress with. If the husband, from a force of habit answers "huh-huh" the wife, of course, gets the gown.—Zini in Cartoons Magazine.

SECRETARY OF NAVY AND SON IN MARINE CORPS

Josephus Daniels, Jr., has joined the marine corps, and is anxious to fight in France. He was so determined to get in that he convinced the authorities a slight defect in his eye sight would not handicap him.

MINISTERS URGE FOOD SAVING

Plead With Members of Congregation to Join in Some Form of Patriotic Work

Patriotic services were observed in practically every church in the city, many of the ministers preaching special sermons on food conservation and loyalty to the government, while others arranged appropriate musical programs. Prayers were offered in Sunday schools and churches for the early termination of the war, pastors urged their congregations to enlist in some form of patriotic service, and teachers of Sunday school classes were urged to join Red Cross organizations.

In all Presbyterian churches in response to a request of the general assembly, special services were held in addition to the observance of "Patriotic Sunday."

At Pine Street Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. Lewis S. Mudge spoke on "The New Declaration of Independence," at the evening service. In the sermon he said a new declaration of independence was needed to-day—a declaration against waste and selfishness. Dr. Mudge then pointed to the evils resulting from the war, such as the kitchen, but in the mine, workshop and all other branches of industry. In response to the request of President Wilson and Herbert C. Hoover, food administrator, many of the other sermons were injunctions against all needless waste.

The Rev. Dr. George Edward Haves, pastor of the Market Square Presbyterian Church, made a formal address on "The National Bulwark" from the text, Isaiah 26, 1: "Salvation will God appoint for bulwarks." The choir led the patriotic march, and everyone sang "The Star Spangled Banner," "America" and "God Bless Our Native Land." Ralph Kinsey's new arrangement of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung by the choir. Attorney H. B. Sausman read President Wilson's letter to the churches on Patriotic Sunday and the impressive services closed with the benediction.

TACT HAS GROWN THIN

Even since the war, and especially since the famous peace-message leak last winter, there has been a fear among the high officials of the government that some one is going to get into their departments and steal everything in sight. As a result, it is almost impossible to break his way into the state, war and navy buildings, unless perchance he happens to be a personal friend of Josephus Daniels or the secretary of the War Department. The other day a rather large man drifted up to the main entrance of the building and with a smile on his face and a note in one or two persons standing about started to go into the sacred precincts. "A burly policeman stopped him with a 'Hey, what do you mean going in there? Have you got a pass?' 'Why I mean no harm,' replied the big man, still smiling, 'Do I need a pass?' 'You do,' replied the officer, and then pointing to another man added: 'Go over there and tell that fellow your name and what you want.' 'Won't it do just as well for me to tell you? I'm W. H. Taft, former secretary of war, later president of the United States, and now a professor at Yale.' The officer looked at him a minute, decided to pass him, and then, turning to another guard, asked: 'Was that brilliant success for the President to let that guy around here before?' BIG RALLY AT HISTORIC CHURCH

Enthusiastic Patriotic Service Is Held at Old Paxton Church

Historic old Paxton Church had an enthusiastic celebration of Patriotic Sunday last evening at 6.30 o'clock with services held in the grove conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Harry B. King. Two hundred people attended, among them the Paxton Home Guard, which marched up to the service for mth village, forty strong, with ags flying and the drum beating. In the guards are five Civil War veterans and one of the Spanish-American War.

It was inspiring to hold this service on the spot known and loved by so many brave men and women of the American Revolution, some of whom lie sleeping in the little churchyard nearby. The Rev. Dr. George Edward Haves, pastor of the Market Square Presbyterian Church, made a formal address on "The National Bulwark" from the text, Isaiah 26, 1: "Salvation will God appoint for bulwarks." The choir led the patriotic march, and everyone sang "The Star Spangled Banner," "America" and "God Bless Our Native Land." Ralph Kinsey's new arrangement of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung by the choir. Attorney H. B. Sausman read President Wilson's letter to the churches on Patriotic Sunday and the impressive services closed with the benediction.

The Rev. Mr. Asbury pointed out to his hearers how important it was that every possible mouthful of food be saved and that economy should be practiced in every respect. He preached a brilliant sermon for the American arms if everyone co-operated in following the wishes of the government.
