PARASITE TO WAR ON HESSIAN FLY

Experiments Made by Chief of United States Bureau of Entomology at Carlisle

Carlisle, Pa., July 6.—That the Hessian fly may soon be removed as a menace to the grain fields of the country seems probable, following extensive investigation and experiments by the research department of the United States Bureau of Entomology, located here. A new parasite to war on the fly has been evolved by this department under the direction of W. A. McConnell, its chief.

When these experiments were first begun, Mr. McConnell states, but two kinds of parasites were known to combat the ravages of the fly, but now twenty varieties have been developed, and as soon as a few final tests are completed, it is expected that the new parasite will be distributed in certain localities where the trouble from the grain pest is most keenly felt.

Other experiments along similar lines are being conducted by this department which recently brought to Carlisle through the Chamber of Commerce. Extensive and complete laboratories have been fitted up here and a corps of trained assistants will re-enforce Mr. McConnell during the summer and will remain here.

This division has charge of a number of States, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, New York, West Virginia, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Ohio and Maryland.

THE ROADSIDE MARKETS OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA Any ranchman of southern California who chances to dwell along one of the main arteries of vehicular traffic may be sure to find the roadside market business with but little effort and almost no investment. The mechanics of the roadside market are seldom more elaborate than some form of roof to offer protection from the sun, a few racks for displaying the products, and a wheelbarrow, pushcart, or other conveyance for carrying the stock into the market from the ranch in the background on which it is produced.

Sunday, when the highways are thronged with thousands of motor cars, and the motoring population of the larger cities seek the open country, is the harvest day for the roadside markets. The advent of the institution has also developed the southern California Sunday into the market day of many motorists who seek to combine their Sunday's outing with the opportunity to purchase their next week's supply of fresh foodstuffs at prices representing a considerable saving over city-market prices.

The ranchmen have learned that it is easier and essentially more profitable for them to dispose of their produce, or even a portion of it, at their very gates than to be put to the expense of hauling to the city markets and then accepting a narrower margin of profit. Simultaneously the motoring public has learned that it is more logical to secure fresh produce which has come from the tree or garden on the day it is purchased at minimum prices, than to buy from the city markets produce which may have been in stock several days and to the expense of the warehouse multitude of middlemen's profits must necessarily be added.—By John Edwin Hogg, in the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

How the War Can Be Won From the Skies

Tremendous plans are now being formed to deliver a crippling blow at Germany's military efficiency, not only "putting her eyes," but spreading havoc by aerial armadas numbered by thousands. Vast sums are to be spent for the establishment of an American air-fleet on a colossal scale, and training-schools for air-pilots are beginning to spring up like mushrooms over night.

During the past three years, there has been in Europe not only an immense development of the art of flying, but a specific evolution of the allied art of the aerial duell.

In THE LITERARY DIGEST for July 7th, one of the most interesting articles is a translation from the French of Oscar Ribet, Chief Instructor in a French "School of Pilotage." This article explains in much detail, the tactics of air-fighting. It is illustrated by sketches which visualize the tactics of pursuit, offense, and defense.

There are many other features of unusual interest in "The Digest" this week, among which are:

"Which Is the School For My Boy and Girl?"

This a question that will be asked in many thousands of homes throughout the country during the next few weeks, and there is scarcely any other decision that will exercise more influence upon the future life of your boys and girls. In this week's DIGEST there is a wealth of information comprised in the many business announcements of American schools. Girls' schools, and colleges for women; boys' military schools; co-educational, and music and art schools; schools of oratory and dramatic art; business and technical schools; vocational and professional schools; schools for backward children. All are represented in this number. The DIGEST has attained a unique place as an educational medium. Not only do parents recognize its value in this sense, but superintendents, teachers and students throughout the country know its value also, for it is in daily use as a text book in current history in thousands of schools. Inquiries are invited from teachers and principals as to how THE DIGEST will ease the burden of their school-work.
