MILITARY BRIDAL IN THE CHURCH

Miss Mary Sponsler and Lieutenant Curzon Fager Married at High Noon

The third military church wedding to be solemnized within the last two weeks was that of Miss Mary Eliaabeth Bergner Sponsler, and Lieutenant Edward Curzon Fager, which took place at noon today in the Market Square Presbyterian Church...

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of ivory satin, with bodice of the staid and garnitures of orange and green, as well as the men of the bride party in their military uniforms.

Professor Edwin J. Decevee played a program of classics, prior to the service and just at 12 o'clock the bride party entered the church to the strains of Wagner's "Lohengrin."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of ivory satin, with bodice of the staid and garnitures of orange and green, as well as the men of the bride party in their military uniforms.

Large clusters of white hydrangeas concealed the altar, on either side of which were arranged box and bay trees suggesting the general color effect of green and white. American flags on the altar flanked the bride and groom.

SECRETARY'S BACK FROM GA.

Mr. Landis Fears Libraries Will Not Be Ready For Guardsmen in Time

George B. Landis, general educational secretary of the State Y. M. C. A. has just returned from the training camps at Augusta, Ga., where he has been since July preparing the Y. M. C. A. buildings for the coming troops.

Each building will be about 40x113 feet and will be equipped with correspondence material, a piano, victrola, and moving picture machine.

There will be libraries in the buildings with books donated by the people of the country. Moving picture shows will be given two nights a week.

One night will be amateur night when a vaudeville show will be given by the troops. A night will be given to religious meetings. Lectures will be given also.

Mr. Landis stated that he was fearful that the libraries could not be completed until the Pennsylvania boys arrive there. He also urged the people to donate books for the camps.

CROWING ROOSTERS KILLED Smith Center, Kan. No longer does the lusty voice of the rooster wake up inhabitants of Smith county in the still hours before dawn.

Branded as unnecessary among the barnyard flocks during the summer months, chanticler has gone down before the onslaughts of the campaign for more and better food products.

Now there are more roosterless flocks in Smith county than ever before. A great three-day drive was made against the mate birds, and thousands were taken to market by farmers. Poultry authorities say the absence of the roosters will improve the condition of eggs fully 5 per cent. during the summer months.

In this stirring war time, ECONOMY is the watch-word of the nation. But this does not mean the false economy that soon tears down and destroys.

It means that we are all coming out into the open to "do our bit" by keeping mills and factories running and as much money as possible in circulation through the regular channels of business.

But we are going to spend wisely and well — and plan our expenditures with foresight and sound judgment.

It means that we are going to build better homes — and continue to buy the best furniture and furnishings because the AMERICAN HOME is the foundation of AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP and we are going to LOOK TO OUR HOMES FIRST.

As a factor in helping to make these homes we believe it devolves upon us to hold our profits as closely to cost as possible — our duty to sell on the lowest possible terms.

While this store has always enjoyed a reputation for splendid values — the values from henceforth in the present crisis will be greater than ever — such as to merit the serious consideration of all who view the present national situation sanely.

Dependable Furniture beautifully designed, is now selling at from 10 per cent to 50 per cent off regular prices during our Mid-Summer Sale this month.

GOLDSMITHS NORTH MARKET SQUARE

PLACE IMPLICIT BELIEF IN SHOEMAKER'S TALE

and have talked with Shoemaker do not doubt the story. After many hours of pitiless "third degree" Shoemaker made a confession covering his entire life. Every move made by the billing clerk during the month of July and up to the time of his arrest Monday is given in detail, and the Pinkerton men agree that all statements made by the young man tally perfectly.

Believe His Story Officials of the Pipe Bending plant are also convinced that Shoemaker has told the truth in every detail. When interviewed, a high official of the plant stated that his company entertained no doubt whatever regarding the authenticity of the details given in the lengthy document prepared by Shoemaker. The extent of their faith in the story that the great pack of bills, carefully wrapped in a burlap-covered package and weighed down with a monkey wrench, was thrown by Shoemaker into the Susquehanna river, may be gleaned from the fact that for weeks the river was systematically searched under direction of private detectives before the story of the theft was permitted to reach the public.

That the general public believes the story is evidenced by the number of persons who have cast searching eyes over the Susquehanna river "just above Market street." Not a few persons have carried the investigation beyond the water's edge, and publication of the details has aroused great interest in towns along the course of the river. At Steelton, Middletown, Marietta, and even at Columbia, a watch is being kept for the burlap-wrapped package which represents a small fortune.

No Thought of Return When interviewed, Shoemaker did not express regret that he had taken the money, and at no time during the time that the money was secreted in the cellar of the building at 813 North Second street did he have any thought of returning the bills to his employers. His one fear during those days was that some of the other employes, with whom he had always worked upon the most friendly terms, might be accused of the theft. It was this thought that finally induced him to destroy the evidence.

Mind at Ease Shoemaker in a fine looking man of slight build, and his nervous actions indicate the great strain he has labored under during the past three weeks while in hiding. Although 38 years old, he looks much younger. There are a number of persons in this section who claim they remember him as a boy of less than twenty, when he was enrolled at Dickinson Law School, Carlisle. Shoemaker exhibits many signs of culture, and expressed concern that his father and friends in Norumberland county would learn of his downfall.

The former clerk expects to plead guilty at the first opportunity, and feels a contentment since making the confession that he has not experienced in weeks, he says.
