12,000 TO ENROLL HERE TOMORROW; CO. SCHOOLS OPEN

Well Over 10,000 Pupils Attend Opening Sessions in Surrounding Districts

More than 12,000 pupils are expected to enroll to-morrow when the city public schools open. In the county districts to-day practically every school was opened and a total enrollment of at least 12,000 was anticipated.

Numerous changes have been made in the teaching staff for many of the city public schools and in the county districts to-day practically every school was opened and a total enrollment of at least 12,000 was anticipated.

For the first time since the two schools have been opened all boys will be sent to Tech, and all girls to the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy. Mr. Gompers, who is the president of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, is also chairman of the Alliance.

The President's Letter. Following is the text of the President's letter to Congress: My Dear Mr. Gompers: I am sure that you understand that my inability to accept the invitation to attend the annual conference of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy is due only to official necessity and not in any degree to a lack of interest in the importance of the occasion. The cause you and your fellow patriots uphold is one with the cause we are fighting in this war. While our soldiers and sailors are doing their manifold work to hold back reaction in its most brutal and aggressive efforts to suppress at home the organized and individual efforts of those dangerous elements who hide disloyalty behind a screen of specious and evasive phrases.

I have read with pride the names of the men and women who are to take part in the Minneapolis conference. Not one but a record of devoted service to the cause of democracy; not one but who has fought the long, hard fight for equal rights, bravely evading bitterness that has done us much to know a larger measure of happiness.

With all my heart I want them to feel that their devotion to country and to the principles of democracy and that in serving America to-day they are serving their cause no less faithfully than in the past. I myself am proud to know of the work of the workers of the United States, for the tendency of war is toward reaction, and too often military and industrial production is the excuse for the destruction of laboriously erected industrial and social standards.

These fears, happily, have proved to be baseless. With quickened sympathies and appreciation, with a sense of the invective and insidious dangers of reaction, we are people have not only held every inch of ground that has been won by years of struggle, but have added to the stability of the world the strength along every line of human betterment. Questions of wages and hours of labor and industrial readjustment are not the primary concerns of the toiler a new dignity and a new sense of social and economic security.

I beg you to feel that my sincere hope is that the government has not failed at any point in granting every just request advanced by you and your fellow workers in the name of the American worker.

No one who is not blind can fail to see that the battle line of democracy is being fought to-day from the fields of Flanders to the workshop and workshop where toiling, upward striving men and women are counting the treasures of right and justice and liberty which are being threatened by our present enemies.

It has not been a matter of surprise to me that the leaders in certain groups have been misled by any grievances against the men who have equally misled the German people. Their insistence that a nation should extend from any territory, whose citizens have been foully murdered under their own flag, whose neighbors have been invited to share in the spoils of their territory, whose patience in pressing the claims of justice and humanity have been met with the most shameful indifference and treachery, their insistence that a nation outraged does not know its own mind, that it has no comprehensive reason for defending itself, or for governing its own people, is maintaining a free future for itself and its ideals, is of a piece with their deafness to the oft-repeated statement of the American people: "We are the Voice of Democracy."

Is it perhaps that these forces of antagonism have not yet learned to love and serve? It may well be that those among us who stand ready to forward the plans of aggression breed the hatred and the enmity and the language of democracy when it proclaims the purpose of war in terms of a peace for the peoples that shall be untroubled by the hands of men and by the pawns in their struggle for power and gain. But true Americans, those who toil here for home and the hope of better things, whose lifted eyes have caught the vision of a liberated world, have said that the policy of blood and iron shall be an end, and that equal justice, which is the heart of democracy, shall rule in its stead.

May not those who toil and those who have made common cause of the hope for the future, and who have kind take renewed heart as they think on those days when America has taken its stand for the rights of the people, for the rights of the individual and international justice? Sincerely yours, WOODROW WILSON.

SENATE HOLIDAY WORK ON WAR TAX BILL

Battle Line For Democracy Extends From Flanders Front to American Shops

Washington, Sept. 3. — "No one who is not blind can fail to see that the battle line of democracy for America stretches to-day from the fields of Flanders to every home and workshop where toiling, upward striving men and women are counting the treasures of right and justice and liberty which are being threatened by our present enemies."

On seventeen Senators stood with Johnson, the list including Vardaman, LaFollette, Gronna and Gore, who have been conspicuous in opposing the bill and against the various war measures that have come before the Senate.

Senator Boies Penrose, as ranking Republican of the Finance committee, took a shot at Johnson in a speech in which he made it clear that the committee had not received in any respect from its position relative to the war profits tax. The committee, he said, had made a sincere and patriotic effort to meet the demands of the revenue situation. He characterized Johnson's attack as "frivolous."

"There is a lack of sincerity in that statement, and an absolute lack of truth. In this instance the committee has not in any way altered the basic principles with which it presented this particular part of the revenue bill relating to war profits. An effort is made to convey the impression that somehow or other, the committee has reported out increased rates. The rates are identical in the report made Thursday by the chairman of the Finance committee, and the rates in the original report with one single exception—a ten per cent. raise in the highest bracket."

The effort is made to convey the impression that, somehow or other, the committee has been driven to raise $400,000,000 by increased rates, but the committee has been driven to collect in taxes by the chairman of the Finance committee, comes from the fact that the committee has increased the ten per cent. raise in the highest bracket, from the ten per cent. restriction on the supernormal.

Logical Proposition. The committee's beginning viewed this tax strictly as a war profit tax. It was a logical proposition. Here was a tax that was computed on the difference between the earnings during the pre-war period and the earnings during the taxable year.

It was not the purpose of the committee to exhaust every source of taxation in the present bill. The committee is well aware that other sources remain to be tapped. The burden of the war increase upon the shoulders of the war increase will be every month.

It has been a sincere and a patriotic effort to meet the requirements of the public treasury to meet the views of senators here on this floor, honestly expressed, not in the accents of the stump orator, or of the campaigner, but in the accents of a deliberate consideration which ought to be extended to a fiscal measure meaning so much to the American people as this does.

CHICAGO PLACED UNDER MILITARY RULE. [Continued From First Page.] been established and that no immediate sessions of the council are contemplated. Many of the delegates are said to enroute to home.

The turbulent events of the past few days, in which the delegates found themselves forbidden haven in three states with no apparent relief, extended from any territory, whose citizens have been foully murdered under their own flag, whose neighbors have been invited to share in the spoils of their territory, whose patience in pressing the claims of justice and humanity have been met with the most shameful indifference and treachery, their insistence that a nation outraged does not know its own mind, that it has no comprehensive reason for defending itself, or for governing its own people, is maintaining a free future for itself and its ideals, is of a piece with their deafness to the oft-repeated statement of the American people: "We are the Voice of Democracy."

CLEMENT TAKES COMMAND AT CAMP HANCOCK

Staff Named For Chief of the Division. Augusta, Ga., Sept. 3.—When the Stars and Stripes unfurled to the breeze here Saturday from the giant flagstaff, Camp Hancock became officially the home of the Twenty-Eighth Army Division. Major General Charles M. Clement, of the National Army, commanding, at the same time took to the field and as his first official action designated the staff of his division.

Find Old City Interesting

Now the soldiers roam about at will. They have discovered much of interest in the city. They have learned that President Wilson was a student here as a boy; that he was "spineless" and "freckled," but always a close and keen scholar. Little knots of them travel to the Richmond Academy, where he studied. They are reported to be fabulously rich. The boys had not been in the camp many hours before they were discussing the war — the Civil War. Their advent to this August as soldiers awakened new their glimmerings of the history of that struggle, and when spread through the company streets that old earthwork to protect this section of the state from the ruthless Sherman, should that conquerer decide to march in the direction of Augusta, were to be seen, they went to view them in squads, discussing with wise technical knowledge their tactical position, their strength and durability.

IN the forty-first chapter of Genesis it is related that a young Jew, in interpreting the dream of a great Egyptian king, counseled the monarch to prepare to hard times while the preparing was good.

Joseph and the King have both gone to where they have to worry no more about earthly policies, but the lesson is still on the job and has lost no whit of its edge in spite of its age. The need for being prepared is always with us.

Some of the largest consumers of coal have this lesson in mind and are stocking coal now for the dearth that is almost sure to come in the rapidly approaching coal season.

They have a vision of the lack of transportation that even at this early date is making itself apparent. They see that in the near future it will not be a question of price but almost solely a question of supply. The supply is not a question of coal but a question of getting the fuel to the dealers and ultimately to the consumer.

Not all coal consumers are taking time by the forelock and providing for future needs. Some of them are trusting to luck. They forget that during a time of war all precedent is cast aside.
