

PAY TRIBUTE TO JEWISH YOUTH

Quick to Hear War's Call, Say Speakers at Farm School

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 8.—Praise for the work of the members of the National Farm School in not only adding to this country's supply of food but also aiding in the conservation of food, was voiced by Congressman Julius Kahn, of California; Brigadier General A. H. Lauchheimer, of the United States Marine Corps, Washington, and also by officers and members of the Masons, who officiated and made addresses at the twentieth annual Succoth pilgrimage and cornerstone laying of the Morris Lasker Memorial Hall, on the grounds of the National Farm School, near Doylestown. These exercises were attended by the Right Worshipful Grand Master, Louis A. Watres, and other grand officers of the Masons and by many Philadelphians. Felix H. Levy, of New York, presided at this meeting, and after being introduced to the assemblage by Dr. Krauskopf, paid a tribute to him for his work in building up the Farm School. "For two thousand years the Jews have been divorced from their ancient work of tilling the soil, which of old was their privilege and inheritance," said Mr. Levy. "It is untrue that they are given over merely to money lending and making. The entire country can look at the records made by the Jews in the answer made by their youth to the call of their country in this, its time of need. "Many personages and peoples will be humbled to the dust at the ending of this terrible war, and when the German autocracy has been overthrown only the abasic and fundamental traits of nations will remain. On the basis of nature and agriculture the world will be regenerated and the world can rely on the fact that we will ever be ready to do our part in the task of rebuilding the Nation." Congressman Kahn said that this country has always offered a refuge for the Jews and that now since she needs their services, they are all willing to give their energies, their money and, if need be, their lives. "We fought in 1812 for the freedom of the seas and in 1815 we aided in clearing the high seas of the Barbary pirates," he said. "Therefore, when the German barbarians questioned this freedom of ours, we could do nothing less than fight for our rights. "This war is showing that there must be no waste. One of the great reasons for the high cost of living at the present time is waste. If every woman would avoid waste, food prices would come down. Brigadier General Lauchheimer said we may give the soldiers ammunition and equipment, but if the men are not physically fit our army is impaired in efficiency, for the production of food for these men is seventy-five per cent of the work necessary to make them fit.

It Is Highly Important That YOU Subscribe to the Second Liberty Loan

We had to be thoroughly aroused to the absolute necessity of the needs of the Government and to an understanding of what it would mean to fail to provide for our first war obligations. This second loan calls for even more serious effort and a fuller realization that we are at war and committed to vast expenditures. Remember even if the first loan was oversubscribed—such over subscriptions were those made in large blocks and represented the well-to-do. This money remains in the business of the country, and the second loan should not divert from necessary business undertakings the capital required. You should buy the bonds with uninvested savings and from new economies. We have not yet felt the privations of war, and the American people should plan to place their savings at the disposal of the Government and by such thrift will assist the nation in the performance of the high mission it has undertaken, and save us all from possible disaster. Buy the Second Liberty Loan Bonds—which will pay four per cent. Remember, you do not give up anything. You simply invest in the best security in the world—the U. S. Government of America. She gives you a good rate of interest for the use of your money and even without that—patriotism should prompt you to help. The Liberty Loan will help win the war and every step taken must be in that definite direction.
