SUCCESSFUL WORK OF GYM CLASSES

Red Cross Benefit Entertainment Scores One of the Big Successes in Class History

The true artist is she who puts her heart in her work; the true teacher she who puts her heart in the work of her students. The efficient tutelage of Miss Marjorie Bolles, physical director of the Y. W. C. A., was reflected in the almost perfect work of her students who gave a benefit entertainment for the Red Cross, and incidentally, a testimonial to Miss Bolles. The Business and High School Girls' gymnasium classes of the Y. W. C. A. were the actors in the big entertainment, given in the Chesnut Street building last night, before one of the largest audiences ever assembled in that building. Following an interesting calisthenic drill, announced as "Boarding Ball," Mrs. Maurice Fernald and Margaret Turner appeared in a humorous number, realistically imitating a ventriloquist and his doll. In "A Night at Boarding School," a number of stunts were given. A solo dance by Miss Jean Matter was one of the features of this number. An amusing act, "The Regent," a look-alike glass) showed the audience at a motion picture theater, thoroughly enjoying the show. The expressions on the faces of the amateur audience were most realistic, pleasing the spectators immensely.

Carnival of Seasons

One of the big features of the affair followed when a "Carnival of the Seasons" followed. The snow queen appeared first on the scene followed by icicles and snowflakes. The sun god with sunbeam court followed. Raindrops appeared on the scene, followed by Spring and her blossoms. Summer, characterized as a "capricious wretch," brought with her various flowers, autumn followed and Jack Frost closed the spectacle. The various characters were taken by members of the gymnasium classes. Solo dancing by Miss Faye Haverstick was one of the charming numbers of the program. Miss Haverstick, a most attractive young girl, dances with exquisite grace and charm.

The clown-band, with Miss Clara Wolf as leader played the number of patriotic selections with "Kazoo's." Aesthetic dancing and figure marches followed. The climax of the entertainment came with the final act, styled "The American Nations." Dainty maids in the green and shamrock of Ireland, hearty, happy English girls, a beautiful lithe Scotswoman, vivacious lassies of France; the sparkling, blue-eyed girls of Italy and dark-haired Japanese maidens marched to the front of the platform. Marjorie Bolles, attended in the role of a queen, Columbia, marched to the throne. Miss Bolles gave a charming solo dance, calling her aids.

Credit to Trainers

The entertainment was a riot of joy and happiness. It was announced by spectators to be the best home talent entertainment given here in many years, and much credit is due Mrs. C. C. Stroh and Miss Bolles for their careful training of the participants. Mrs. Stroh played the piano accompaniments, assisted by Victor B. Hausknecht, violinist.

Program Is Announced For Last Lenten Recital

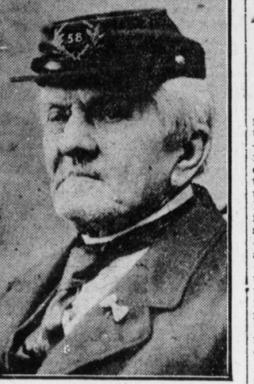

The last Lenten organ recital will be given in St. Stephen's Church tomorrow afternoon, at 5 o'clock, by Alfred C. Rischelwies, assisted by Mrs. Roy G. Cox, soprano.

Following will be the program: Allegro Cantata, from Second Symphony.....Vierne Solo—"Gethsemane".....Salter in the Morning.....Grieg Pater Noster.....Foots Marche Solennelle.....Borowski

AMERICAN FLAGS FOR FOREIGNERS

Americanization Meeting in Wickersham School Building Full of Interest

Five new American flags were unfurled to the breeze in Harrisburg this morning by their proud owners—not native Americans but young men and women born in a foreign country who are yearning and eager to know what America wants them to do and so anxious to serve loyally. At an Americanization meeting held at foreign school Wickersham building, Miss Durbin explained the difference between a monarchy and democratic form of government and said they are living under the protection of this government, making a good living, receiving an education and must be loyal to America. Picture slides were presented of America's historic founders and statesmen. Miss Bookler told stories of Kosciuszko, Garibaldi and Florence Nightingale. Prizes were given for the best English reading from the Constitution of the United States. Miss Durbin presented the American flag, the Austria Hungard, American silk flag, first prize; Kathrine Schneider, Germany, American silk flag, second prize; Samuel Fredman, Russian, Polish, first merit prize; Bessie Loom Russian, second merit prize; Joseph Hiello, Italian, third merit prize; Hiello, Italian, honorable mention.

Show First Interest

To say, first tell the Italian among us of Giuseppe Garibaldi, the Pole, of Thaddeus Kosciuszko, and then he will be a rapt listener to the story of George Washington, sounds paradoxical, but it is the truth. Wednesday evening, after Miss Amelia Durbin had presented the flags, Miss Lois Booker wrote the name Giuseppe Garibaldi on the blackboard. "Does any one know of this person?" she inquired, turning around to meet the beaming face of a man who had risen eagerly.

"Giuseppe Garibaldi was hero man," said the son of Italy. "He no care for money the king make offer to him."

After her story of the congenial trio of heroes, Garibaldi, Washington and Kosciuszko, and of the world encircling work of Florence Nightingale, J. continued the conversation. "I am reading George Dewey, hero; George Washington was hero and good; I belong to the Red Cross."

Mutual appreciation of national heroes forms a common meeting ground for the American and the new American. Expressed admiration for the glorious annals of Italy will win the Italian to become an eager auditor of the history of our own republic, a record not faultless 'tis true, but so splendid that the foreign-born will desire and seek adoption, especially if we let it known that he will be most welcome in our great family.

"I will do my flag highest honor," said a girl as she smiled at the silver stars and stripes which Miss Durbin had given her.

"What have you done to prevent development of the hyphenated Americans?" asked some one of her, as she bade the warm-hearted, impulsive student, good night.

"Almost nothing," was the confession. "I have been so busy among our own coming citizens, that I have scarcely noticed these new, grown up sons and daughters yearning for a home fire greeting and interest that would have won and inspired them to seek citizenship with us through desire and good will as well as from a sense of material obligation for material opportunities."

The world war is a challenge to the disdam, the former theory and practice prevalent in the United States of Americanizing the foreign children, while treating their big brothers and parents as if they had remained across the ocean.
