

HE TOOK TIME BY FORELOCK

York County Farmer Did Not Want to Gain Whole Hour in One Day

Spring Grove, Pa., April 1.—Fearing that a whole hour would be too much to start with when the clock was turned forward Saturday night, Edward Sprinkle, a well known farmer living near here has been turning the hands of his clock up a quarter of an hour at intervals the past several weeks. Mr. Sprinkle believes in taking things by degrees and has applied his ideas accordingly to the clock moving scheme. He also regulated his work accordingly. His first move was fifteen minutes and his hours of rising in the morning were also fifteen minutes ahead of former mornings. Presently he shows the hands fifteen minutes more and later another quarter of an hour was added until on the final move he was within a few minutes of the goal, and thoroughly inured to the innovation.

QUIET SUPERINTENDENT FIGHT Gettysburg, Pa., April 1.—With the election of a county superintendent of schools only a week off, there is no stir over the question. The incumbent is apparently on top of the surface, however, as there has been a great deal of quiet work done by the two aspirants for the position. Every director in the county has been seen and an effort made to line him up for one or the other of the candidates, but it is hard to make a choice. The present superintendent, Prof. H. Milton Roth, who has held the position for nineteen years, is again a candidate and is opposed by Prof. Charles H. Richter, of Berwick township, a member of the faculty of the Hanover High School.

BOY THROWN INTO MACHINERY Pleasantville, Pa., April 1.—While assisting to shell corn on Friday on the Kohr farm, ten-year-old Thomas Kelly, near Mount Zion, Russell township, suffered a fractured right leg and contusions to his right side. The accident occurred when the boy fell off the flywheel of the sheller and caught the machinery of the engine. The timely shutting down of the engine by a farmhand saved the boy's life. It is feared he may have suffered internal injuries. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Reever.

MRS. SHUMAKER ENTERTAINS Liverpool, Pa., April 1.—Mrs. H. D. Shumaker entertained her Sunday school class, The Star of the East, yesterday. The following members were present: Leon Long, Ray Long, Herbert Lower, Chester Deckard, Harrison Lower, Lloyd Long, Harry Deckard, Ralph Brown, William Keister, George DeHaven and Luther Knisely.

CHARLES R. BOWER DIES Millersburg, Pa., April 1.—Charles R. Bower, a young man in his twentieth year, died Saturday at his home in North Market street after several months' illness of a complication of diseases. He is survived by his wife and one child, also his parents and several brothers and sisters. The funeral will take place from his late home Tuesday at 2 p. m. in charge of his pastor, the Rev. M. H. Hallman, of the United Brethren church. Burial in Oak Hill cemetery.

ENTIRE FAMILY IN HOSPITAL Lewistown, Pa., April 1.—On Saturday evening the Lewistown and Reedsville electric railway struck an automobile containing the Nale family, of Dry Valley, and all were injured. The accident occurred at Mike's Crossing, on the Kishacoquillas pike. The injured are: Lawrence Nale, 65 years old, throat badly lacerated; Mrs. Nale, 50 years old, head and arm injured; Frank Nale, a cousin, of Altoona, minor injuries.

Suburban Notes HUMMELSTOWN Mr. and Mrs. Harry Noll, of Hershey, spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Cassel. Truman Cassel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cassel, is spending a week's furlough with his parents. He is stationed at Camp Hancock. Harry Laucks spent several days at Allentown and Reading. Luther G. Hummel transacted business at Harrisburg on Friday. Martin Shank, stationed at Camp Meade, spent several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shank. Mrs. Annie Rousch and Miss Kate Knitz are visiting the former's son, Herman Rousch, at Camp Hancock. Mrs. Gabriel Meyer, of Palmyra, spent a day with friends here. Misses Barbara and Annie Martin spent a day at Harrisburg. The Rev. Herbert S. Gurnes was incapacitated from conducting several of his Easter services by an attack of diphtheria. The pulpit was occupied by the Rev. M. P. Hocker, of Middletown. Kenneth Buser, of Enhart, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Borker. Mrs. George Spangler, of York, spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Petersen. Mrs. George Huber and son, Donald, are spending several weeks at Hagerstown, Md. Mrs. Richard Taylor and daughter, Maude, spent the Easter vacation in Soranton. Mrs. F. F. Griffiths, of Bethlehem, spent several days with her mother, Mrs. Annie Earnest.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards' produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative. No gripping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action. If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime. Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA NEWS

Patriotic and Easter Services at Dauphin Church

Dauphin, Pa., April 1.—Patriotic and Easter services were combined in the Presbyterian Church yesterday morning, when the service flag of eight stars was raised. The honor roll was read and consisted of the following names: James Lewis Gross, ensign in the United States Naval Reserves, New York City; Ernest Shaffer, sergeant-major, United States Signal Corps, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; Paul Worcester, United States Signal Corps; Walter J. Shaffer, Lafayette Flying Squadron, France; Edgar W. Forney, United States Quartermaster Corps, Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga.; Bion C. Welker, United States artillery, Camp Meade, Maryland; and Mitchell Miller, United States Army Nurse Corps, who is on her way to France. The Easter Sunday school collection, raised by individual classes amounting to $75, was received. A banner presented to the Sunday school by Miss Margaret Brooks' class, was awarded to that class for a year for splendid work and attendance.

WAR VETERAN DIES Marietta, Pa., April 1.—William Miller, 74, a veteran of the Civil War, died Friday. He was a retired coach builder and carpenter, a member of the Red Men at Neffsville, and affiliated with the Lutheran Church. He is survived by a number of brothers and sisters.

FOUND DEAD IN BED Hummelstown, Pa., April 1.—Mrs. Daniel Eshleman, of Derry township, near Sunnyside schoolhouse, was found dead in bed on Friday morning. She was 73 years of age and is survived by her husband, who is blind. She will be buried from Stauffer's Church, near Daughmansville, to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

BRITISH HOLD LINE AS GERMANS STORM

where the French have been making such a gallant stand. The outstanding feature of the conflict on the northern end of the Somme is that the British as a whole have killed a great number of the enemy. To-day the British initiated a forward movement about Peuchy Cope east of Arras. They launched a local attack at 3 o'clock this morning and pressed it so vigorously that they reclaimed a stretch of territory 1,500 yards long and averaging about 200 yards in depth. This success had tactical advantages but they were small in relation to the fact that the British were able, after the past ten days' of gruelling work to undertake an offensive operation. The situation, where there has been so much hard fighting, the British appear to have the situation well in hand and the town hall of Moreuil, about which sanguinary struggles have been awaiting, was at last reports still flying the British flag defiantly from the steeple. One of the most costly attacks the enemy attempted yesterday was between Morlancourt and the Somme, where a heavy assault was made against the Australians shortly after noon. The attackers came forward in masses and the British threw themselves against the advancing lines so fiercely that the Germans were hurled back. The British operations at Lassigny farm, south of Hebuterne, between Albert and Arras, yesterday afternoon, were a brilliant success. The Germans were pushed back with heavy casualties and British troops returned with 200 prisoners, 40 machine guns and a trench mortar.

Two Attacks Smashed South of Arras the enemy made two attacks yesterday. One was near Hamelincourt, astride the Arras-Bapaume railway while the other was north of Boisleux St. Mare. Both of these efforts were smashed, although hard fighting centered around Boisleux. In this operation the Germans advanced in great numbers after an intense bombardment of the British lines for two hours. At three places the enemy succeeded in penetrating the defenses and a bitter hand-to-hand struggle ensued. The British made such strenuous resistance that the Germans were thrown back, leaving numbers of dead.

Northeast of Arras the Germans made a slight attack Saturday after a heavy bombardment and pushed forward over a tiny strip of ground. The result of the fighting on the British side was a complete success. During the past two days have been satisfactory. Heavy German attacks on both sides of the Luce river forced the British to fall back somewhat. Friday night the enemy pushed forward and penetrated a large wood northeast of Moreuil. Saturday the British cut off the enemy which went through the forest and forced the enemy to fall back, not only here but further to the north.

North of the Luce the enemy yesterday morning attacked in force along the British line between Warfuse and Marcelevate. This assault was repulsed by vigorous artillery bombardment. The cavalry again came into play and by 10 o'clock the Germans were compelled to retire with heavy casualties. Subsequently the enemy again put down a tremendous barrage between Warfuse and the Somme and after two hours of terrific gun fire advanced in masses. They came again in the cavalry and met a similar fate, the British line remaining intact. North of Aubercourt, south of Marcelevate the British recaptured important high ground. It is now possible to tell of a spectacular feature of a brilliant British defense last week below the Somme. In this gallant force were included American railway engineers, who as in the battle of Cambrai last November, were necessary to take more troops up arms in defense of the allied colors. It was last Tuesday afternoon at a critical moment when it was absolutely necessary that more troops should be thrown into the British line to hold the onrush of Germans. Reinforcements were on the way but could not arrive in time. A certain general immediately organized a force collected from the various units nearby, in which were the Americans.

Fifteen hundred were strung over a front of 1,200 yards against which hordes of Germans were being flung. It seems almost inconceivable that these defenders could have been able to hold that long sector, but they did. The enemy advanced in force but the gallant defenders clung on for many hours until the regular army arrived. This incident is more spectacular, but hardly finer in spirit than that of seven British soldiers who had been home engaged on leave and on landing at a channel port in France could find no transportation to the front. They tramped virtually all the way to the battlelines to take their places beside their hard pressed comrades.

Enterprising New Town Springs Up in Mifflin Co.

Lewistown, Pa., April 1.—Mifflin county has a new town in the western part of Wayne township, known as Kistler. In less than two years 150 houses have sprung up in the place, erected by the Kistler Land and Improvement Company. These houses are occupied by employees of the Mifflin Flouring Company. By the building of this new town 125 voters have been added to Mifflin county. A petition presented to the courts here asks that a legalized business in Perry county. At that time fifteen Perry county bars closed their doors for at least once and everything in the town was inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were secured by legally their licenses were moved until 12 p. m. March 31, but inasmuch as the last day fell on Sunday, the business came to an end one day before the licenses expired. The grand finale was experienced with less noise and general mischief than had been expected. Street singing in celebration of the ten towns losing their licenses was the chief cause of disturbance. No serious disorder was reported. At Marysville G. W. Rhoads, proprietor of the Central Hotel, moved from the building. There a large number of beer kegs were taken to outyards, where they were