U. S. Soldiers to Go Sockless in Summer

Washington, April 29.—Thousands of American soldiers at training camps and in the field will go sockless this summer. Army experts have adopted the suggestion of rifle leaders and will banish the heavy gray sock during the warm months in the belief that sockless soldiers' feet become toughened and fit to withstand the rigors of winter weather in the trenches.

London, April 29.—Baron Rhondda, food controller, who on Thursday tendered his resignation, which had not been accepted by Premier Lloyd George, is perhaps an example of over-devotion in practice of his own theories. He has been confined to bed for several weeks.

PHEASANT EGGS BOUGHT BY STATE

Exclusive Propagation Work Will Be Undertaken by Hatching Process

Eleven thousand pheasant eggs have been contracted for by the State Game Commission and will be distributed as fast as received to the game preserves and through game gardens to persons interested in propagating pheasants so that they can have them hatched. The bulk of these eggs will come from Bucks county where there are extensive holdings of pheasants and it is believed that with care and co-operation of sportsmen valuable work in propagating the bird can be done.

The reports coming to the Game Commission offices from wardens and nature lovers tell of large flocks of wild turkeys which seem to have survived the severe winter better than expected and to have appeared in regions where they have not been observed for years. Some of the flocks are believed to be part of the brood of wild and tame turkeys which were liberated in the last few years. The discovery of so many turkeys was a gratifying surprise as it had been feared that the birds had been hard hit by the weather. The reports on quail and deer and bear are all favorable.

Contracts are being placed by game officials for pheasants for delivery next year. The birds are being looked up and it is believed that some valuable additions to the state's game may be obtained. There are hopes of securing some quail, but owing to the demand for them in this part of the country and the unsettled conditions in Mexico, coupled with federal regulations, it is by no means certain that any shipments of large size can be bought. Pennsylvania's pheasant work has been served by other states and each one is pretty carefully protecting its own game and discouraging sales.

Temporary offices have been opened in the Strook farm house on the Marsh Run site of the huge quarter-master's corps depots to be erected there and Major Morava has established headquarters there. One hundred men are at work. With the arrival of the contractors to-day, many more men will likely be put to work. Electrical connections have been made for the depot by the United Electric Company of Lemoyne. Workmen are engaged to erect each end of the site, some constructing sidings, others grading and getting the general office in shape. It is believed now that the five warehouses will be erected at first, 160 feet wide and 1,250 long. They will be erected at the northern end of the site.

To Teach War Cookery ATTRACTIVE RECEIPTS

Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn Comes to Harrisburg Under Auspices of Harrisburg Telegraph in Interest of the Conservation Policy

There has been more written and thought about food in the last three years than in the whole of the fifty preceding this period. Women have been more or less interested in the subject since the war began to prepare it and how to serve it, but in our generation it has not gone much further than that. To-day, however, the vital question is, "what does it cost?" The women of Pennsylvania have always been good cooks, but the determining factor in the food has largely been whether or not the husband and children found it pleasant to taste, and if it filled that gastronomic function, or if the guests were complimentary and she earned the reputation for herself of being an excellent hostess, she did not quarrel with the price. So we doubt if there is much to teach about the "good things," but within the last three years, we have awakened to the fact that to have too many "good things" of the old type is lacking in patriotism and that it might even be dishonest to go on having these good things if the preparation of these dishes required material needed for our soldiers. The past few months since we became personally interested in the world war, we have awakened to the fact that our future peace and safety depends upon a normal food supply, not only for our brave soldier boys, but for our allies as well. The United States will be a big determining factor in this great crisis. It must be realized that the fields of Europe have been for the most part barren for some time, that instead of growing grains they are rank with the blood of slaughtered soldiers. To supply the needs of our hungry people and the guest of the world, to bring peace and good will to men on earth, and restore our battered civilization, we must conserve as never before, every mouthful of food. We cannot afford to increase the amount of food in the country, but we can by extreme care, conserve the food and make it go further. Every spoonful of sugar, every pound of flour or beef, or mutton, or pork, wasted, or even unnecessarily used, is prolonging the war and making certain the death of more of our own soldiers than would otherwise have to lose their lives in our defense.

The Telegraph proud of the spirit of its women readers has shown in patriotic work of all sorts, has arranged for them a week of Home Economics, beginning Monday, May 6, real home helps—cooking and serving, what to cook and how to cook it, and it is, therefore, with great pleasure, we announce that Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn, well known here by reason of her previous visits, will have charge of the lectures. Each lecture will be accompanied by a practical demonstration of economic dishes, applicable to the needs of the times. It will be a war-time cooking school in the broadest sense of the word, and is intended as the work of all women. The Telegraph's contribution to the Food Conservation program which is engaging the attention of the nation just at this time, is a most timely and important one. Mrs. Vaughn's life study but her method of explaining the practice of these theories is so simple that the most inexperienced housekeeper will understand clearly and intelligently the "whys" of the procedure. The Y. M. C. A. auditorium has been secured for the lectures and the sessions will be entirely informal and free to all. Every woman in Harrisburg and vicinity is invited to come out each day as the guest of the Telegraph and ask all the questions they like.

SPROUL SPEAKS FOR WAR UNITY

Senator Makes a Ringing Speech at Lancaster Club Dinner

Senator William C. Sproul made a resounding speech for subordinating everything to winning the war and George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General, decried the national administration's attitude toward honest, helpful criticism, at the dinner of the Young Men's Republican Club in Lancaster on Saturday night. The club is the most influential organization in Lancaster county and the Senator, a native of the county, was given a splendid greeting. Many representative Republicans were present.

Senator Sproul in his introductory remarks with which he eulogized the Republican party for its devotion to duty in this war, said that instead of partisanship under all circumstances in the present emergency, "The people of Pennsylvania," he said were "too much engaged now with the patriotic duties of the hour to pay any serious attention to those who would endeavor to divert them by parading up and down the state airing their petty factional grievances and trying to win sympathy for miserable political squabbles."

"The question of winning this war is the real business before every American at the present moment, especially to us, Pennsylvania, it is before the people and government of Pennsylvania. Without this state, its men and women and what they produce know, we would not be in this war over night. Yes, without the co-operation of a dozen counties in Pennsylvania, half of them in this county, we could not win. America would be helpless in this great struggle. If we do not win this war and dictate the terms of peace, it will be our fate. If it shall be our fate, to be resolved into an armed camp for the next generation at least.

"Every energy of our national life will have to be devoted to the training and maintenance of a great army of defense and a navy, the like of which the world has never seen, to keep heret in Pennsylvania to help prevent the collection of a tribute in men and money such as was never before heard of in history. It is for this reason that we must have every energy for the national need, and this great Republican state, foremost in every great crisis America has ever known, with its wealth, its productiveness, the ability of its great captains of industry now serving the nation, the loyalty and skill of its women, may be depended upon to do its best, its superhuman best, in this trial.

"It is for us, then, and especially is it the duty of our leaders, those charged with the responsibilities of our government, to set aside everything else and give to the thousand things needing direction and coordination in Pennsylvania, the attention which is required, that we may do our utmost to serve the nation, to serve Democracy and to prevent this country from being divided. This is no time for pettifoggery and ranting, the people are not interested in small matters nor small men. It is a time for action. We are hunting elephants to-day, not mice."

Mr. Wickersham said, in part: "Comment and criticism are peculiarly obnoxious to the Wilson administration. At the very outbreak of the war, it attempted to pass a measure through Congress which would have established a censorship on newspapers utterly abhorrent to our entire theory of government. It has displayed a lust of power unprecedented in American history.

Marysville, Pa., April 29.—Perry county subscribed $400,000 for Liberty Bonds up to Saturday. Duncannon, New Bloomfield and New Buffalo have likewise doubled their quotas and will add one star to their flag. New Buffalo, with but eighty-nine inhabitants and claiming the distinction of being the smallest incorporated borough in Pennsylvania, raised $2,000 in the drive. Marysville needs but a few more subscriptions to secure one star for her flag. Records yesterday at noon showed that she needed but a bare
