

MUST FIGHT ON, SAYS LENROOT

Wisconsin Senator Preaches Loyalty at Gathering of Jews

New York. — United States Senator Irvine Luther Lenroot, who led the fight against Senator La Follette in Wisconsin during the recent primary election, in which 100 per cent. loyalty was made the main issue, and who won the fight handsomely before the Institutional Synagogue, One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Fifth Avenue. The talk was on the subject of "War."

The audience frequently interrupted the Senator to applaud his sentiments. He got a round of hand-clapping when he said that "the man who leads this country, sees the Statue of Liberty for the first time can be as good a patriot as the man who is born here," and still more for the country, than the man who led the fight for war legislation in the Congress was born in Germany. He was Representative Julius Kahn of California.

There are many other men, he said, who are patriotically serving in the Congress whose home lands were Germany, Bohemia, Russia, Ireland and other countries, and he remarked that his own parents came to America sixty-three years ago "to find a greater life for their children and opportunity for their children."

"The present war is the greatest of all wars and it must be fought out until it is won. It is a greater and more realizing that this war was not waged primarily for the making of the world safe for democracy, although it was so intended for that, too; that it was not entered to save Belgium, although it was fought for that, too; that it was not entered to give to the small states the right to govern themselves, and it was fought for that too. Primarily, it was a war to save American ideals."

"Germany's autocracy must be crushed and we must never permit peace negotiated by the Kaiser. He knows no law, human or divine. We cannot think of peace until the German people themselves take such measures as will control their own government."

"A man without a country in America is more of a stranger, even if his ancestors fought in the Revolutionary war. He is without a country if he votes against the best interests of the country."

"Some people of alleged high ideals would withdraw our troops and stop the war. They tried this in Russia. Any country that the United States who knows this and is not willing to fight this war in every particular is not a good American."

The event, engineered by William C. Alexander, salesmanager of the big hosiery concern, has behind it the cooperation of Harrisburg merchants.

"Monto" week opens Monday morning. The hosiery manufactured by the Harrisburg mill will be on display in the windows of leading mercantiles of the city. Preceding the demonstration of hosiery making Thursday evening there will be a parade headed by the employees of the mill and a number of interesting features are planned to make the evening an enjoyable one.

Searchlights Rack Nerves of Airmen

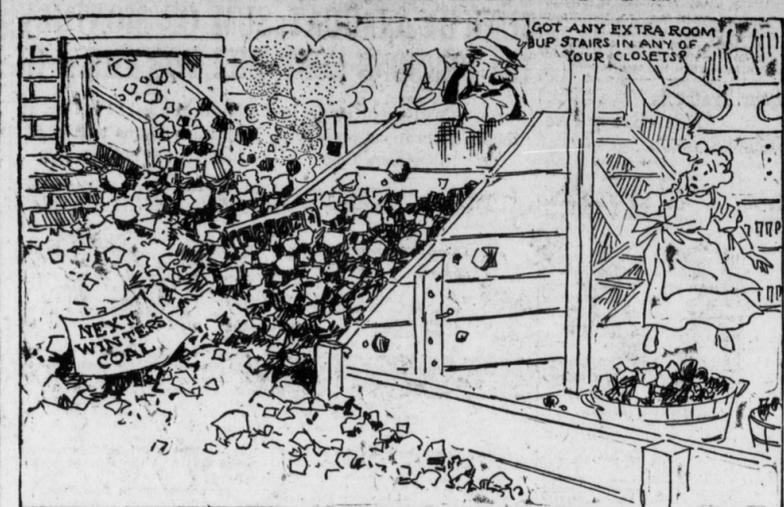

London.—Searchlights are the most nerve-racking enemy which the airplane pilot has to face in night flying, writes an airman in the "Daily Mail."

"Searchlights are cruel things," he says, "are far harder on the nerves than high explosive or shrapnel. They seem so alive, as though they have volition of their own and were great arms stretched out across the night, sweeping the darkness with an eager desire to find their quarry."

KAISER PLEASSED WITH NEW GUN

Sends His Congratulations to Krupp For Success of the Long-Range Cannon

London.—The Kaiser has telegraphed to Krupp: "Your new gun has stood the test brilliantly by the bombardment of Paris from a distance of well over 100 kilometers. With the construction of this gun you have added a new and glorious page to the history of the house of Krupp. I, therefore, express to you and to all collaborators my imperial thanks for this demonstration of German science and German spirit."

The gun is discussed by General Rohne—a German artillery expert—in the Vossische Zeitung. He says: "The initial velocity of the projectile must be 4,500 feet a second, the weight of it must be 600 pounds, and 600 pounds of powder must be used for every projectile. If not another and more powerful material is used, a shell which travels seventy-five miles reaches a height of about nineteen miles and passes through a very thin stratum of air."

"It is of great importance that these cannot be placed behind woods without the shell grazing the tops of the trees. Moreover, the cannon cannot be detected by enemy airmen. The projectile takes place two and a half or three minutes to run seventy-five miles, and the explosion takes place one minute later."

All Claim Credit Humorous enough is the effect produced by the bombardment in Allied ordinance circles. "I told you so," says one, with satisfaction; another: "Why, of course, we've had the idea for years, but —"; and yet another: "It's one of my own ideas the Germans have improved upon. I submitted it to the War Office, only —" There has been tremendous speculation regarding the new weapon. The view is generally accepted that the great range is due partly to the fact that the shell is rifled as well as the cannon, the barrel of which might be 250 feet long. A high British authority, who is an expert in gunnery, informed a newspaperman that in his opinion the German scientists have discovered some new method of propelling shells exceeding the strength of cordite. "It is possible that they are utilizing liquid air or hydraulic power or something of that form, but it is impossible to say definitely."

Cooks Are Deserting Hotels For the Army

Pittsburgh.—Patrons of Pittsburgh's hotels may suffer the pangs of hunger within the next few weeks if cooks cannot be recruited from other parts of the country. The greatest shortage of hotel cooks in the history of the city is being experienced today. Local hotel managers are scouring the country in search of expert men.

Soldier Asks Waitress to Wed Him After War

St. Louis.—Often there is time for a waitress to hear the whole life history of a customer while he consumes his order. Of course, some waitresses and some customers make better use of the time than others. One soldier, while getting outside an order of four hard-boiled eggs, delivered himself of a proposal of marriage. His home was on a farm in Oklahoma, he said, and it has been a bum farm until they struck oil in the midst of it.

Convicts Work Outside by Grace of Governor

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Through the personal efforts of Peter Norbeck, Governor of South Dakota, a number of the convicts in the Sioux Falls Penitentiary are being given useful employment outside the prison walls. A number of the more trustworthy prisoners have been sent across the state to the Black Hills, where their services are being utilized in beautifying a state game preserve which is situated in the most romantic and most picturesque portion of the Black Hills.
