Texas Cattle Fond of Airplane "Dope"

Dallas, Tex.—Discovery that Texas cattle will eat the wings of an airplane if the machine is left unguarded is one of the reasons why a general order to "stick with the machine, no matter what happens" is impressed upon every cadet aviator training in Texas.

The fact that cows have an appetite for airplanes was discovered only after one or two machines had suffered a real loss from discriminating Texas cattle.

The wide, supporting planes are covered with a cellulose preparation that makes them airtight, "dope" is the technique of ails, "knope" and "dope" makes as tasty a meal for cows as the bovines have discovered for a long time.

Another reason for the order is that an airplane is a valuable piece of property with many detachable parts offering an attractive invitation to the cattle.

Souvenir hunters, however, are much more feared than thieves. Aviators who have made forced landings while on cross country flights say it requires their utmost vigilance to keep curious spectators from breaking up their "ships" and carrying them away piecemeal.

An aviator landed recently in a wheat field not far from here. The curiosity and interest in him was so great that in less than an hour the field was so crowded that the owner of the ground had to ask the Dallas police to clear the field to prevent his growing crop from being stamped into a total loss.

STEEL PRODUCERS WORK IN CONCERT WITH THE NATION

Willing to Be Heavily Taxed to Defend Liberty. Says Gary

New York, May 31.—Elbert H. Gary, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, speaking at the convention of that body here today, declared that the United States government and the steel producers were now working in complete harmony and understanding and that all suspicion toward the industry had been dissipated.

When Gary, discussing the question of taxation, said there was talk of doubling excess profits and income taxes and expressed the opinion that the steel men were willing to be heavily taxed to defend the rights and liberties of the world, provided the levies were equitably distributed and the money wisely expended.

"If we win this war," said the speaker, "it will not matter much, in dollars and cents, to us. If we lose the war, it will not matter much whether we have anything at all or not. The outlook is good. There is no occasion for gloom."

When history comes to be written in future years in a fair and unbiased way, the men who do the fighting behind those in the trenches and whose power is most felt in determining the war will be acclaimed as the steel and iron producers of America.

I recall the dark days of 1907 when we did not know where we stood with the government, but I am happy to say to-day that our general committee, working under the direction of the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, have been able to get fair decisions. Our unselfish attitude is appreciated at Washington. We have a steady customer and whose power is able to pay as he goes. We will win this war because we are right and do not seek conquest."

Soldier Sticks to Post While Comrades Sail

Frederick, Md.—More than a month ago an army truck toppled over and was wrecked on the mountain road between Hagerstown and McConellsburg. The officer in charge of the detachment looked sadly at the wreckage and picked out one of his most reliable privates. He instructed him to guard this truck "until further orders."

"Further orders" have never come. In the meantime the faithful soldier has stuck by his post. For a month and some days he has made a wrecked army truck his home. Some farmer's wife out of the kindness of her heart has been feeding this soldier.

Day in and day out the guard has stood by the wreck. His only pastime has been watching passing automobiles and reviewing in his mind the historic personages who have passed over this route. General Braddock, the doughty English officer, who was a victim of Indian strategy, and General Washington, both of the East End National famous in the history of the country passed over the road and by the point where this American soldier keeps his lonely vigil.

The outfit this soldier belongs to, it is stated, has gone to France, and he still sits there awaiting "further orders."

Captain Burt T. Jones stopped to question this soldier, who is keeping his solitary guard. He was principally attracted by the long set of waders he had which the soldier is hiding his face. His beard has grown thickly without the daily shave.

"Sleep?" said the private, in reply to the captain's question, "Why, captain, I didn't know there was so much sleep in the world as I have had in the past month. I believe I could stay awake now for a week. I am so fed up on sleep."

Captain Jones will report the case and it is expected that Jones will soon come to the faithful guard.
