

Hair Cutting to Cost 35 Cents, Barbers Agree

At the meeting of the Master Barbers' Association last night, held at 15 North Third street, it was decided to raise the price of a haircut to 35 cents. Heretofore it was possible to secure a haircut for a quarter in many shops and the highest price was 30 cents.

CHECK FOR $115 A check for $115 has been received by the local chapter of the American Red Cross from the Wednesday Afternoon Bridge Club as a contribution toward the war-work activities of the Red Cross organization.

EMPLOYEES MUST KEEP CORNS OFF

Says corns destroy efficiency but can be lifted right out now.

Many large retail establishments now insist that every employe have cornless feet, because one can not appear pleasant before a patron or be fully efficient when the brain is constantly reminded of these painful pests.

The simplest method known to date is to apply a few drops of freestone directly upon the tender, itching corn, which promptly relieves the soreness and soon the entire corn root and all, lifts out without pain.

A quarter ounce of freestone will cost very little at any drugstore but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is gummy but dries in a moment and seems to just shrivel up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

This should interest many men and women here.

"We've Created a Body of Master Tire Builders"

Uniform Tires or "Lottery" Tires? Decide Between Them Now—Once for All

Tires contain much handwork. Hence they must always differ in mileage as the men who build them differ. To make tires uniform—as Miller has done—"human variables" must go.

At one time Miller Tires varied as the others do. Now 99 Millers in 100 exceed the standard guarantee. Less than one per cent ever require adjustment.

Built by World Champions To make uniform tires requires uniform tire builders. It is not enough to drive out mechanical variables. Other good producers can do that—for the tire-making methods are known to all.

Miller Uniform Mileage Tires GEARED-TO-THE-ROAD

Only Enough for 1 in 50 Uniform tires can't be made at high speed. Picked men are rare. And thousands of workmen cannot all be champions. The more the men, the more the variables.

STOP INDIGESTION WITH BI-NESIA

Avoid Deadening Drugs and Artificial Digestants Pain in the stomach after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia, flatulence, gas, etc., are almost invariably due to acidity and food fermentation.

Bi-Nesia, which can be obtained from Geo. A. Gorgas or any other good druggist in either powder or tablet form. A teaspoonful of Bi-Nesia powder or two or three of the tablets taken in half a glass of hot water after eating, instantly neutralizes the acid, stops food fermentation, and thus enables the most confirmed dyspeptic to enjoy the heartiest meals without the slightest pain or inconvenience.

FLYING WITH SHAFFER

"EATING SNAILS"

LETTERS FROM A DAUPHIN BOY TO HIS MOTHER

Somewhere in France, April 9, 1918. Dear Mother—Enclosed are two pictures taken while we were at target practice yesterday. We used both machine guns and rifles, the latter being Winchester, and golly! how they did kick! The one picture shows me, along with the others, watching the results of the rifle hosts. The other picture is a Spad which turned upside down when landing. Rather hard on the plane but did not hurt the pilot any. Such accidents are regarded more in an amusing than anxious manner, as they are quite a usual occurrence in the school. This, however, happened since the weather had been bad for a week there is nothing to write about, and this loafing around is becoming very tiresome, as all the magazines have been finished long ago.

To add to our miseries, the 'cello or bass fiddler has acquired a violin, and he is a most consistent practitioner. If practice made a musician he should be a world-beater only he isn't. I believe he has learned to play "Oh, Johnny, Oh!" and "For Me and My Gal" so we can recognize—but not enjoy—them, hearing them on our petite phonograph was what started his ambitions.

Seeing me stretched out on my bunk plumb disgusted with life, one of my American comrades asked me what I would do if I were to be sent home. Knowing it was not in his power to give, I only grunted in reply. He still insisting, I remarked that business was to enjoy talking to her as much as I could have wished.

Tastes differ as well as people. This was brought home to me when we were working in the trenches. I saw a pretty girl, for my comrade tried every store in town for "snails," he being very fond of them; but since we were in the trenches, these "snails" are hard to get, and there were no snails. These slow insects—or animals—are actually eaten in France, the reason, I presume, is economic. Why, I could go right outside the barracks and gather a bushel. It's really sad how numerous they are, for even if there were girls here, they would knock all the romance out of the beautiful pine woods. For every time one sat down a hundred snails would be crushed, making one feel like a "chic" Zing in action.

Not to His Taste Dad sure does have some wild wild dreams, and the last one you spoke of, the wildes of all—my coming home in an airplane and landing on the dam. Like most dreams, it sure was inconsistent, for I fly a land plane now and landing in the water would surely be fatal.

Glad to hear that Typographical Union No. 14 appreciated my letter. That chocolate which called it forth is only a memory now, but a mighty sweet one, and in these days of "ennui" I sure would like to have it happen again. Yesterday we had quite a little exhibition and excitement. It occurred after I had finished a letter to you, and being late in the afternoon and having nothing to do naturally I felt hungry, so I was trying to make fudge with water, condensed milk and ingredients. Considering my knowledge of cooking and missing things needed, I was making a pretty fair stab at it, and then heard a motor start its song; something not to be mistaken once heard, as the noise is terrific, and since we had not heard this song for over a week I was sure it was the motor of a plane around close to the ground. Going full speed all the time, too—and that, believe me, is some speed! A crowd soon collected, naturally, and the mechanics pilots, officials and soldiers happening past. Even an American ambulance man was among the crowd. I honestly believe a crowd of this size in a desert island if there was incentive enough. Anyway, this pilot was sure using that Zing rough, pumping it up and down, diving straight down rolling out on his back side, and last, but not least, coming right at the crowd while going full speed and just skimming the ground. And this was the stunt that nearly proved his undoing for going at such terrific speed takes quick and minute calculation, for one cannot see his wheels, and has to sort of feel how close his wheels are to the ground. I mean he has to calculate quickly, and if the guess is six inches off there is liable to be sweet flowers and soft music.

Going Well However, he had done this several times, and did it well, too, for his wheels barely skimmed the ground at times. This I did not note for its smoothness in spots, and the one of the spots after he had straightened out from a steep dive to the ground—and busted one wheel clear off. No, it never failed the machine. I even doubt if the pilot knew he had only one wheel left, for he kept flying around as easily as before. But the officials and mechanics lost me, appraising him of his loss. One man was sent for a new wheel, while half a dozen others unfurled a big white sheet on which he was holding the one wheel over his head, thus showing up plainly against the white background. Not content with that, his arms and legs were waved to attract the man's attention in that "one-legged" Zing. He soon saw the commotion, and shutting his motor down glided down to see what all the excitement was about.

Right past the man on the cloth and not six feet above the ground he came, and then seeing what the matter was, turned on his motor and climbed up to get into position to land—on one wheel. And here was where the Morane airplane proved its superiority over other types, for

And then, just as every one thought he had rotted away with it, that one lonely and hard-worked wheel gave way 'neath the extra strain, and crumpled up like an egg shell, and the Morane fell to the ground as the axle stuck in the ground the plane slowly and gracefully stood up on its nose. And would you believe it, not a thing was broken, not a nut or a screw, not a bolt, the pilot is the lieutenant who balled me out the other day for doing foolish things over the "piste." I admit his criticism gave rise to a lot of new thoughts to his nerves, but that is all changed now, for I have nothing but admiration for his cool-headed flying, and can easily understand why he has eight Boche to his credit. Just such incidents as these are what make flying so interesting—there is always a chance that one may get away with it, and one never knows when it will be put to the test. Like a woman, it's the uncertainty that appeals. One never knows what she will do next.

MANY GUNS ARE CONFISCATED

State Game Commission Officers Have Taken Almost a Thousand From Aliens

Fully 1,000 guns and revolvers and numerous other weapons have been confiscated by the state authorities acting under the acts forbidding un-naturalized aliens from owning or possessing firearms since the ratification of the year. The bulk of these weapons have been confiscated by the state game wardens, who are charged with the enforcement of the law by the State Game Commission.

In some cases state policemen acting in conjunction with the game officials took the guns. They have been shipped to officers of the Game Commission here and range from flint locks to modern rifles. A number of these guns have been confiscated in Dauphin and Cumberland counties and on a recent raid Dr. Henry M. Stone, one of the Dauphin County Commissioners, accompanied the officers.

In the same period the state's game wardens or state policemen have brought 475 prosecutions against foreigners having firearms in their possession. The policy of the commission is not to have foreigners with suits, but to pick out people as examples and impose fines while others are instructed as to what they must do. Probably 300 suits have been brought against foreigners for having dogs which is against a recent act of assembly.

Ever since the passage of the alien gun law several years ago, the state which was designed to check reckless use of firearms by foreigners the state has been clearing out guns and last year's act, which extended the prohibition to revolvers and other firearms brought in dozens of pistols of all styles. The state game authorities have been most active in their crusade against foreigners having weapons in industrial centers where murders have been more or less frequent.
