

CIVIC CLUB ASKS TREE PROTECTION

Wants Committee Appointed to Care For Trees Adding So Much to the City's Beauty

The destruction of many of the city's most beautiful trees by recent storms was discussed at length yesterday at the June meetings of the board of directors of the Civic Club. The corresponding secretary, Miss Eleanor Shunk, was authorized to write the Park Commission, asking that a plan be devised for safeguarding the trees of the city, and requesting that a committee be appointed, the members of which shall serve without pay, whose duty it shall be to preserve and care for the trees which add so much to the beauty of the city streets.

These special schools and has furnished one of the two looms used for rugs and provides a daily lunch of crackers and milk for these pupils. Miss Martha Wolf Buchler, chairman of the Outdoor Department, reported that $50 has been raised for the war gardens, and Mrs. Mabel Cronise Jones, of the Program and Year Book Committee, stated that the program for the coming year will have some surprises of much interest to club members.

PEOPLE OF U. S. AT WAR ON HUNS, LANSING ASSERTS

Secretary of State Draws Piteous Indictment on Germany and Treachery

Washington, June 11.—The last shreds of the one-time dominant theory of the Administration here in Washington that the United States is not at war with the German people have at last been swept away. It is admitted now that much has gone on in Germany which the world ought to have perceived, but did not. There is no longer any doubt that the Prussian aim of world dominion has "dazzled, with its anticipated glories and by its promise of a boasted racial superiority, the German millions when were to be the instruments of achievement."

It is recognized now that the war must go on, not alone until the "arrogant and brutal Prussians are humbled," not alone until the Kaiser and his military chiefs despair of their ambitions, but "until the German people realize that their insolent lords are not touched by divine fire and do not have at their command the powers of heaven."

It would seem that at last the Administration has recognized that the German people are fighting because they believe implicitly in the teachings of the Prussians that the German people are a super-race, destined to be rulers of the universe. These doctrines and hopes are dominant over the German people and will not die until the leaders they blindly but faithfully follow have been crushed deep in irrevocable defeat.

To Secretary of State Lansing was delegated the authority to speak yesterday for the President and the Administration in Washington, and convincing that there should be no further illusions about the war. It was, indeed, a notable address the Secretary of State delivered at Union College, Schenectady. The announcement was followed here in Washington as if it had emanated from the White House itself.

Germany has already indicted Mr. Lansing drew a piteous indictment of Germany, laying bare some new secrets of the despicable intrigue which centered in the German embassy in Washington during all the days which preceded our entry into the war. He admitted that for a time the United States was duped by the military clique in Berlin, "because dishonesty of a war sort seemed to us inconceivable in these days of internal honor and Christian civilization." But the United States will never be caught again, the head of the State Department added, in such a net of duplicity as was spread over the world by the Berlin government.

"We have learned our lesson and it has cost us dear," he added. "We will never have to learn it again." The bitterness with which Secretary Lansing denounced German "kult" and the relations with such governments as have controlled Germany in the last 150 years would be impossible in the future, created a lasting impression here, not only among Government officials, but upon the Allied diplomats as well. The latter saw in the Lansing address the final and irrevocable dedication of America to a war which shall not end until the German war lords have been destroyed and the whole spirit of Prussianism driven from the world.

The speech also represented the beginning of a definite program of arousing the American people to a full realization of what Prussianism has meant to the world in the past and what it threatens to-day. Coming as it does, at a time when there has appeared to be a softening of the "knock-out" policy of Great Britain, the Secretary of State's address should rally the Allies anew to the idea that there can be no negotiated peace with a Germany which, as it exists to-day, is an outcast among the nations and can never be trusted again.

HUNS MAKING STEADY ADVANCE

French war office, reached the "vicinity" of this stream. This marked the limit of their advance, however, and the French immediately attacked and drove the enemy back to the line passing through Belloy, south of St. Maur, south of Marquellise and Vandeloire. The village of Mery, west of Belloy, was retaken by the French on Monday night.

This part of the battle front, however, is apparently not the most menacing to the French. It is further east that the Germans seem to be making their most telling gains. Here, along the right bank of the Oise, they have reached Antoval, a village which lies on the crest of the hills above the important town of Ribecourt, which lies on low, flat lands to the west of the Oise. The French admit that the "line of re-distance to the west and south of Ribecourt" has been withdrawn in consequence.

Battle at Critical Stage
This movement has not resulted as yet, according to reports, in the withdrawal of the French lines east of the Oise from the Ourscamp and Carlepoint forests, strong positions from which the French defended their positions in the earlier attempts of the Germans to cross the Oise south of Sempiigny.

The battle in the new area may now be considered as having definitely entered its critical stage, as in the Somme, Flanders and Aisne combats the third and fourth days of offensive were most menacing to the from which the French defended at that operation in which the Germans are now engaged constitutes a very serious blow at the allied lines from the Oise to the Marne, as well as threatening the level country in the rear of the present battle line. Before this can be reached, however, the Germans may encounter even greater resistance than they have overcome since their offensive began
