MURDER DONE BY CHILDREN SHOWN IN HUN REPORT

Terrifying Increase of Crime Set Forth in Official Paper

Washington, June 18.—Terrifying increase of crime in Germany at the time when the casualty lists at the front are the heaviest of the war is described in a remarkable compilation of reports that have just been received by the Government.

These reports have as their high spot the record of murders committed by children. One report includes the startling address before the Diet of Darmstadt of Herr Frederick von Ewald, Minister of Justice for Hesse, in which he declared that the war was demoralizing the civilian population of the empire and that crimes committed by the young were "terrifying."

He said that the moral laws were being set at naught by growing numbers of both sexes and that the cancer of crime was causing the greatest anxiety to those responsible for the administration of the laws. He dwelt with particular emphasis upon murders committed by children and quoted the following statistics from his own jurisdiction: Heavy sentences passed upon criminals less than 19 years of age: During the year 1915 there were 285, in 1916 there were 347, in 1917 the total was 461. Sentences of children for less serious crimes were as follows: In 1914, 585; in 1915, 1,145; in 1916, 2,895; in 1917, 2,912.

The report upon highway robberies and burglaries in Germany shows these crimes to be particularly daring in the large cities, although some of the most aggravated offenses and burglaries in Germany have been committed in small towns and in country villages. The report of the burglary insurance department of the Frankfurt general insurance company, for instance, shows an amazing crescendo of burglaries.

GAS FUMES KILL TWO. Pittsburgh, June 18.—Two river policemen were found dead in their launch on the Monongahela river, near Homestead, yesterday. Death was probably caused by gasoline fumes from the boat's engine, which the officers left running when they tied up to shore during a heavy storm. The dead men, employed by the Carnegie Steel Company, are William Collins, of Homestead, and Lee Smith, of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Frank Payne is home after a brief trip to Philadelphia and vicinity.
