HOUSE VOTES WILSON POWER TO TAKE WIRES

Resolution Hurried Through During Five-Hour Bitter Fight

Washington, July 6.—The resolution giving President Wilson the power to take over the telephone, cable and radio facilities of the nation was jammed through the House of Representatives during a five hours' fight last evening and while the members of both branches of Congress were trying to bring about an agreement for a recess.

The vote on the resolution was 221 to 4, but before it was finally passed the measure was changed at length, every amendment being the result of a compromise hurriedly reached in an effort to stifle the debate.

Four Votes Against The four members who voted against giving the President the power he asked were Representatives Joseph W. Forney, of Michigan; James C. McLaughlin, of Michigan; John A. Sterling, of Illinois, and Frank P. Woods, of Iowa, all of whom are Republicans.

The amended resolution will come up in the Senate to-day. In the shape in which it finally passed the House it gives the President the power he asks, provides that when the wires are taken over the companies shall be compensated up to seventy-five per cent of the appraised value of their plants while the compensation is under adjudication in the courts and provides that state taxation and regulation of the lines shall continue to be in force.

Heads Off Strike During the five hours of bitter debate over the resolution the Democratic members fought shy of alluding to the strike of the Western Union operators, which has been called for next Monday. It was only after he had been pinned down by the Republican floor leaders that Representative Sims, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and in charge of the bill, admitted that his purpose in urging the immediate passage of the measure was to prevent the tying up of the activities of the country through the strike.

The resolution was passed with very little more discussion after his statement.

RECOMMENDS HOME RULE IN INDIA

London, July 6.—Edwin Samuel Montagu, secretary of state for India, in a report submitted to the government yesterday recommends the adoption of home rule in India.

BASS FISHING IS HIT BY WEATHER

Stream Conditions Interfered With Good Catches on Start of Season

Weather conditions interfered to a certain extent in the opening of the new bass season, the first under the Pennsylvania fish code of 1917, but some good catches of the game fish were reported, especially from the streams which had been stocked by the State Game Commission in the last two years. Owing to the storms the waters in the Susquehanna and some of the western streams were not satisfactory for good bass fishing, but the end of the week finds them getting back to normal and the fish inclined to bite.

The new limits on the bass are not expected to cause much trouble as the state fish wardens received instructions in regard to enforcement of the trout limits and it is not anticipated that there will have to be much recourse to law. The strict manner in which the trout law was enforced by the game protectors, state police and forest rangers acting in cooperation with the fish wardens has had a good effect all over the state and their activity in arresting bass fishermen who went out before July 1 brought down illegal fishers who received scant sympathy.

"We are going to get some data on the trout season, which seems to have been productive of good sport in districts where we have been planting trout. The catch of brook and brown trout was fine in many counties," said Commissioner of Fisheries Nathan R. Buller. "The bass season was hit by unseasonable weather at the start, but I have no fears about it. I think it will be good and the new season will work out well. All we ask is adherence to the length and catch limits. If the fishermen will help us we will be able to do still more for them. The illegal fishers and dynamite should be reported promptly. We will do our best to make examples of them."

The Government Wants The "Skip-Stop" Enforced. This is to help save in the street car service. There will be greater difficulties to come, which we can all expect, but a car fare in proportion to the present costs of operation will help some to maintain the service. It gives you an idea of one of the many things the street car business is up against. Scarcity of cars, materials and fuel, highest prices ever known for anything in the street car business. We are certain the people want to help to keep the street car service in the best condition possible. —and the five cent fare still in force—despite these tremendous burdens, causing constantly increasing costs of operation. Lack of necessary income will do much the other way. It is better to have a car fare that will pay expenses. Harrisburg Railways Company
