New York's Deputy Attorney General on Stand in the Propaganda Quiz

Washington, Dec. 19.—Alfred Becker, deputy attorney general of New York, appeared to-day before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee investigating German propaganda. Hearing of his testimony was expected to occupy all of to-day's session and a portion of to-morrow.

Members of the investigating committee intimated to-day that the hearings would adjourn after hearing Mr. Becker until after the Christmas recess.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES

"My Company," by Captain Carroll Swan (Houghton Mifflin Co.), contains many humorous anecdotes of our boys at the front. "I heard Harry Evans," writes Captain Swan, "a tall, lanky Yankee boy from the wilds of New Hampshire, with red New England Farmer wit, one day joshing another boy in this way: 'You will be walking down Tremont street with the old derby on and a big, flaming red necktie, then you will spot the girl just going into Huylers for an ice cream soda. She will turn around to see her hero. You will swell up. Then Jack, your hated rival, will sneak up behind you and holler 'gas.' You, like a big sink will forget where you are, knock off the lid with one hand, and shove the tie up in your face with the other.'"

Would Sinking the Ships Surrendered by Teutons

Paris, Dec. 19.—The American delegates to the peace Congress have resolved to advocate the sinking of the surrendered enemy warships and resist any proposition to distribute them on the basis of naval losses. This announcement is made by those in close touch with the American representatives who, it is added, feel that such a position would result in avoiding contention and materially support President Wilson's declaration that the war was not based on aggression or the acquisition of property.

England, through Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, had previously acquiesced in the American plan to destroy the captured or surrendered warships, and it is declared, will continue to support the United States, although it is expected that some of the lesser naval powers will demand that the prizes be distributed.
