FINING OF TAX STATEMENTS TO START IN WEEK

Four Experts to Explain How to Fill Out Large Blanks

Four tax experts will arrive in Harrisburg Monday to assist residents in the vicinity in making out their income tax statements, which must be filed at the office of the Internal Revenue Collector by March 15, by every single man whose income is $1,000 and every married man whose salary exceeds $2,000. The tax experts will give their advice free to those who call at the office of the Internal Revenue Collector, in the Post office.

The income tax blanks will be received at the office of the revenue collector this week or early next week. Few persons will have any difficulty in answering without assistance the first twelve questions shown on the blank. When it comes to filling out the table that follows question 13 and the table in which the tax is computed, some persons may need help before they can make correct answers. The taxpayers will find that the return blank is printed on a sheet of paper nearly two feet long, folded twice, blank spaces on the front and back of the first page must be filled out and the page detached and sent to the collector.

The second page, called the "work sheet" contains the same questions as the first page, but to fill this out first so that the mistakes that may be made may be corrected in making out the form to be sent to the collector. The third page of the form, which contains instructions for the guidance of the taxpayers, and should be read with the reading of the form, is also printed on the collector.

Much Work

The letters "A," "B" and "C" are referred to in column one of the return blank. The schedule table under question 13 of the return blank, which is to be filled out, contains instructions for the information called for in columns 2, 3 and 4. In the table under question 13 will be easily understood from the reading. When it comes to giving the rate asked for in column 6 of the table, under the heading "Rate of tax (appreciation) and depletion charged off," this explanation may be helpful: The Department of Internal Revenue has a sort of amortization table in which the value of buildings and other property is estimated. The life of a modern skyscraper, construction of brick and stone, is estimated to last to be fifty years, while that of frame building is estimated at twenty years. The rate of wear and tear is determined by charging off each year a certain percentage of the value of the property, and dividing that by the cost of property. The other columns in this table explain themselves.

Leaving filled out all the other blanks of the return, the taxpayer finds near the bottom of the first page the heading, "Calculation of Tax." This particular form, it must be borne in mind, is for the taxpayer having a net income of more than $5,000. Of this amount $1,000 of the income of a single man is exempt from taxation, and $2,000 of the income of a married man. Therefore, in this class of taxpayers there is left to be taxed, in the case of a single man, the difference between the amount of the exemption and the amount of the income, at the rate of six per cent. In the case of a married man, he will pay tax on the difference between the exemption of $2,000 and the remainder of the income at the above same rate. Every married man must make a return if his income equals or exceeds $5,000, and every single man must do so if his income equals or exceeds $1,000.

Special Provisions

Then, in calculating the tax, the taxpayer should add all of the deductions to which he is entitled, subtract the sum from his total income, and the remainder will be the amount on which he will have to pay a six per cent tax. If the taxpayer is a farmer, there is a special provision in the list of instructions. The farmer must obtain from his collector and fill out so-called "farm income and expenses" and transfer the net farm income set down on a special schedule to line 21 of Schedule A on page 3 of the return sent to the collector.

The taxpayer whose income exceeds $4,000 and does not exceed $5,000 must make the return on Form 1,040, instead of the form described, which is form 1,040-A, if the entire family exemption has been claimed in a separate return by either the wife or the husband. He must use form 1,040-A does not provide all the facts he has to report, as, for example, if the income from a partnership or personal services in connection with a fiscal year falling partly in 1917 and partly in 1918.

Straley was the plaintiff and E. M. Neely the defendant, both men being from New Oxford. After three deliberations the jury brought in a verdict fixing the plaintiff $50 and dividing the costs between the parties. The court refused to accept this, indicating that it was not the part of the jury in this matter to dispose of the costs. They then retired and soon brought a verdict of $50 with interest from a certain date. This also was refused, Judge McPherson telling them that the exact amount of the interest had to be stated. A third verdict to the jury room and finally brought in their verdict of $50 damages, with interest amounting to $5.25.

CLEMENCEAU TELLS HOW HE WAS SHOT

encau's life of Bolsheviki origin? is a question being insistently asked here. The Matin-to-day recalls that a few days ago a Geneve newspaper announced that the Bolsheviki in Lausanne, Switzerland, were plotting against M. Clemenceau's life and told two Bolsheviki had crossed the frontier to carry out the plan.

The Paris police, the Petit Parisien says, were warned some time ago that a plot was being hatched against the premier's life. It states that the wife of a member of the French consular service formerly stationed in Russia in the Russian library in the Avenue Godebail a fortnight ago and overheard a discussion which made her say that an attack on the premier was in preparation.

The premier, however, had had of what she had heard and he told the police, who assured him that the persons in question would be closely watched.

His enforced inaction is weighing heavily upon the premier, however, and the doctors find him a bad patient, unwilling to obey all their orders. He insisted on receiving visitors all day yesterday and in discussing current business with Stephen Pichon, the foreign minister, who called upon him late in the evening for the third time after the shooting.

The woman informed her husband as to whether the Supreme Council should sit their afternoon, as had been arranged, and expressed the wish that the decision be left to the delegates of the other great powers. Consequently Paul Dutasta, the general secretary of the peace conference, was instructed to call upon the American, British Italian and Japanese delegations and get their views.

It was considered prudent early today that the delegates would suggest waiting for a few days before resuming their work.

Personally M. Clemenceau is impatient to resume his place at the head of the conference. As he refers to the subject in his conversation with those around him he gives the impression of believing that he will be taking his chair at the sittings again in four or five days, for he keeps repeating "it is nothing."

The Premier's mood occasionally gives him much pain. He bears this exceptionally well, and the twinges do not impair his customary good humor. Thus, shortly after he was wounded when one of his colleagues came to see him the Premier, smiling broadly, remarked:

"The Maharaja of Bikaner permits me to hunt the tiger in his country. Well it is the anarchists who have hunted 'the tiger,' but they missed him."

Sends For Nun

The Premier yesterday sent for Sister Therese, the nun who nursed him when he was operated on a few years ago, and she is attending him. He spent the day yesterday in his armchair, but asked that his favorite old grandfather's chair should be brought up from his country house at Bernouville.

The Premier's mind never is clearer nor his thought more rapid. He discusses his wound and his symptoms technically, just as if they were those of another person. If the early reports regarding the Premier's condition are borne out by the later examinations it would appear that after a period of convalescence M. Clemenceau will be able to resume his activities about the time that President Wilson and Premiers Lloyd George and Orlando return to Paris. Meanwhile the French Premier's absence from the Supreme Council takes away the last Premier of the European powers at the Peace Conference.

Vice-President to Take Chair

One of the four vice-presidents elected at the time Premier Clemenceau was chosen president of the conference—Premiers Lloyd George and Orlando, Secretary of State Lansing and Marquis Saloni—will preside over the full conference if it is found necessary to hold a plenary session before the recovery of the French Premier. The chief of ten, Stephen Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, will for the time being represent France, with Jules Cambon or Andre Tardieu as second in line.

Stricken at Grave Moment

Premier Clemenceau was stricken at the very moment he was starting for a meeting that might have had a decisive influence in systematizing the problems of the conference so as to lead the course of the transactions of the body from war conditions and to a state of peace. It appeared, indeed, that British, American, Italian and French sentiment was crystallizing on plans to take in hand the construction of the actual peace treaty, and this would undoubtedly have been one of the chief subjects discussed at the conference set for 10 o'clock yesterday morning with Premier Clemenceau.

Arthur J. Balfour, the British Foreign Secretary; Colonel E. M. House, of the American Peace Mission, and Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister as participants.

May Delay World Peace

The preliminary soundings on this question had already been taken and the prospect seemed good for the decision upon an efficient procedure that would secure results within a short time from all the conference commissions, permitting the early drafting of the essentials of the peace treaty—perhaps by the time of President Wilson's return from America. In such an event the enemy delegates could have been called in by April and the actual peace consummated by early summer.

First Thought of Duty

One of Premier Clemenceau's first thoughts after being shot was "Cold Cause Grip and Influenza"
