Needle and Thread Lodge in Throat of Pet Cat

Chambersburg, Pa., March 5.—A mysterious illness overtook the pet cat of the family of Edgar Fuller, post carrier at the local post office, on last Wednesday. For three days, the cat refused to eat and Mr. Fuller decided to forestall the suffering of starvation by chloroforming the pet. Just before he administered the poison he noticed a lump on the cat's throat and instead of giving the feline a full dose of chloroform he gave it only enough to overcome it and then proceeded to perform an operation on its neck. When he cut the neck open he extracted a needle with a long thread attached to it. He then closed the wound and greased it and in a short time the cat recovered consciousness, looked around and then ate a hearty meal. Mr. Fuller had missed the needle and thread but had no idea that the pet had tried to swallow it.
