

SADLER TALKS OF ROAD PLANS

Asks Counties to Co-operate to a Greater Extent With the State Department

Harrisburg, March 18.—County authorities in Pennsylvania were today called upon by Highway Commissioner Lewis S. Sadler for greater efforts in construction of secondary highways. Numerous delegations have been to interview him and millions of dollars pledged. The Commissioner said in his statement: "Within a few days Governor Sproul will announce the trans-Pennsylvania north-south and east-west highways which are to be consti-

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! Is tongue coated, breath feverish and stomach sour?

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

For Colds, Grip and Influenza

Take

"Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets"

Be sure you get the Genuine

Look for this signature

E. W. Grove

on the box. 30c.

Three Times a Week For Three Weeks

After the long winter months, too much rich food and too little exercise, practically everyone feels the necessity for a good Spring Tonic and Blood Purifier. This very best spring medicine you can take is the king of tonic laxatives—

CELERY KING

Three times a week for three weeks, brew a cup of this purely vegetable laxative tea and drink it just before retiring. Gently, yet effectively, it will drive out all impurities and not only make you feel better, but look better, right away, giving you a sweet breath, clear skin and a healthy appetite.

Carter's Little Liver Pills

You Cannot be Constipated and Happy

A Remedy That Makes Life Worth Living

ABSENCE of Iron in the Blood is the reason for many colorless faces but

CARTER'S IRON PILLS will greatly help most pale-faced people

Riverside Garage

Rear 1417-19-21 North Front Street, Harrisburg, Pa.

Storage and Accessories

BELL 3731-R

GEORGE R. BENTLEY, Proprietor.

PAUL H. BENTLEY, Manager.

tion caused Berlin shop-keepers to regard a royal command to send goods on approval in anything but a joyful spirit; and small wonder for many times out of ten their good offices, expense, and loss of time are thrown away.

Thus, to mention only one instance, the Empress ordered four or five metropolitan business houses, making a specialty of infants' ware and furniture, to dispatch to the palace a variety of cradles and small brass bedsteads suitable for the child she expected. As may be imagined, the firms so honored fairly outdid themselves in the race to furnish the finest and latest on hand.

Twelve hours after the royal command had been given out, a succession of furniture vans rolled into our courtyard, and a bazaar, filled with lovely creations in the layette line—as the salespeople uniformly put it—was soon established in one of the big halls.

Among these treasures Her Majesty wandered for a week or ten days, selecting this or that one minute and rejecting it an hour later. The embarrassed riches bewilderment and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

"Kammerherr von der Knesbeck spoke up at this juncture. 'The Kaiser,' he said, 'remarked this morning that he was quite unable to decide on a birthday present for Her Majesty. Why not propose that he assume payment of this bill? It will save His Majesty the trouble of choosing among a hundred and one offerings by the different purveyors and right Your Excellency's budget, which is, after all, the main thing.'

Her Majesty, who had been jumping at this chance, and the ball was set rolling after the old-ap-

proven style, viz.: the entire palace camarilla combined to persuade the Emperor "that it was his all-gracious will and command to present the Kaiserin, on the occasion of her birthday, with three certain robes de chambre," the price of which exceeded his chancellor's annual salary.

Many readers will think Kaiser William too proud and self-assertive a personage to be wheeled. Let those doubters consider the court recipe for such acts of gentle ingratitude and own themselves sold. It runs somewhat after the fashion of Genesis, chapter IV, verse 18: "And Trud begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech," etc. Herr von der Knesbeck told Baron Mirbach, Baron Hirschbach told the Kaiser's court marshal, the court marshal told the master of ceremonies, the master of ceremonies told the royal house marshal, the royal house marshal told the vice-grand-master of ceremonies, the vice-grand-master of ceremonies told the seneschal, the seneschal told the chief of cabinet, the chief of cabinet told the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The three dressing gowns were ranked into the royal palace—one literally came off the Kaiserin's back—and found immediate favor with William, who was just then contemplating his order of cabinet, creating the chief of the Maison Militaire, the chief of the Maison Militaire told the imperial adjutants, and the whole set dined it into the all-highest ears until the Emperor thought it his own "most gracious" idea, and consequently little short of divine inspiration.

The winter's round of festivities usually left the Empress' exchequer in more than the ordinary state of

Alms. Bankrupt the Exchequer One day Grand-master von Mirbach received the Vienna tailor's and milliner's bill with its four noughts, and for a at that "The poor Baron," says an eye-witness, "was nearly knocked silly when he read the figures. 'Woher nehmen und nicht stehlen?' ("How can I pay this without resorting to thievery?") he cried, after partly recovering his composure; 'our treasury is as empty as a cornet's who spends his allowance in advance; I hardly know how to pay Her Majesty's laundry bills for the ensuing three months.'

The Private Life of the Kaiser

FROM THE PAPERS AND DIARIES OF THE BARONESS VON LARISCH-REDDERN

The Kaiser and Kaiserin's Late Major Dame, Chief of the Royal Household at Berlin and Potsdam.

Baroness von Larisch-Reddern is the TRUE name of the Berlin Court Lady who gave the story of the Kaiser to Henry William Fisher, Ursula, Countess von Eppinghoven being a non de guerre, heretofore used to shield her.

Thompson Feature Service, 1919, Copyright.

[Continued from Yesterday.]

Like her forbidden books, the Empress' private letters are a constant source of annoyance to her retinue. Having a habit of leaving the most intimate missives lying around on toilet tables and in bathroom, Kaiserin never hesitates to accuse the person on duty in the rooms of reading them, and of spying upon her, when at last she recollects the incidents of such scenes are matters of daily occurrence, the host of officials and waiting women doom them hardly worth talking about.

Her Majesty a Religious Woman. Alas, and alack, for the chimeras of this world! Common folks have troubles of their own, and piqued by thousand and one vexations and discomforts, torment others into a like unhappy state; it is a detestable but not unpardonable habit; but what about the rich and mighty causing gloom and dejection for the mere pleasure of the thing?

Her Majesty is a very religious woman, and it is but natural that she commands her people to attend divine service on Sundays. With this the great majority would gladly conform, but for the fact that they have, obviously no time for their devotions. The men and women must be at their Majesty's beck and call until the very second they drive out; that is, up to 9.45 a. m.

Her Majesty decided to arrange for a special service to be held at the Palace, and we ladies of the court received the agreeable commission to report truants. It is a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to appear on all these occasions in different styles of dress.

At a matter of fact, Auguste Victoria wears evening dress in Germany, where evening dress is quite the proper thing, if not the obligatory one, on all occasions of ceremony or social intercourse of a higher order.

Another there were four principal meals at the Berlin court, three of which were usually attended by guests and the highest officials of the household. The Kaiserin made it a point to