Corporal Hill Secures the German Iron Cross

Corporal Gordon R. Hill, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer D. Hill, 525 South Sixteenth street, having just returned from France where he was gassed during the battle of St. Mihiel. He killed a German officer and found him to have been the possessor of a War Cross and a number of other medals. Corporal Hill also has in his possession a lot of the German propaganda distributed by German aviators while the American boys were fighting. His most valuable souvenirs were stolen from his kit bag on his trip home. He has been gassed three times but says he is perfectly willing to go back if Uncle Sam should ever want him again.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer D. Hill and Mr. Hill's brother, Corporal Gordon Hill, were guests last evening of Capt. and Mrs. S. T. Moore at 428 Bridge street, New Cumberland.

RAILROAD MEN IN SECOND CONCERT

Last Night's Musicale Is Big Success Under Leadership of Ira W. Behney

Undaunted by driving storms, snow and rain and hail, a brave band of music lovers heard the second annual concert of the Pennsylvania Railroad Concert Company in the Technical High school last night. The large number of people who turned out in the face of the inclement weather were high in their praise of the concert, pronouncing it one of the best home talent affairs that has been given in Harrisburg in a long while.

The club was under the leadership of Ira W. Behney, J. Stewart Black was at the piano. Taken all in all, under Mr. Behney's leadership and with Mr. Black's sympathetic, unerring accompaniment, the concert was a real musical treat and the musical epics presented most assuredly availed themselves of every crumb of persistent applause on the part of the hearers brought many encores from the singers. In fact, every selection called for an encore and in the case of R. C. Smith, baritone soloist, he was compelled to give six encores before he was allowed to leave the platform.

Because of the absence of C. N. Jackson, the place on the program allotted to him was taken by the club with a unique and wholly enjoyable sonophone concert. J. W. Sheaffer, with white wig and cane, gave a fine impersonation of an old Hoosier, reading James Whitcomb Riley's familiar "Romance." W. Gibson, Mr. Meyer, Mr. Smith and Mr. Byler sang in quartet, Nevin's beautiful "Rosary," without which no glee club concert is complete.

They were followed by F. G. Swamer, who sang "A Dream Fancie," and the entire company who sang "Rose of My Heart," and "Lucky Jim," as an encore. Sheaffer was again called to the front, pleasing the audience with several fine impersonations. The club sang Brun Iahn's stirring "Invictus," a clarion call to all disappointed souls. It recalled to many fortunate folk, the marvelous presentation of the same song by Mme. Schumann-Heink on a recent appearance in Harrisburg.

The undoubted hit of the evening was Robert C. Smith, baritone, who sang Gartner's "Oh, Trusting Eyes." Vociferous applause called him back for five encores of popular songs and a brief speech.

Coleridge-Taylor's "Viking Song" was presented as the closing number.
