To-day and To-morrow — Theda Bara in "The Light" Friday and Saturday — "The Christian."

Of particular interest will be the appearance at the Orpheum to-day, matinee and night, of David Warfield in "The Auctioneer." Warfield in a popular revival of "The Auctioneer." It was in this character-comedy by Lee Arthur and Charles Klein that Mr. Warfield made his first deep impression on the theatergoing public seventeen years ago. His impersonation of Simon Levi will always remain in the memory as it is a supreme interpretation, and one harks back to it perhaps as the best thing that has ever been done. At all events Mr. Warfield has never been seen in a more human or appealing character. His reappearance in "The Auctioneer" this season is giving the older generation of playgoers an opportunity to relive some of their pleasant memories and the young people, a chance to witness one of the most famous actors who ever lived. The role of Simon Levi is a very human one, depicting a quiet, humorous and lovable old Hebrew, who never hesitates to get the best of a business transaction, but whose concern for those closest to him, causes him many unhappy moments, even final poverty, which he accepts with appealing courage and cheerfulness.

Once more local playgoers are to have that most talked of play in all America for a limited engagement of 3 performances. Tuesday and Wednesday matinees, April 22nd and 23rd, where it will be presented by the Messers, William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, at the Orpheum Theater.

"Experience" is from the pen of George V. Hobart, a well known writer of farces and musical comedies. It is a play which has been in the pen of the gifted playwright and writer that has endured for so many seasons.

In Mr. Hobart's play he has chosen to show the journey of Youth along the Primrose Path, which inevitably confronts all who go forth into the world. At the very gates of the city, he is confronted with those closest to him, which one of them to choose. One is the road to Fame with Ambition as his guide, the other the Primrose Path, with Pleasure, symbolized as a beautiful young woman, as the very enticing magnet. Youth goes with her and we see him

Today is the last chance to see "Courtling Days" the musical comedy at the Majestic. Almost a week ago this sketch set to music. The play opens with a rippling song and closes with the new song hit this company is introduced.

Another act which is demanding prominent attention is that presented by Bennett and Richards, burnt cork comedians who have a novelty presentation. This is the act which demanded highest scores from the audience during its experience.

Others on the bill include Charlie Deighan, equilibrist; Chinks and Minnie Kaufman, who are engaged in a musical offering and Pearl White in "The Lightning Raider."

"The Lion and the Mouse," which plays at the Colonial for the last time to-day has been attracting more than city-wide attention. Alice Joyce, the jovial film star plays the leading role in this unusual picture.

Of the many stage plays that have come and gone within the past several years, "The Lion and the Mouse" has been the only play to receive a matinee at the Orpheum. When this play was on the stage, people paid an average price of $2 a seat to view it. It was then produced in three scenes.

Many of the Colonial patrons who viewed the picture this week remarked that they had an advantage in the moving pictures have on the stage as there are at least 300 different settings used in the film production.

Theda Bara, in a strong play of the depths of human emotions, cast in a role which allows her to reach the utmost at Victoria heights of her great screen power, is seen at the Victoria Theater tomorrow in a new William Fox picture, "The Light."

This picture relates in an intensely dramatic and gripping fashion, of the meteoric career of a notorious, beautiful woman of Paris who is regenerated and brought from darkness to light, and from the depths of iniquity to the clear day of righteousness through the instrumentality of a veteran of the Great War. Billed himself as showing in American sports the truths of a righteous life and in his own way he shows a purity Parisian girl the error of her ways.

Dead Man's Canon No Longer Dread of Motorists
[From the Rocky Mountain News.]
The traveler of to-day motoring smoothly and swiftly along the graceful curves through "Dead Man's Canon," one of the most delightful and romantic spots on the Canon City-Colorado Springs highway, little imagines or realizes the mystery and fear and dread which for a half century pervaded this lonely and secluded region hidden in the hills.

Fifty-six years ago this spring an old man named Harkins operated a sawmill in this canon on the Little Fontaine creek in El Paso county. One day he went to his mill and never returned. A few days later his body was found with his head split open with an ax or hatchet.

From that day to this the place has been called "Dead Man's Canon," and some of the more superstitious even think that the fiery red of the soil in the canon owes its origin to the blood of old man Harkins. And firmly rooted in the minds of the natives of those hills has been the belief that since that day the ghost of the murdered man might appear in the canon, sometimes on foot, but most frequently mounted on a white horse.

Persons of undoubted veracity contend that on various occasions they have seen this phantom rider, and one person is said to have lost his reason after an adventure with this mysterious stranger one dark and stormy night in the canon.

Certain it is that before the modern road builder came and the autoist in ever-increasing numbers thronged this highway, the lone traveler who "Dead Man's Canon" a wide berth at night and usually avoided it altogether by a circuitous route.

The mysterious killing of Harkins in the early spring of 1863 being retold of terror in south central Colorado such as has never been known before or since. The sparsely settled region from South Park to the New Mexico border became panic-stricken on account of a series of cruel and unprovoked murders, in which it is

Rickenbacker America's Greatest Ace

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, America's Ace of Aces, will appear at the Orpheum to-morrow evening to relate his own story of his wonderful achievements while in command of the "Sigsbee" Aero Squadron. All the coveted decorations of exceptional distinction have been awarded to the former auto racing champion who was among the first to answer the President's call in his honor which is abundantly pictured by slides and movies. Captain Rickenbacker graphically relates how he was shot down in his official record and why 69 others are placed to the credit of his squadron.

plunging along the Primrose Path, trading on the petals of fair girls, with music in the air and the best delights of the most Pleasure-bim delirious, Beauty, Fashion, Intoxication, and many other fascinating attractions, he is forced to choose between the voice of Love and Ambition, bring him back to the straight and narrow path, or to the little cottage at the end of the rainbow, where Youth and Hope await him.

Baseball is the prescription which William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Knights of Columbus War Activities Committee, would apply to Russia's overworked anarchists and general disturbers of the peace.

"One of the things that sticks in my memory after spending several months on the other side going from camp to camp and country to country," says Mr. Mulligan, "is the interest the youngsters of each country are showing in American sports as played by our soldiers and sailors.

"In Germany and Belgium and France, the little boys are enthusiastic spectators of American baseball games. They are queuing at the hand-dies and armpicking up the game. Of course, our boys are always willing to teach them and they get a good deal of fun out of watching them. The little fellows try their hand at baseball.

"I think if the American Expeditionary Forces remained in Europe for a year or two, they'd have baseball as established as the international pastime—though I wouldn't recommend anybody to suggest this to the boys. A baseball league of nations might be just as powerful as any other kind of keeping the peace of the world—if the umpires behaved themselves.

"As for the Bolsheviki in Russia—baseball or some equally attractive sport. If they are quiet at the hand-dies and armpicking up the game, I would have helped to give the Russians a morale similar to that of American."

The possibilities of baseball in Russia are numerous, especially the variations of the hidden ball trick that might be invented by bearded Cossacks. The K-C chairman is seriously of the opinion that if the Russians took as seriously to healthy out-of-door sports as the Americans do, there would be less of national unrest and more of orderly national vigor as a result.

The Knights of Columbus have sent in all, about 20,000 baseball outfits, bathtubs and thousands of these are now being put to good use on the banks of the Rhine.

URAIINE BESTS MCGUIRE

There may have been a time when Frankie McGuire was hard-hitting and fast, but he disclosed no such abilities last night at the Orpheum, and the Washington policeman, Mike Uraime, outfought his man at every stage of the battle, deserving the decision of the referee. McGuire was the more aggressive and did two-thirds the rounds. It was even three and getting practically no recognition.

Black Gunboat Smith, deaf and dumb, got something of a surprise from the original Billy Brown, of Lancaster, who though much smaller, banged the dingy marine all over the sea. Only clever ducking saved the Gunboat from being sunk. This bout looked like a stall. Smith was outclassed.

The second bout gave the fans a hint for their money, principally because a local lad sprang into fame in his first appearance boxing before the public. The victor was John Richards, who is the son of a farmer, three miles from Lancaster. He has been working out along at the Cathedral gymnasium, and is a very good boxer, especially when home talent makes good.

estimated that upward of fifty people lost their lives.

Men were killed and robbed, each fatally being shrouded in the deep mystery. Travel stopped on the highways, and the country was deserted forth except under heavy guard and families abandoned their lonely ranches and moved to the more populated centers. No one felt safe in their solitary homes. The fact that one entered a lonely canon without fear of being the next victim.

Gradually, through cumulative evidence, the fact became known that the perpetrators of these murders were three brothers, Mexicans, known as the "Blood Espionistas."

Their crimes were committed without warning or provocation and with the intent of murdering men who wanted destruction of human life, for there was little plundering done by them. Nor was it the solitary traveler alone who fell a victim to their savagery, for often two or three people were killed at a time and sometimes an entire family was wiped out.

As a climax to a long series of murders in South Park, the two prospectors named Leyman and Seyza. These two men were citizens of California Gulch, near Leadville, and upon the news reaching that place a meeting was held for the purpose of raising men and funds to ferret out and bring to speedy justice the slayers of their comrades.

A call for volunteers was made and seventeen determined men responded, and under the command of Captain John McCannan they equipped themselves and started out on the search.

After scouting the South Park country for several days, they struck the trail of the Espionistas a few miles west of the present site of Cripple Creek. Following the trail down Four Mile Creek they came upon the camp of the men in a small side canon about twenty miles north of Canon City.

During the battle that followed the larger of the two Espionistas fell from a rifle bullet, the other of Joseph Lamb, but the other one escaped in the confusion. Shortly afterward he picked up the other brother in the San Luis valley. These two were tracked to the mountains of Joseph Lamb, but the other one escaped in the confusion. Shortly afterward he picked up the other brother in the San Luis valley.
