PENNSYLVANIA WIN ACROSS FOR VALOR

Pershing Cites Brave Men of Keystone and Liberty Divisions For Deeds Performed in Battle

Washington, April 18.—The War Department has published an annual list of officers and men of the Twenty-eighth and Seventy-ninth divisions who were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action. Eleven of the forty-seven awards were made posthumously, the men having been killed in the performance of the acts for which they were cited.

The posthumous awards follow: Francis R. Austin, first lieutenant, One Hundred and Ninth Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Hautmont, France, November 11, 1918. He led a platoon of machine guns and two one-pounder guns, with their crews, under cover of fog within the enemy's wire and attacked at close range a strong point held by twenty-five men and ten machine guns. After this position had been reduced, concentrated machine gun fire from the ranks forced Lieutenant Austin and his men to withdraw. Exposing himself in order to place his men under cover, he was mortally wounded, but he directed the dressing of the wounded and the evacuation of the men until he could accept any aid for himself. He died a few hours later.

Benjamin Bullock, first lieutenant, Third Battalion, Three Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Nanterre, France, September 28-29, 1918. On the afternoon of September 28, Lieutenant Bullock displayed great bravery and fearlessness by assisting two wounded men under a sniper's rifle under heavy snapper and artillery fire. On the morning of the 29th of September he again demonstrated great bravery by advancing alone into a wood and killing a sniper. On the afternoon of the 29th of September, while carrying a message to the regimental post of command, he was killed by a high explosive shell.

Americo Dipasquale, private, Company G, Three Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry, extraordinary heroism in action near Verdun, France, November 11, 1918. He volunteered for service as a connecting file, and during the course of operations was obliged to cross and recross fields swept by shell and machine gun fire. His efforts were instrumental in bringing contact with the unit on his left. While he was thus engaged he was killed.

Lee C. Fletcher, first lieutenant, One Hundred and Eleventh Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action at Fismette, France, August 10-13, 1918. When his platoon was attacked by a greatly superior force, Lieutenant Fletcher, intelligence of floor, organized a detachment and successfully defended an important position. Later, when our barrage was falling short, he voluntarily carried a message to the artillery for the purpose of correcting the error.

Harry I. Greenwood, sergeant, Company K, Three Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Malan court, France, September 26, 1918. He personally led a patrol of four men against a machine gun which was firing at the advance, captured the gun and nine prisoners. He inspired his men to greater effort by his excellent example under fire. He was killed by machine gun fire and was posthumously reorganizing his platoon after a counterattack.

Paul B. Jenkins, sergeant, Company A, 11th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Biberich, France, November 11, 1918. While installing a telephone line his regiment started attack. The enemy responded with a terrific barrage and the communication was completed Sergeant Jenkins was in the midst of a heavy encounter. Bravely he remained at his post, endeavoring to establish telephone service, but was instantly killed by shell fire.

Edmund W. Lynch, captain, 11th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action at Fismette, France, August 10, 1918. Seeing two of his platoons being cut off by the enemy, Captain Lynch went alone to their rescue and engaged the enemy with his automatic pistol, killing several. He saved his platoons, but in so doing sacrificed his own life.

John T. Owens, second lieutenant, 315th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Verdun, France, November 4, 1918. After locating three machine gun positions, Lieutenant Owens put one of them out of action with an automatic rifle by killing the gunners and forcing the others to abandon the gun. He was killed by machine gun fire while reorganizing his company after a local counterattack.

Ward W. Pierson, major, 315th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Etrelac, France, November 8-9, 1918. He displayed the highest courage and leadership, reconnoitering the enemy's position under heavy shell and machine gun fire. He was killed while in the performance of this act.

Alfred Stevenson, sergeant, Company C, 11th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Fismette, France, August 10, 1918. Sergeant Stevenson and another soldier voluntarily went through heavy machine gun fire to carry an important message to an advanced position. Attracted by the cry of a wounded soldier while they were returning, they went to his assistance, and in doing so Sergeant Stevenson was mortally wounded.

Eugene G. Watkins, private, Company K, 315th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Verdun, France, November 1, 1918. While acting as runner between battalion and regimental headquarters, he received severe wounds, but continued on with his mission to his destination, which was reached just before he died. After being wounded he covered a distance of approximately 300 meters to deliver his message.

The other citations follow: John J. Auber, private, Company E, 314th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Samogneux, France, November 1, 1918. While standing in the entrance of his dugout, he saw a grenade, with fuse burning, rolling into the dugout, where his comrades were sleeping. He picked up the grenade and attempted to throw it away, but it exploded in his hand, blowing off the hand and forearm.

Yank Made "Over There Popular in Germany"

All musicians like appreciatively, one, musician Joe Foster of the Fifteenth Infantry, who has been stationed in Cochem, a few phrases in German, but both boys and girls understand each other perfectly when he plays. "Over There" is one of their favorites.

TEACHING OUR WOUNDED WHAT THEY WANT TO DO

Federal Board Gratifies Long Suppressed Ambitions in Training Disabled Soldiers For Useful Employments

The future of our wounded boys is largely in the hands of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. These young chaps, who have come back untried for the old jobs, have a chance now to make the best of themselves. The friendly human touch of the psychologists in charge of the board's offices releases the spring of the old shut-in ambitions. "What do you want to do?" was the question put up to an enlisted man of 34 years of age who had previously worked as a machinist. "I want to learn to play the piano," was the astonishing answer. And he stuck to it through all the explanations of the impossibility of his wish. How did it end? Why, the fellow is studying piano tuning at the expense of the Federal Board.

Here is a professional baseball player of 29 with defective hearing. He must not be shut indoors. He takes a course in landscape gardening at the Botanical Gardens. An intelligent ex-barber, who has lost his left arm, goes to the Butler School at New Haven to prepare for a civil service examination, a position, perhaps, a lad of 23, who had been, in the old days, assistant foreman in a factory, and whose back is disabled, is to have three terms at Columbia to study English history and mathematics, and capacity warranting the decision. His heart is set upon civil engineering, and he had been attending evening school and studying hard before the war swopt him into the trenches.

A young tailor, an Italian of 24, who now lacks a leg, has been made happy by a six months' course at the Drake School, while a playwright of 27 from Cambridge, Mass., who is suffering from tubercular trouble, is recommended for a six months' course at the Marconi Institute. Even a seaman of 23, whose right arm is gone, has the courage and ambition to take the same course.

The Red Cross Institute is to teach moving picture operating and repairing to a one-legged ex-warrior of 19; one can imagine the joy of the boy.
