

STATE SEEKS TO BRING NEIGHBOR INTO HIGH COURT

Motions Filed in Supreme Tribunal Asking Permission to Sue West Virginia

Washington, May 3.—Motions were filed in the Supreme Court today by the States of Pennsylvania and Ohio asking permission to institute original proceedings for the purpose of preventing the State of West Virginia from enforcing a State law enacted last February which would prevent natural gas from being transported outside the State until domestic needs had been satisfied.

Preliminary steps will be taken at Washington today by the State of Pennsylvania to carry out the intent of the legislative resolution authorizing the Attorney General to enter suit against the State of West Virginia on grounds that its new regulating distribution of natural gas is discriminatory against citizens of the Keystone State. Attorney General Leo Well, an attorney of Pittsburgh, to represent this State when the motion for leave to file the suit is made in the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington. The motion will be to commence the proceedings under original jurisdiction of the nation's highest court and in such cases is given by the and is the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will ask an injunction to restrain the State of Pennsylvania from enforcing the act which would become effective on May 17. It is understood here that the State of Ohio, which would be affected to an even greater extent by Pennsylvania's new law, will also leave to the Supreme Court to-morrow. Information reaching here is that action at law is being considered by Maryland, Kentucky and West Virginia.

This will be the first time two States have ever proceeded at the same time and with the same object against another and the question of natural resources will loom large.

Mr. Well went over to the Attorney General and left last night for Washington. He said that the action was first to obtain leave to ask for the injunction and then to proceed to a restraining order. The ground is that West Virginia has directed not to enforce the act. The Attorney General's jurisdiction in other suits between States. The resolution authorizing the suit set forth that the act, passed by the Legislature, to have residents and industries of that State preference in supply of gas, involved immense investments by Pennsylvania and Mr. Well said that if the law was enforced, it would cost millions of dollars to readjust heating appliances in Pennsylvania homes and industries and suffering in churches and other places where gas is extensively used as fuel.

According to Mr. Well a great part of the gas in this State is produced in the southwestern counties and districts and is piped to the cities of the State and is widely separated as Altoona and Oil City were supplied with gas from the fields in the neighboring States. The counties which the petition for leave to and will never be affected by the order are: Allegheny, Armstrong, Blair, Bedford, Berks, Cameron, Clearfield, Crawford, Fayette, Greene, Indiana, Jefferson, Lawrence, Mercer, McKean, Somerset, Venango, Warren and Westmoreland.

U. S. Did Not Win the War, It Helped, Admiral Sims Says

Philadelphia, May 3.—Philadelphia had a modest victory yesterday. The average hero usually falls a victim to the insistent adoration of the public, but not so with Rear Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the United States fleet in foreign waters during the European war. He arrived aboard President Wilson's private car at 8.30 a. m. at Broad Street station. His program for the day was really a whirlwind of engagements made for him by the Philadelphia committee of the Victory Liberty Bonds campaign. The man who was entrusted with playing the great role as head of the United States Navy in action was not a bit ruffled by the immense ovation that greeted him on all sides.

He welcomed representatives from the newspapers in the private salon where President Wilson held many important conferences. It was none too impressive, this car, with only the usual appointments that go to make up a private Pullman coach. "Tell us about the American Navy's achievements," some one said. "We didn't win the whole war," the Admiral answered with a smile. "But, we did win a share of the work, didn't we, Admiral?" "No," said Admiral Sims, most positively. "We were only there to obey orders and it is a mistaken notion to think that the way we did only a small part in the war." When you consider that Great Britain had 5,000 ships as compared to our total of 160 boats in action, our part was really small. We had seventy-five destroyers in foreign waters while Great Britain had 4,000."

The "Extra" has been mailed regularly to many hundreds of soldiers who were thus able to keep abreast with the news at home. The "Extra" filled a want which it was difficult to get newspapers through in the mails.

The three-day drive to raise the city quota in the Victory Liberty Loan falls short by more than one million dollars. The drive will be resumed on Tuesday. The Rev. M. O. Pierce, pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church, has accepted a call to the Frankford Baptist church. The new luxury tax which went into effect on Monday is causing considerable confusion, especially at soda fountain establishments. The city of Harrisburg and Pennsylvania as a whole, although State police are called out to enforce the law, are unable to break up the parties of radicals. Dr. H. Seibert, of Steelton, left Harrisburg to-day, appointed by Governor Sproul to the vacant seat on the Public Service Commission, caused by the death of Commissioner H. G. Mather, of Gettysburg. The Flynn anti-sedition bill is reportedly debated in the House of Representatives.

HARRISBURG BOYS ANXIOUS FOR NEWS

get ready for some big doings for next week.

At Camp Henry M. Gross is endeavoring to arrange to send as many Harrisburg boys home together as possible. He is attached to Division Headquarters, near the One Hundred and Twelfth Regiment Headquarters, and is in touch with the officers of the latter unit.

May Come Home Together

If it can be arranged the boys from the Capitol City in Companies D and I, Headquarters, Supply and one of the other units of the Ninth Machine Battalion, will be sent together. Whether this can be done will not be known until orders are issued to the company commanders.

Harrisburg boys are to be found in probably a score of barracks in the Camp. Here and there are companies with only one or two who had been transferred from former Harrisburg units of the Eighth Regiment. Other outfits have half dozen or more. Many are in Headquarters, Supply and quite a few in the One Hundred and Ninth Machine Gun Company.

Ask About Reception

When they heard that they were soon to get back home many asked whether they should have a parade and what plans the folks had made. Not that they're anxious to have a walk-around. Not these boys. "Nix on the parade stuff. Home for ours. If the folks want us to do it we'll have to, but I'm not keen for it," came from one of them. Others made similar remarks, indicating that they would prefer to come to the city quietly, go to their homes with their families and not seen for a year or more and get back to civilian life. They'll appreciate the reception they get, however, and they are only human, and that old home town will look almost too good to be true when they sight it again they say.

Anxious About Homes

The boys are greatly interested in happenings in Harrisburg. Questions about the Capitol Park extension, "hardscrabble" the new State street bridge, the proposed city and county curfew and office building, industrial conditions and many other bits of information are asked by the men. The boys are also interested in the city visitors to the camp already to see the men, and had the orders for demobilization been delayed until next week, a big crowd would have been on hand on Sunday, according to a number of local boys who expected relatives to come here. The Federal Hotel is talked about frequently and was just being started when many of the Harrisburg boys were leaving for Camp Hancock. Quite a few have been asking about the hotel and the management might make a big hit by having a day fixed for a special inspection for them. Inquiries about city and county affairs are made, too. They say heroes talk very little about themselves. One almost has to use a crowbar to pry anything loose from the mouths of the boys and when they hear their names mentioned in connection with a bit of bravery or some daring stunt, you'll find they start for the other end of the room.

Prize From Officers

Both Captain Jenkins and Lieutenant Thomas declare that the boys were always ready for service anywhere, always did their very best, never shirked, seldom complained, and as a result of courageous soldierly work always came out victorious. At present the boys of this company are in barracks in Sixth street, just off New York avenue, in the camp, while the officers are at Second street and New York avenue. Company D men and officers, with the First Battalion, are at Sixth and Sixth streets of the camp. The officers of this company are from the western part of the State, but some of the noncoms are from Harrisburg and they have plenty of praise for the men who fought with them. The First Battalion, Companies A, B, C and D, Infantry, together with Machine Gun and Supply units are billeted between Pennsylvania and Delaware avenues around 34th street, in the camp. In Company D, there are two Harrisburg boys, Harry Nell, 154 Third street, and Alexander Lotz, 422 Kelly street, also Charles Livingston, Camp Hill. Judging from the way these boys piled into mess this evening their folks need worry only about the larder when they get home, for they have some victuals. Company C boys have a warm spot for Harrisburg, as there are some local boys in that group, and then before the company left for overseas, Captain H. M. Stine, in command, County Commissioner, was in command. "How is the captain?" "Give him our best," "Hope he's all right again," and similar remarks poured forth from the bunks of the men.

Friday, May 2

James E. Wright, former employe in the services of the War Department, who left Harrisburg in July, 1917, as a private, lands in New York City a big promotion record of an Harrisburg boy. Plans are hurried for a proper reception to returning members of the Keystone Division which is learned that they will reach the city on Sunday or Monday, much earlier than had been expected. The boys who have not yet been expected in new building, social and educational projects in and near Harrisburg by the Methodist Episcopal church, it is announced. "Cleanup and Fixup Week" is what the city fathers are calling the week which will be held next week. Many mayors start canvassing their city for complete work of raising the deficit in the city Victory Liberty Loan subscription. Marysville will plant three memorial trees for its three men who died in the service, with special services next Thursday. A meeting to consider ways of protecting the city's health has been arranged to be held in the Board of Trade building to-morrow. Colonel E. H. Fisher, Commissioner of Health, will preside.

"PRETTY ROUGH" IN MILITARY POLICE

With the Military Police of the Twenty-eighth Division there are four Harrisburgers, Sergeants McCallister and Green and Privates Meisenhelder and William L. Windsor, 3rd, constable of the Fourth ward, Harrisburg. Colonel Maurice E. Finney, formerly commander of the Eighth Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard, is in command. The Harrisburg men in this outfit saw much active service in keeping roads open, guarding bridges, taking releases up to the front line through barrage and other dangerous work. Colonel Finney in speaking of the service rendered by Harrisburgers declares that it was pretty rough sometimes for them in the Argonne and all right at times. I would say that it was about the hardest service that they could have been given."

Company D's Roster

Here are the boys from the city and vicinity in Company D, as the roster shows now: Sergeant William H. Bennett, Riverside; Sergeant George J. Selway, Steelton; Sergeant Jesse Markey, Red Lion; Corporal Orion A. Siler, Howard C. Hays, 1st, Argonne; Corporal Carl H. Doner, Ernest E. VanLee, Edgar M. Diehl, cook, Alonzo R. Martin, 254 Crescent street, wounded at Forest dePerre. His father visited him in camp to-day. Alonzo is a pretty fair cook, the boys declare, and he knows better than to put salt apple sauce and onions in bread pudding, certain deeds charged to others in the company, who were in the kitchen one day. There are some more local boys as follows: Samuel E. Bowers, Robert H. Branson, 1732 Logan; William J. Burgoon, 1612 Susquehanna; William C. Bush, George M. Duttonhofer, Lewis E. Duncan, Walter M.
