Russians Will Give Their All For Booze

London, July 31.—Three silver fox skins for which $2,500 has been refused in London were obtained in Archangel for six bottles of whisky by a British officer who has just returned from Northern Russia. Another officer traded a case of champagne for a diamond necklace said to be worth thousands of dollars. Returning soldiers say any possession a native has may be obtained with intoxicants.

The hunter who parted with his fox skins had little pleasure out of the whisky, however. Immediately on obtaining it he went into a room and drank it all. He was found in a serious condition and required hospital treatment to save his life.

Another Talk to Harrisburg Husbands

How often do you discard a suit of clothes before it is worn out because it's gone out of style! Very seldom, if ever. For styles change but gradually in men's attire.

How often does your wife discard a frock before it is worn out? Quite frequently, unless she is a woman of unusual foresight. The swift changes in women's styles mean millions wasted annually if you include the loss involved throughout the country.

Is this necessary? No. In selecting models for my clientele I exert restraint. I never invest in extreme or faddish styles. My models always display that moderate conservatism which appeals to the really discerning taste and as a consequence they yield months of service before going out of style. It is the ultra styles which look absurd after the fad of the moment passes.

Urge your wife to inspect my stock. She will save money by buying here.
