Schleisner's as a Men's Store

An outline of the career, policy and principles upon which our men's clothing business has been established

Profitable Reading For Men and Women

There was a time when men wouldn't go into a women's store to buy clothing.

In those days we fully understood why men hesitated to buy in a store where women shopped.

But times have changed, and with the new era common sense has shown men that, after all, it is wisdom to buy where they can buy to best advantage.

You know that ten years back Schleisner's Men's Clothing Store was a little department of the business—a mighty little department.

From the very first we started to sell good clothing. That in itself was a sort of drawback to start with, because there were so many stores selling cheap clothes, and later when the $10 and $15 suits came into vogue the good clothes we were selling did not appeal to the great crowd of clothing buyers.

Understand us. The good clothing we sold did not interest the great crowd, the big majority, but it did interest men, one by one, men who wanted good clothes and who appreciated good clothes, and, therefore, kept those men coming to Schleisner's year after year.

Along with those first customers came others and the list gradually grew larger. Even after a number of years our clothing department, while it had grown, would have been considered small by some merchants; yet, while we knew it was not large, we saw it growing steadily and growth is a good sign.

One thing we did know and certainly realized the meaning of, was that men came back season after season, year after year, to buy Schleisner clothes.

You know what that means. It means that men got service from the clothing they bought here. They knew they were buying right and so they continued to stick to the store that gave out satisfaction along with the purchase.

In all these years from the very first we added a small profit only, so that we could emphatically declare to the men who came into our clothing store that tailoring for tailoring, fabric for fabric, style for style, our prices would mean the best clothing values they could get.

The fact that our clothing business was small for years did not, in the least, discourage the founder of the business.

On the contrary, the steady growth, the one and two and three new faces coming into our Men's Clothing Store daily, the development of Harrisburg, the faith he had in Harrisburg and the ideal he set for a Men's Clothing Store encouraged him to a great degree to stick to the Men's Clothing business until every man in Harrisburg, sooner or later could say, regardless of whether that man bought here or not, that Schleisner's carry the best clothing in Harrisburg.

When the big war started and prices of clothing steadily increased season after season and year after year, and all clothing stores gradually increased their prices, men began to give the purchase of clothing more consideration.

When the men realized that prices were one-third, one-half, and now one hundred per cent. higher than they were four years ago, they decided to make comparisons before finally buying.

This era of comparison was a great thing for Schleisner's Men's Clothing Store.

While the idea of not buying where women bought has greatly grown out of date among men who think, the necessity for comparison, or rather we should say the wisdom of comparison, brought hundreds of men to Schleisner's.

The result is that men who thought they would never come into Schleisner's for a suit of clothes, have found what they wanted here and have been thoroughly satisfied with the clothing they bought here and have since become firm customers of this store.

The story of the growth of our Men's Clothing business is interesting to you as a wearer of good clothing, (and if you are a woman reader of this article, it is interesting to you because you have a brother or husband.)

To-day our Men's Clothing business is large. Indeed, we consider it very large when compared with the little beginning it had.

And now we can see ahead to one of the largest clothing businesses in Harrisburg, certainly one of the most interesting and unquestionably the leader, all points being considered.

We are optimists.

Taking all signs from the growth of our Men's Clothing Business as a guide to its future status, we have prepared for fall and winter with the largest stocks we have ever been tempted to put into our store.

We now believe there are hundreds of men just waiting for the cool weather so that they will come to Schleisner's for their fall clothing.

Scores of these men will be our regular year in and year out customers and scores of them will be new customers who will want to try Schleisner clothing.

And right here we will say that although prices have advanced greatly and we along with all clothing stores have had to pay higher prices to the manufacturers, our old policy of small profits will bring this fine clothing to you at such prices as will prove to be the surest economy.

May we expect a visit from you in the near future?

Respectfully yours,

Schleisner's
