Schleisner's As A Women's Store

Profitable Reading For Men and Women

Just because a woman has ideas of her own about her clothes is no reason why she is not happy to have ideas given her.

Years back when Schleisner's was a small store, the founder of the business realized that there were many women in Harrisburg who were real style critics and who appreciated art in dress.

Of course, he knew at the same time that many of those women went to Philadelphia and New York to buy their garments.

With his faith in the fundamental metropolitan foundation of Harrisburg, and his implicit confidence in the judgment of Harrisburg women concerning apparel, he began to develop a truly metropolitan ready-to-wear store, keeping in mind always, to bring the latest fashion creations to Harrisburg and show them at the same time they appeared in Philadelphia and New York.

At first this idea appeared to be very expensive. In order to win the patronage of those women who desired the ultra fashionable, it was necessary to bring many garments here to provide a suitable selection.

Naturally the venture was hazardous and at the beginning of our now exclusive store, resulted in quite a loss at the end of each season.

But as each year came and went the women of this section of the State began to look forward and expect at Schleisner's exactly the modes that were shown in New York, thus bringing in close touch with them the very fashions which in years past had been difficult for them to procure and indeed quite inconvenient.

The widespread publicity given to this establishment for its exclusive modes grew year after year until women of fashion realized fully that Schleisner's was actually a fashion source.

The traditions of the establishment have been adhered to and now when Harrisburg is one of the largest, most progressive and most modern of Pennsylvania's cities, Schleisner's is up to the standard which a city of this character demands and should rightfully have.

This establishment has kept pace with Harrisburg by keeping ahead of her in fashions.

Harrisburg will grow larger. Schleisner's will grow larger.

The importance of correctness of style, superiority of quality, artistic tailoring, are the lines upon which our garments are selected.

We believe there are many women who do not know the real Schleisner Store, and not knowing, miss many opportunities to be better suited in the matter of apparel.

Now that our new Fall and Winter lines are ready we await with pleasure your early visit.

Exclusive but not expensive, are the new suits, coats, dresses, wraps, blouses, skirts, millinery, silk underwear, silk hosiery, negligees, and furs.
