

CLEMENCEAU HAS IMMORTALS IN AIR OVER RECEPTION

Refuses to Take Part in Official Ceremonies, When He Takes Seat in Academy

Paris, Sept. 5. — The French Academy is in a quandary. Premier Clemenceau refuses to take part in any official reception when he takes his seat for the first time under the dome of the academy. This is absolutely unprecedented—no official address of welcome by a brother academician; no panegyric of his predecessor by Academician Clemenceau; no need for him to listen to any oratory in response. M. Clemenceau desires merely to walk in and sit down and be one of the family, without any of the usual ado.

There was a time when M. Clemenceau desired to enter the French Academy. Those were the days when he was a mere author. The French Academy frowned upon his ambitions then, and the old premier is quite aware that it was the successful minister of war, the old "pere la Victoire" that the academicians sought to number among them rather than the author. Several remarks, caustic as only M. Clemenceau can make them are reported to have been uttered by the premier concerning some of his future colleagues, and the premier himself has said that he will waive all attendance fees, which is interpreted as meaning that he will seldom attend.

Several of the Immortals are busily engaged in trying to make the premier reconsider his decision, but the premier has a will of his own. He has proved that.

AIR-PROPELLED BOATS

The treacherous Missouri river, with its disappearing channels, movable sand bars and general unavailability, is to be attacked from a new angle in a determined effort to make its mighty but wayward course useful to commerce, according to Popular Mechanics magazine.

Big barges, drawing when loaded only eight to ten inches of water, will be equipped with air propellers, driven by gasoline engines. A mile ahead of each string of barges a small motor pilot boat will hunt the shifting channel and sound for obstructions, signaling the course back to the barge steersman.

REMINISCENCE

They were speaking of English humor, and the Englishman now dwelling in Pittsburgh offered the following as an example:

He was riding in a London tram-car when the driver became involved in an altercation with the conductor on the rear of the car just ahead. Both swore at one another violently as the cars moved slowly through a congested street. Finally, being heated in the verbal battle, the conductor tied a piece of string around the end of a lead pencil and then dangled the pencil toward the driver. The latter became more vindictive than ever, keeping up his harangue until the front car turned into another street. The Englishman said he was curious and asked the driver why the dangling pencil had made him swear so violently.

"Oh that is just a little joke between ourselves. You see my father was hanged," he explained.—Tit-Bits.

TOUGH

"Of course, I don't know," began the sarcastic boarder, "but it strikes me this chicken—"

"Now, what's the matter with the chicken?" interrupted the landlady.

"Oh, nothing," answered the lodger, "only it is evidently the offspring of a hard-boiled egg."—London Tit-Bits.
