CENTRAL HIGH NOTES

"The Princess' Choice," one-act play to be given in the Technical High School Auditorium as Central High School contribution to "Correct Your Speech Week," is being worked up with much enthusiasm by the participants, under the leadership of Miss Annabel Swartz, teacher of public speaking. The play centers around Princess Schoolgirl, whose suitors are Lord Good English and Lord Poor English. Lord Good English attendants are Correct Enunciation, Grammar and Correct Pronunciation. The attendants of Lord Poor English are Mumbling, Slang and Mispronunciation. In the beginning Princess Schoolgirl is inclined to look with favor upon Lord Poor English, he appearing tall and handsome, and especially to Lord Good English appears bent and limping. A duel is fought, Lord Good English victorious, whereupon Princess Schoolgirl accepts him for her husband.

The cast includes: Princess Schoolgirl, Miss Katharine Rife; Three Ladies-in-waiting, Miss Lillian Kostar, Miss Ethel MacCloskey and Miss Gene Springer; Lord Good English, Wayne Snyder; Lord Poor English, Vincent Stanford; Clear Enunciation, Albert Sanders; Grammar, Charles Craighead; Correct Pronunciation, Gordon Hinkle; Mumbling, Clarence Keisch; Slang, Harold Fox; Mispronunciation, Joseph Knaut; Queen Refinement, Mother of Lord Good English, Miss Mary Rodney; King Success, Father of Lord Good English, Earl Wright; Jester, Cecil Holmes; Pages, Miss Nellie Ard and Miss Esther Wheeler; Herald, Bernard Kopolitz.

Several hundred posters relating to the use of good English, made in the drawing classes, have been placed in the halls throughout the entire building, confronting the students at every turn.

ONE MAY DIE AS VICTIM OF FIGHT

Four Men and a Woman Seriously Hurt in Row Over Crap Game

Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 3.—One man was probably fatally shot, three other men were seriously injured and a woman badly hurt in a fight over a crap game here last night. Bernard O'Brien, 20, is in the hospital with a bullet wound close to the heart and another through the abdomen. Walter Shusta and John Danlo also are in the hospital suffering concussion of the brain. Mrs. Frank Elkorn had several broken ribs when she attempted to keep rioters out of her home.

Edward Delbaugh, a patrolman, called from his bed during the fight, was badly battered about the head before other officers went to the rescue.

Franklin County Has New Probation Officer

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 3.—Miss Eda S. Haywood, of Philadelphia, has begun her work as probation officer for Franklin county, arriving here on Saturday evening to take up her duties. She is the selection of Judge Gillan upon recommendation of E. D. Sollenberger, secretary of the Pennsylvania Children's Aid Society. Miss Haywood comes of an old Philadelphia family and although quite young, is said to be peculiarly adapted and fitted for the work she has started to do.

Retires From Service of Railroad With Good Record

Lewistown, Pa., Nov. 3.—Charles F. McCormick retired to-day after 37 years' service as baggage agent for the Middle Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Lewistown Junction. Mr. McCormick is known to thousands of travelers who have made the interchange at this point in the three decades, especially to commercial men. He has had a remarkable record inasmuch as his record is clear of censure. He will spend his leisure years on a little plot of ground in Lake Park addition, the product of his own thrift and years of labor.

Sermon in Every Sentence; Holds Spectators in Awe and Sends Them Away Thrilled

"The Miracle Man," showing all this week at the Regent theater, unquestionably is one of the best pictures ever exhibited in Harrisburg and certainly one of the most remarkable productions in all the history of motion-picture making. No body can see it without being profoundly moved, and the impression lasts long after the last scene has faded slowly from the screen. It is a sermon in film form if ever there was one.

No better description has been written of it than is contained in the two column editorial—probably the first of its kind ever published—in the North American of yesterday. The film was first shown in Philadelphia.

"It is a miracle play," says the North American, and continues: "Its elusive yet unforgettable quality is revealed in the fact that the story may be told in two sentences, yet might not be conveyed in words filling a many pages. A gang of tenderloin criminals hear of the strange powers of a 'patriarch' in a remote village, whose beauty of life and faith has helped to bring health and peace of mind to the suffering; assuming innocence and belief, they surround him, and stage a pretended 'miracle,' through which they plan to exploit the sightless-healer as a business enterprise. Their cunning succeeds beyond all their hopes. But unconsciously they are being used by the patriarch, who has sought to use—they are themselves transformed, lifted by faith from depravity to a cleansed, ennobled manhood and womanhood."

"That is the quality of elemental simplicity, yet as complex as the human heart; as modern as yesterday's news, yet as old as the hills of Galilee. It is the simplicity of the story and its telling that makes the picture's success so striking. It has none of the magnificent settings and ingenious theatrical illusions of those spectacles which have evoked acclaim and wonderment. Its subtle power is comparable only to that of one other production, 'Broken Blossom,' and that scorching drama has the special appeal of an idealized foreign atmosphere, of a suggestion of vivid horror which stirs by sheer pain the feelings; but the magnetism of this story lies in its scenes of beauty and tranquility no less than in those of sordidness and ferocity. Its power is the power of its quietude. It steals into the heart like an exquisite poem, lives in the memory like a haunting song."

Wonderful Photography Through all the wonderfully photographed picture—and it is the work of an artist from that standpoint—there runs a deeply religious strain. It is a story of the world-old clash between right and wrong, and yet there is not one word of preaching, no plea for church or creed, only the triumph of love over hate, of gentleness over force, of charity over greed; of God over Mammon.

Probably the most effective scene is that in which the miracle of healing is shown, which is described most effectively by the aforementioned editorial in the North American, as follows:

"The purpose with studied subtlety of meekness and appealing need, the four creatures from the underworld insinuate themselves into the life of the 'patriarch' and, one by one, are drawn from the world, and he is easily made the instrument of their design, although even through the silence and darkness which surround him there reaches his soul some haunting sense of the evil that envelops him. He has no armor against it, save his purity, no weapon save his faith. Yet with these he overcomes."

"The pretended 'miracle,' adroitly wrought before the eyes of a bewildered crowd, is a triumph of spectacular falsehood; as the loathsome 'cripple' crawls painfully up the cottage path to the motionless figure of the patriarch, he slowly reaches himself, with feigned convulsions of anguish, into human shape, one thrills to the emotions of the rapt throng.

"But while the creature fawns in a simulation of gratitude his face stiffens in lines of amazement and terror. He sees toiling toward him another victim, not listed in the original's drama of deception—a tiny village child, with twisted limbs and crutched arms that can barely support the frail little body. He has seen the miracle and believes. Faith touches his childish soul and draws him forward. His gaze fixed upon the upturned face of the patriarch, he drags himself, like a wounded bird, up the narrow path. The pitiful little figure falters, lurches on, halts again; drops one tiny crutch and all but topples over. The patriarch, the other crutch falls, the child stumbles, rights himself and runs forward with wavering steps to clasp the outstretched hand. A mere trick he cleverly stage plays upon the words, the pictured scene is reality itself to the spectators; through the darkened theater there runs the thrill of a soundless prayer of thanksgiving."

JUNIATA'S PEOPLE PLAN BIG WELCOME

Twin Boroughs Prepare to Give Royal Celebration in Honor of Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, Nurses and Veterans of All Wars

Mifflintown, Pa., Nov. 3.—Junjata is preparing to give a royal Welcome Home celebration for her soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses who served in the World War. The event is to take place next Saturday and the committee wants it understood it is not only for the veterans of the World War, but for the veterans of all wars; also that it is not to be an affair of the twin boroughs, Mifflin and Mifflintown, but for the entire county. Each township has been assigned its quota of expense and each township given representation on the committee, of which I. C. Mitchell, editor of the Junjata Tribune, Mifflintown, is the chairman; W. F. Burdfield, Mifflin, secretary; and J. Frank Patterson, Mifflintown, treasurer.

The members of the committee are: J. W. Gaul and D. Banks Stouffer, Mifflintown; Loudon Todd and Lloyd Zook, Mifflin; C. Taylor and Warren M. Kohler, Port Royal; E. S. Thompson and James B. Smith, Thompston; North Shellenberger, McAllisterville; Oscar C. Taylor and Richard Pfeister Cox, R. D. 3, Millerstown; A. C. Klinger, Liverport; H. C. Hans, Mexico; William Graham, Spruce Hill; W. Kell, Walnut; Dr. B. M. Ritter, McCoyville; W. Long, Honey Grove; J. M. Barton, East Waterford, and W. A. Lothers, Perkasie.

In addition to these, Mrs. Howard Neely, Mifflintown, chairman Red Cross; W. F. Birchfield, Mifflin, secretary for twin boroughs; E. R. Weimer, Mifflintown, secretary of the Mifflin chapter of the United States Army and Navy, promptly at noon.

Dinner will be served to the veterans of all wars, including the nurses and other attaches of the Army and Navy, promptly at noon. There are no better culinary artists than its women. The address will be in the nature of after-dinner speeches. The day will close with a concert of the United States organizations in the Court House yard at 7.30. The committee promises that the best of the past years will be but small affairs as compared with the coming celebration, the decorations alone being well worth a long journey to see.

The parade will start promptly at 2.30 p. m., and it is expected 5,000 will be in line, while 15,000 more will be here as spectators. It will be far the biggest day the county has witnessed, for, like all other counties in the State, Juniata is very proud of her veterans.
