Crises in the Lives of Men

Solomon S. Huebner, Ph. D., Professor of Insurance and Commerce, Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania, said in a lecture:

"When a man in the earning period of life becomes totally disabled by accident or disease, there is an economic loss to himself, his dependents and society.

"When a man in the earning period of life dies, there is an economic loss to his dependents and to society.

"When a man reaches the age of 60 and his earning power diminishes, there is an economic loss to himself, his dependents and society.

"The only protection against these losses, which are sure to come in one form or another, is by life insurance with disability provisions."
