BODY OF SLAYER LIES UNCLAIMED

Brother of Clarence Wallace Willing to Bury Remains With Insurance Money

Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 30.—The body of Clarence S. Wallace, of this place, yeoman and slayer of Leo M. Creager and who was shot to death by officers at Santa Barbara, Calif., while resisting arrest, was still in a vault at Frederick, Md., last night, no one having claimed it. Frederick authorities announced this morning that if it is not claimed during the day it will be taken to Montevue and buried at the expense of the county.

James Wallace, a brother of the dead man, intimated he would have the body buried if he could obtain $250 insurance carried by the murderer.

So far as is known no other claims for the body are offered by the county for the arrest and delivery of Wallace, dead or alive, have been filed except those of Mrs. Florence Graft, of Baltimore, and the detectives of that city. It is expected however, that the California officers who actually captured the man will file a claim for the reward.

Columbia Merchant Brings Suit After Discovering the Spurious Signatures

C.

One of the checks is for $46.70 and the other for $43.33. The checks were not honored by the Columbia bank and the New Freedom and Gettysburg institutions will therefore have to stand the losses.

Isaac Morrison, a clothier, has entered suit before Justice of the Peace McCracken against Paul H. Kaufman, charging him with passing a bogus check. It is not believed Kaufman is responsible for the checks cashed at New Freedom and Gettysburg, but he said other merchants in Columbia also cashed checks passed by Kaufman.

New System of Pork-Making Proves Failure

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 30.—The time honored custom of scalding a hog and scraping the bristles from its hide is too slow and laborious a process for modern times, in the opinion of Richard Zimmerman, a farmer of Derry Township, Bradford county. A few days ago Zimmerman killed a big hog and when it was ready for the "debristling" process placed it on a stone box and poured gasoline over it, applying the match.

At first it looked as though the experiment might be successful, but the boat caught fire and an instant later a pall of gasoline burst into flame.

Alarmed by the impending loss of his fine pig, Zimmerman gave the pall a vicious kick and came near "kicking the bucket," according to the common usage of the phrase.

His clothing caught fire, and but for the timely aid of his son he would have been seriously burned. The hog, somewhat singed, was rescued.
