

WEDNESDAY MORNING, July 6, 1853.

Other matters having occupied our editorial space for several days, we have not replied to the recent articles in the True Whig and Banner concerning the Bank of Tennessee.

The Banner, in the article referred to, makes the following quotation from a recent article in our paper:

"And this leads us to another conclusion, and in this whole affair, viz: that it was the intention of the parties to use the funds of the Bank to make a loan to the State, without permitting the Bank to derive any benefit therefrom."

Upon this quotation the Banner remarks that, taking the statement it contains to be true, it amounts to "nothing more than to let the State have had done elsewhere in five minutes, without paying a cent therefor."

With peculiar solemnity the True Whig, on this subject, has written the following:

Why do the whigs thus brandish their advocacy of a modification of the veto power? Democrats have contended for its preservation as a people's power. The amendments to the constitution under discussion in this State this summer are also intended to bring power nearer to the people.

We distrust the motive of the professed conservators of the veto power, and do not believe that the whigs are so sincere in their advocacy of its preservation as to be willing to abandon it upon amendment.

been practiced which no fair man has ever yet made public, it is impossible to say. When has been proved, however, that the Bank has been used unlawfully in one instance, it is not difficult to conceive that it may have been used so many times.

The steamer California was to leave on the 1st, with over two millions and a quarter of gold.

It seems by part of the news of this arrival that some unhappy controversies had arisen between Dr. Gwyn, Senator from California, and Mr. Conner, one of the late representatives, which had ended in a challenge and the almost certain prospect of a duel.

It is stated the duel was to be fought on the morning the steamer left, and that efforts made by friends to reconcile matters had proved ineffectual.

I hope, however, that it has resulted otherwise, and that there will not be another victim of this indefensible practice among the public men of California.

Mr. Gwyn, a former representative in Congress, was killed in a duel about eight months since.

The report by the captain of the ship Jamestown, arrived at San Francisco, with dates to the 6th of April, is that the insurrectionists in China had met with a signal defeat before the walls of Nankin.

There is unquestionably a deep discontent pervading the minds of the Chinese against the existing government. The appointment in the present state of that country of the Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, to the office of Commissioner to China, is a most suitable one—and fitted for any condition of things that may be found to exist.

Mr. WALKER'S sound principles on the tariff question and his general ability, qualify him for this important position in the very highest degree.

The diplomatic appointments, generally, so far as made, do credit to the sagacity of the President and Secretary of State.

You will find in the Washington Union of to-day, the second of a series of very able articles on "The Policy of the Administration," which are worthy of special attention.

Particular notice by the editor of the Union for the Boston Post. There is reason to believe that they are from the pen of a statesman of the highest talent, occupying confidential relations to the administration.

Under the influence of such sound and liberal views as those developed in these communications, it would be impossible for the whigs to create a disruption in the democratic party.

The chief means by which they hope again to rise into power. Let these be their chart and 1856 will find it as successful and united as 1852 and '53.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Times, (a whig paper) makes some strong insinuations about official delinquencies under the administration of the late Collector at San Francisco, Thos. B. King, which seem to demand a thorough investigation.

The correspondent first named under the date of June 19, communicates his letter thus, and proceeds afterwards to specific statements to which I refer you in the paper itself.

"Two months since, Secretary GORTON summoned to Washington one of the late Revenue officers at San Francisco—a gentleman of high standing in the community—to examine him with respect to certain matters of account, of the San Francisco Custom House, which were supposed to wear an address on the science of mechanism, exclusively."

Maj. HENRY replied that his list of appointments was long, the weather warm, the fatigue would be great, and that he was unwilling to agree to an appointment made outside of the regular list, and should insist on a compliance with the rule that had been established between us.

I then told Maj. HENRY that I intended to act in good faith, and comply with all that was expressed or understood between us, and would not make the appointment without his consent.

I then left Maj. HENRY, with the expectation that the whole affair was then at an end.

The speaking commenced at the usual hour, and about the close of the discussion written requests, addressed to Maj. HENRY and myself, and numerous signed, were handed me by several gentlemen, that we should address the mechanics, laborers, and others of the city on Monday night.

At the conclusion of the discussion I read the request to the audience, at the same time handing one of the papers to Maj. HENRY. I then stated to the audience that there was an agreement between Maj. HENRY and myself that the one should not make any appointment outside of the regular list without the consent of the other.

On that morning I had consulted Maj. HENRY on the subject; that he was unwilling to make the appointment; and that I felt bound to act in good faith, and could not address them without his consent.

These are the facts as they occurred, and all can draw their own and a correct conclusion from them. As to addressing the mechanics of Nashville, I was not only willing but more anxious to have done so. Having once asked the especial favor of Maj. HENRY to depart from the agreement, and being refused, I did not feel at liberty to make the appointment. Respectfully,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

THE WAIVES OF AMERICAN LADIES.—The unattractive and ridiculous smallness of their waists baffle description. A waist that could be spanned is an English metaphorical expression used in a novel, but it is an American fact; and our clear discrimination and sound discretion, my first sentiment, on viewing the phenomenon, was one of pity for unfortunate beings who might possibly be pined in the middle, like flowers from the stalk, before they were scarce concluded. No less extraordinary is the size of the ladies' waists, and our clear discrimination and sound discretion, my first sentiment, on viewing the phenomenon, was one of pity for unfortunate beings who might possibly be pined in the middle, like flowers from the stalk, before they were scarce concluded.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, June 25, '53.

The telegraphic news of the morning is the arrival of the Northern Light at New York yesterday, with dates from San Francisco to the first of June. The news is by the Nicaragua route and as late as to the first of June.

The steamer California was to leave on the 1st, with over two millions and a quarter of gold.

It seems by part of the news of this arrival that some unhappy controversies had arisen between Dr. Gwyn, Senator from California, and Mr. Conner, one of the late representatives, which had ended in a challenge and the almost certain prospect of a duel.

It is stated the duel was to be fought on the morning the steamer left, and that efforts made by friends to reconcile matters had proved ineffectual.
