

Andrew Johnson, Author of the Homestead. A full and complete history of the life of Andrew Johnson, from his birth to his death.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 26, 1853.

AN ARGUMENT WHICH CUTS TWO WAYS.

The special organs of Maj. Henry—the Clarkeville Chronicle and the Nashville True Whig—have discovered that Andrew Johnson is in favor of violating the old time-honored republican principle that taxation and representation should go together and be held ever sacredly inseparable.

"The Constitution of the United States fixes taxation and representation upon the three-fifths basis, but Mr. Johnson proposes to tax slaves, and to give to districts owning no slaves, all the benefits of the representation based upon them, but at the same time, relieve them of the burden of taxation. This British Colonial policy is out of date—the Revolution fixed the principle that taxation and representation shall go together—it is engrafted upon the Federal Constitution, and we feel assured that Tennessee will not yield it up at the bidding of a demagogue, who, it seems to us, has no other object in view, but to succeed in this scheme, and to bid the next Presidency by showing the North that he is in favor of the free white basis."

These organs of Maj. Henry do not stop to consider what their argument leads to. The Constitution of the United States provides that taxation and representation shall go together. They shall be equally "apportioned among the States."

Col. Johnson never proposed any thing else, nor any thing that could be tortured into any thing else. Congress decides, from the number of inhabitants a State contains, how many Representatives a State shall have in Congress. Upon the same basis, it becomes necessary to resort to direct taxation. Congress determines how much money a State shall raise. This a State with ten Representatives in Congress pays double the taxes which a State with five Representatives pays. The State pays extra taxes or account of the slaves who hold. But in raising the taxes, a man owning $10,000 in value of real estate, bank stock, or iron works, pays the same amount which a man owning $10,000 in value of slaves pays.

"That the district owning the property upon which the tax is to be levied should be separated, and that property is a proposition too evident to be denied, and to transfer this obvious right to a district that does not own this property, is an outrage upon republican principles."

This is a clear and positive advocacy of a property qualification by Maj. Henry's organ, endorsed by the True Whig. It is asserted that "the district owning the property should represent the property." But we tell these whigs again that the man owning $10,000 in real estate pays as much tax as the man owning $10,000 in slaves. If the State should be called upon for a tax of $100,000 by the Federal Government, the county of Davidson, with 2000 less slaves than the county of Fayette, would have to pay more than double the amount of taxes of the latter county. So that, by the showing of these papers themselves, taxation and representation would not go together, according to the present basis. So the argument is turned against those who use it with crashing force.

For ourselves, we regard the right of representation in Congress as one of the rights of the State. The question is whether our slaves shall be represented by the white voters of the State is a question of State policy, not more before the people, and which cannot come before them until the State is again divided. In the question again comes up, these whigs repeat again the argument that because representation and taxation are to be equally apportioned among the States, that therefore those who own property in the States must be represented according to the value of that property, then they will have to explain why one species of property should be represented and not another. We assure these whigs that, if the federal basis stood upon no stronger ground than this, it could not stand at all.

MAJ. HENRY'S HOME ORGAN AGAINST THE MECHANICS' LIEN POLICY. We have been well satisfied, from the first, that Maj. Henry's excuses for voting against giving the mechanic a lien for his labor were all hollow and insincere. We have felt satisfied that he did not vote against the Kentucky bill because it was imperfect. That was too palpable a dodge for any man not an idiot to believe. We felt satisfied that he did not vote against the bill because he thought it would be a bad law. That was another dodge, and of the most ridiculous kind. Our belief in this matter is turned to conviction by a recent article in the Clarkeville Chronicle, a paper published at the home of Maj. Henry, and which may be supposed to reflect very correctly his sentiments. The Chronicle takes upon itself to give an account of the present mechanics' lien law. It says "let us cut out of the bag," and doubtless gives the true reason why Maj. Henry has always voted against giving mechanics a lien for their labor. The Chronicle closes its article with the following significant paragraph about the mechanics' lien:

"IT IS UNJUST—obviously unjust; and, for one, we say, AWAY WITH THE LIEN, and substitute mechanics' law that shall give them all an equal chance. THE SAME VOTING WITH ALL OTHER CLASSES OF CREDITORS."

This is the cry started by the supporters of Maj. Henry at his very door! What do the mechanics of Tennessee think of it? Are they prepared to see the present law abolished? If they are not, do they not see the danger of trusting to Maj. Henry and his friends?

The True Whig heads a paragraph "Andrew Johnson against FRANKLIN PIERCE." The True Whig evidently improving in astuteness. It can prove "Andrew Johnson against FRANKLIN PIERCE" in the same manner as Maj. Henry's organ has done. We have expected to see the whigs claim to be the best friends of our popular President, but, after having long abused him themselves, it would be rather modest were they to come quietly into the ranks of his defenders.

THE DEFERENCE—While Southern whig papers represent the appointments by the administration as being made from free-soilers and abolitionists, their Northern allies talk as follows, (we copy from that rank Staff paper, the New York Tribune):

WEST TENNESSEE—CHERRING NEWS. A very reliable friend writes us as follows about the prospect in Madison county. Of such tone are our accounts generally from the Western District. She will do her duty nobly!

"STANTON will obtain some whig votes in this county. But JOHNSON will get the public mind on the 15th June, and the whigs will be all the victors ever achieved by a demagogue. Very truly yours."

FAIR ILLUSTRATION OF WHIG ELECTIONEERING. We commend to the attention of the public the following article from the Columbia Herald, as an illustration of the fairness and morality of the system of tactics followed into use by the whig leaders against Col. JOHNSON. Here is an untrue charge brought against Col. JOHNSON. The editor makes the charge admit its truth, but refuses to suppress the charge, or to give a copy of his paper containing it! We refer the correspondence and the facts to the democracy of the State. If such conduct by their political opponents does not arouse them, we know of no method to effect such a result.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S OWN APOLOGY. "Keep it before the People, That Andrew Johnson is in favor of, and advocates, establishing the system of representation upon the 'white basis' principle, by which less than the number of Congressmen from the South, thereby giving the N. R. the power to legislate upon the subject of Slavery, and make such disposition of that institution as she may think proper."

"Keep it before the People, That Andrew Johnson's doctrine of the 'White Basis Apportionment,' and that it is repudiated by the Memphis Appeal, and the leading Democratic paper in West Tennessee."

The above charges appeared in the Intelligencer of Thursday morning. As in duty bound, we wrote an article denouncing these charges in the most unmeasured terms, which article was in the hands of the compositor, when the following correspondence took place between the Editor of the Intelligencer, and Mr. Campbell of the Herald.

MR. CAMPBELL—Dear Sir—A moment's reflection this morning, has convinced me that I was in error in stating in yesterday's Intelligencer that Mr. Johnson is in favor of striking out the three-fifths of the negro population in determining the number of Representatives the State shall have in Congress; and also in stating that the Nashville Union and American, and Memphis Appeal do not endorse Mr. Johnson's views in regard to this issue. I should have said that he is in favor of making the voting population the basis in laying out the districts in Congressional districts, without regard to the three-fifths of the negro population, and that the Union and American and Appeal do not endorse Mr. Johnson's proposed amendments to the Constitution.

MR. CAMPBELL—Dear Sir—Your article of this morning retracting some of the charges against Andrew Johnson, contained in the Intelligencer of yesterday, is in hand. But for it, I should have been compelled, in justice to Mr. Johnson and my own position as a public journalist, to have denounced, in the most unmeasured terms, the charges alluded to. You express a desire to make "the amende honorable," and the manner you have chosen might be satisfactory to me, but nothing short of the suppression of the thousands of extra copies of your paper, which you have on hand for distribution, and the retraction of these charges in your next week's issue, as widely as they have been circulated, can make amends to me, and to the country. When I have done this, I shall have made the only amende that I have to make. If it does not satisfy you, you are at liberty to pursue whatever course you see fit—it is a matter of no moment to me. But I cannot make any charge against you, or your paper, unless you make such charges as are "unmeasured," as I cannot submit to any harsh language. I have already submitted to more ill usage from the conductors of your sheet than I shall bear unchallenged hereafter. Do not construe this as a threat; I do not intend it as such.

I shall draw a line across the objectionable passages in our "Extras," but as to suppressing them, I shall not certainly do so. Respectfully, JOHN E. HATCHER.

MR. CAMPBELL, Esq.—Sir—I shall suppress the objectionable passages in the Intelligencer of yesterday, and will publish in the next issue of the paper, as widely as I have done this, I shall have made the only amende that I have to make. If it does not satisfy you, you are at liberty to pursue whatever course you see fit—it is a matter of no moment to me. But I cannot make any charge against you, or your paper, unless you make such charges as are "unmeasured," as I cannot submit to any harsh language. I have already submitted to more ill usage from the conductors of your sheet than I shall bear unchallenged hereafter. Do not construe this as a threat; I do not intend it as such.

I shall draw a line across the objectionable passages in our "Extras," but as to suppressing them, I shall not certainly do so. Respectfully, JOHN E. HATCHER.

This correspondence explains itself. We have no doubts as to the Editor of the Intelligencer further than is legitimately constructed with the subject under consideration. We have no unkind feelings towards, nor "ill usage" to bestow upon him, and most certainly will not descend to a personal attack, but despite his own warnings we shall do our duty, and our whole duty. The Intelligencer contains charges which its editor admits to be false. This we was and is satisfactory, but understanding that several hundred extra copies of the Intelligencer were printed and distributed at the Intelligencer office, we asked of the editor, as a simple act of justice to Mr. Johnson, that these Extras should be suppressed. This he positively refused, but promises to "suppress objectionable passages in the Intelligencer" yesterday, in the "Extras" yet to be published, and to "publish in the next issue of the paper, as widely as I have done this, I shall have made the only amende that I have to make. If it does not satisfy you, you are at liberty to pursue whatever course you see fit—it is a matter of no moment to me. But I cannot make any charge against you, or your paper, unless you make such charges as are "unmeasured," as I cannot submit to any harsh language. I have already submitted to more ill usage from the conductors of your sheet than I shall bear unchallenged hereafter. Do not construe this as a threat; I do not intend it as such.

We give the editor full credit for his retract as published above, but for his refusal, when respectfully asked, to suppress his admitted false charges, we are bound to hold him up to the public. We are sorry that it is so, but our neighbor stands in the unenviable attitude of printing false charges against an honest man, and having admitted them, false, of circulating them through the country. We leave him to be judged of by a candid public, confident that all right-minded men will know what estimate to place upon his conduct. The statement of Mr. HATCHER that the Union and American "does not endorse Mr. JOHNSON'S proposed amendments to the constitution" is quite as untrue as his false charge against Col. JOHNSON.

NEW YORK, July 18.—There is a steady demand for money in the market, and it is difficult to discount freely at 6 1/2 per cent, it is difficult to effect any outside improvement in rates. Indeed we see no reason why money should command an increased rate of interest; the activity is not greater than usual at this season, and the supply is not more abundant. There is more business paper offering, but there is also a larger amount of floating capital seeking investment, so that if the market remains without excitement, there need be no premium for the loan of money.

The increased imports have excited much attention, but the exports have increased at a rate quite as astonishing. The total shipments from this port for the month of July, for the first week of the current year, amount to $2,766,000, or $1,871,000 for the corresponding period of last year, showing a gain of $1,270,000, or 67 per cent. There is a general feeling that the ratio will be continued for some time to come, and it is expected that the stock of breadstuffs and general produce. All the markets are disturbed, and lower.

FREE-SOILERS. The True Whig continues to affect alarm about the appointment of free-soilers. Often as we see such things in the True Whig, we are reminded of a charge which the True Whig has not dared deny, that money was received and used by the whigs of Tennessee from THOMAS SMITH and FRANK WARREN to enable them to carry the State for Scott. We have challenged the True Whig, the editor of which was one of the Whig State Committee, to deny this charge, if it dared. And it has not dared! And does the True Whig think it modest and becoming in itself, after having been accessory to the use of abolition money to carry the State of Tennessee for the favorite candidate of Seward, Greeley, and other northern abolitionists, to talk of the appointment of men to office who were once free-soilers, after they have publicly abandoned the heresy? In such a category, a decent silence is the least thing the True Whig should be expected to observe, even were all its charges true.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE. WASHINGTON, July 17, 1853. MESSRS. MARBLE & FARMAN—Journals from the North come teeming with accounts of the enthusiastic and brilliant reception given Gen. PIERCE at Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York. The immense enthusiasm manifested by the citizens of those places, clearly indicates the extent of his popularity. There is a degree of frankness, sincerity and honest boldness natural to the man, that never fails to captivate all who approach him. This, together with his avowed positions on public questions of vital importance, and obvious devotion to the honored institutions of our country, has, without doubt, conspired to render him, at this time, the most popular President we have had for fifteen years.

His principles as condensed in the Inaugural address were not written merely for effect, but were the genuine convictions of his judgment, as is evident by unmistakable preparations made to maintain them. Everything so far argues that his labors will meet with most triumphant success. Will not the good people of Tennessee sustain him at the ballot-box in August next? The vote given then will surely be regarded as evidence, on their part, of approbation or disapprobation of the policy of this administration. Certainly it would be a strange inconsistency to repudiate the man that is unquestionably pledged, both by word and deed, to those measures, so strenuously contended for since 1850. I allude, of course, to the compromise.

Let Tennessee roll up a large majority for the Mechanic Statesmen, and a shout, long and loud, from every portion of the Union will greet her. Mr. SOUTHWELL has been in the city some days. It is thought, to receive instructions before leaving for Spain. The report as to the probability of his non-reception at the Court of Spain, is now regarded as altogether idle. Such a course on the part of her Catholic Majesty, would be a grievous and unnecessary insult to our Government. Certainly a better appointment could not have been made. Mr. SOUTHWELL is not only among the truly great of our land, but his talents and acquirements peculiarly fit him for the position to which he has been appointed.

MR. BUCHANAN will depart for England in a few days. A rumor found its way into some of the public prints here, that he intended resigning his position on account of a personal misunderstanding between himself and the Secretary of State. This is utterly false. The warmest feelings of friendship and cordiality exist between them. The report, however, grew out of a difference of opinion on a question of diplomacy, which has been adjusted, it is said, in accordance with Mr. BUCHANAN'S views of the subject. The friends of Messrs. GWISS and McCORLE are much gratified at the harmless result of the encounter which recently took place between them in California. They fought with rifles at a distance of thirty paces. After exchanging three shots the matter was settled without bloodshed.

REPUBLICAN DESTINY.—We extract the following passage from a speech made by General CUSHING at Newark on the recent reception there of the President: There is another doctrine which all history teaches, which belongs to the day, and to the age, and to the people, and which we are bound to maintain. It is, that there is a law of the existence of a nation, which shall begin in youth, that shall grow into juvenescence, that shall reach into manhood, that in the plenitude of its strength, shall be able to give to the world a law of its own. (Applause.) We are now the men of the modern Rome. How was it with the old Rome? She conquered. She went on annexing, according to the law of her existence, (applause) and she grew. She succeeded in her conquests, and she grew. She carried her arms wherever that law of her destiny dictated that they should be borne; and she, as we ourselves, in the same way, she marched from battle-field, conquering and to conquer; for where else except in the ancient Rome—where else except in the modern Rome, has it been seen as it was seen in the battle-fields of Mexico? (Applause.) Where else, except in ancient Rome, was seen that the banner of a country, the arms of a country, the generals of a country, (applause) wherever they marched, marched victoriously; that field after field was to be fought out, and the victors were to be crowned with laurel; (Applause.) Invincible, not in the power or strength of mere mortal men, but in God (applause) manifested in us as a nation; revealed in us as a people, who proclaimed to the world that from this hour, the beginning of the new world of the revolution, there was to grow up a mighty republicanism, the representative of principles of public liberty, which I was about to say, was to overshadow no, not to overshadow, but to illuminate this whole continent. I said that it was the destiny of ancient Rome, and it is to be the destiny of Modern Rome. There can be no pause in our progress, except the pause of decay; when we cease to grow, we shall begin to perish. (Applause.)

MAINE LAW HONOR.—The following incident is told in the N. Y. Times by its Paris writer: "Mlle Mogador, a French girl in rags, who, some days ago, received a present of a horse from some sexagenarian admirer, could think of nothing too costly or luxurious for the beautiful animal's needs. She spent vast sums of money on him, and one day at night, (a rendezvous in the Bois de Boulogne) offered him a bowl of punch. The water advanced with the smoking tumbler and held it under Monte Cristo's nose. Five hundred spectators witnessed the scene, and the charger thought the opportunity favorable, and buying the hot in it, snuffed the cooling draught. Prices remain high, and the market is very active. The sales last week amount to 14,000 pieces, 60 by 64, which is considered the standard commands, at 6c. In British and Continental goods there is a fair amount of business. Prices remain quiet, and the same. Black silks are tending upwards, as are also most styles of China goods.

ADVANCE IN TOBACCO.—The market for this great staple continues stimulating, as was clearly evidenced by the sales at the public warehouses yesterday. Among the sales were four hogsheads grown in Martin county, Indiana, which commanded $8 00, $12 25, $14 00, and $14 05. This tobacco was suitable for many purposes, and was purchased by manufacturers. Indiana farmers are fast rivaling Kentucky in the growth and culture of tobacco, as the above prices clearly indicate, and the above Indiana tobacco is the best of the season. There are to be seen 7,000 and 8,000 hogsheads.—Ibid.

SELECTION—ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.—A Marylander at the City Hotel, Centre Wheeling, was confronted by a young lady, who, he thought, was his brother, on Thursday, openly charging him with seduction, and urging vehemently the fulfillment of his promise to marry her. To give weight to the arguments, she produced a ring, which was presented, and matrimony or death proclaimed as the only alternatives. A slight tremor crept over his frame, and his arms came together somewhat like the hands of a clock, after a little while, thinking discreetly the better part of valor, he snatched out his consent to a wedding and the unwelcome visitors returned to the M'Lane House where they were stopping.

Bowing them out of the door our hero reclined upon the sofa, and gave loose reins to his passion. He cursed himself for his rashness, swore vengeance against the parties, and worked his mind into a perfect frenzy. His misery proved too much for himself, and in the excitement of the operation, he knew nothing of the deception, however, and thought he would soon be, quick as thought, where he said he would be, viz: the inflexible bar of Jehovah. After putting on a cap, the pistol was handed him. He clutched it as if it were a life preserver, and with a gasp, he pulled the trigger. A report from the explosion of the cap, luckily was all that followed.—Recovering a sober consciousness of his situation, his anger melted down as wax before the flame, and he fell from his perch, and with a groaning administered friendly advice. In fact, he almost wept.

Arrangements were made during the day, and the parties left for West Alexander, where they were united in the bonds of wedlock, and again all seemed once more contented and happy. We are in possession of the names of the parties, but they are Philadelphia, and not generally known here, we have thought their publication would be unwise, while their names are so eminent would shed them from the tongue of scandal elsewhere.—Wheeling Times, 1853.

FAILURE OF THE POTATOE CROP.—From all information that we can gather, it appears evident that the potatoe crop, in this region, will prove a very short one, and the price will be small and generally low. During the week there has been some demand for shipment South, and $2 to $5 per barrel are the prices that have been paid, which is about 100 per cent over the rates of last season. The long continued drought, was the cause of the failure of the crop of early potatoes, and we are told that the late planting will fare but little better than the first. We were conversing with a farmer from Trimble county, yesterday, who cited to us in evidence of the failure of the crop, that he gathered "less than a peck of potatoes from thirty hills." At a favorable season that amount of digging would yield seven or eight bushels. Another farmer in the same county, who is a well-to-do man, and many potatoes are in the ground, and will yield many potatoes as he planted.—Lynchburg Courier.

A LOVE OF A BOUNTY.—The latest Parisian fashion is a bonnet without a crown—an assemblage of flowers, ribbons and lace, a point on tulle, richly embroidered in large dots with straw, which shades the knot of plaited hair which falls on the forehead. This is the "love of a bounty." The great domestic question, however, will be—Is it expensive? How they are known.—The following fragment of conversation was overheard the other day, on board a steamer: "I met Lord Ellesmere and his party at Niagara, the other day. I knew the ladies were persons of distinction the moment I saw them. They were all well, no jewelry, nor any other ornament whatever."

LABOR CROP OF WOOL.—The clip of wool this year from the flock of Elisha Newell, Esq., of Johnston, Rock county, Wisconsin, yielded him $3,000. He has 640 acres under cultivation, and his receipts this year, including his wool, will amount to about $7,000. Mr. Newell is the second settler on the Rock Prairie. In 1837 he was living on the prairie, under his wagon cover!

THE SMITHS IN LUCK.—Ex-Governor William Smith of Virginia, recently returned from California just in time to be elected to Congress. All the world will recognize him as "Extra Billy." His son, J. C. Smith, has just been appointed Captain of the 1st Virginia Cavalry. The Smiths are in luck. A great name in Virginia. John was among the "first families."
