Intercepted Correspondence.

The National Intelligencer has published Mr. Benjamin's letters to Messrs. Mason and Slidell, recently intercepted. We see nothing in them to give much comfort to the enemy. An allusion to Earl Russell's want of civility to Mr. Mason, and Mr. Benjamin's suspicion of French designs on Texas, are the only matters of interest. The ground of Mr. B.'s suspicion is, that France intends to hold Mexico, and wants a weak Power between its new Colony and the Confederate States; and also wants an independent cotton supply, which Texas, a weak nation and dependent on France, would afford.

The French Consul at Galveston has been dismissed the country for his agency in the matter—though it is not known that he had the authority of his Government.

Interesting Re-capture.

At the battle of Fishing Creek, where our forces were defeated under the lamented Zollicoffer, our baggage fell into the enemy's hands. In the trunk of a Confederate Captain, belonging to the 15th Mississippi Regiment, there was a package of letters received from his sister in Mississippi at various times. This trunk was taken also, with its contents. At the battle of Shiloh, on Sunday evening after the terrible route of the Abolition army, this captain of the 15th rushed into a Yankee tent, broke open an officers trunk and found the package of letters in question.

Quietness in Front.

Nothing of importance has transpired in front save and accept that of an occasional dash by our cavalry among the Abolitionists. Van Dorn has certainly crossed the Tennessee, and is reported at Tallahoma. Our army occupies its old position. One Division of Rosecrans army, is said to be this side of Murfreesboro.

Horse Marines.

In the absence of naval power, our cavalry in Texas and Tennessee are acting amphibiously—"half horse, half alligator"—in capturing gun-boats and transports. Gen. Wheeler, at last accounts, was on another raid at the water craft.

EXPLANATORY.—In our remarks to correspondents in yesterday's issue, we professed to agree with a contributor in his views about absentees from the army, and made it appear as if officers were at this post without proper authority, which was not our intention. Such may or may not be the case. We don't know. But certainly we did not intend to reflect upon the vigilance of Col. R. M. Cox, the Commandant here. He is as faithful and efficient in the discharge of his duties as an officer could be.

Those who are so unfortunate as to be the slaves of tobacco, can render the slavery far more "pleasant" by chewing that which is good. Such a luxury can be found at Templeton's store. Those of our office who love the plant say it is the best they have "chawed" since the days of peace, low prices, and honesty.

The new store opened by W. C. Munson will attract a brisk trade. He advertises a good assortment of household necessities, and we know he is offering them at a very moderate advance on the cost of such in Atlanta. Give the new store a call.

Northern editors and correspondents are becoming more and more bitter every day in their denunciation of the Administrative policy of Abraham Lincoln. The reaction going on is truly gratifying to every lover of freedom and States Rights. The New York Herald and Chicago Times, besides many other leading journals, are exemplifying a hostility to Abraham that shows very clearly that their reflection are being tolerated by the great vox populi of the United States—at least a majority of sober, thinking men who are now desirous of a cessation of hostilities and a restoration of peace. We will present to our readers daily the sayings of those leading men, who have heretofore advocated a vigorous prosecution of the war.

The anticipated recognition on the part of France terribly alarms old Bennett of the New York Herald—He is fearful that Napoleon is going to do something, and that, too, very quick. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." Bennett is dreadfully alarmed, and fears that destruction of all Abolitionism is certain. God grant that he may soon exclaim, together with his adherents:

Plunged in a gulf of dark despair,
We wretched fanatics lay,
Without one cheering beam of hope,
Or spark of glimmering day!

Some fellow who had on a heavy cargo of the "over-joyful," yesterday, accidentally allowed "old mother earth" to rise up and strike him on the head in a most unearthly manner, and brought him down full length on her snow-covered bosom. After several vain attempts he succeeded in pulling up by the snow which he cursed for being so rotten, and staggering to a pile of wood close by, wanted to know "what in the hell open space was blockaded for?" "Twas a blockade and blockhead affair, and conducted with spirit."

Oh winter is again with us, with a severity of weather, rain, snow, and ice. Yesterday was quite a raw day. Its freaks make those in adversity feel awful and melancholy. How truthfully can they exclaim with the bard:

"Adversity: cold frosts will soon be o'er:
It heralds brighter days—the joyous spring
Is cradled on the winter's icy breast,
And comes flushed in beauty."

Some one has presented the editor of the Tallahassee Sentinel a "bran new hat," and thereupon the lucky editor goes into ecstasies. We hope no one will be so rash as to present either of the editors of the Bulletin with a hat these times, for hats cost twenty dollars apiece, and we would be compelled to return any such extravagant present.

We were somewhat amused the other day at two little boys telegraphing with a clothesline. Boy No. 1 called Louisville. Boy No. 2 answered and wanted to know if he was all right, or was he Morgan's operator. Satisfied on this point, boy No. 2 stated that Richmond had been taken. No. 1 forgot himself, give No. 2 the lie, and broke up the mimic telegraphic confab.

Our Grapevine.—The latest per our Grapevine is that Gen. Van Dorn has crossed Tennessee river with 4000 cavalry. Also, that fighting is going on at Fredericksburg. We prognosticate that the Confederates will, as usual, come off victorious.

It is no use for persons to send us individual shipplasters in payment of subscription or job work. We don't take them. The notes of the Sewanee Coal and Rail Road Company, and the tickets issued by responsible men in his county we will receive, of course.

LT. BENNAN.—This intelligent officer is one of the Confederate prisoners who was taken at the battle of Murfreesboro and sent to Nashville by Rosecrans. We had the pleasure of forming his acquaintance yesterday evening and hearing his report in regard to his escape from the enemy. Lt. B. had been closely guarded by a sentinel up to the 14th of this month, when a favorable opportunity was presented for him to make good his escape, which he did by knocking down the sentinel, then donned himself in citizen's dress, made a few hasty observations, passed the Abolition pickets and arrived here a few days ago in good health and spirits.

During the Lieutenant's stay among the Abolitionists he conversed with many of the most intelligent officers and privates, and they expressed to him the belief and hope that the war would soon be brought to a close. Many of the Yankees boldly assert that they are not fighting to free the negroes, but for the restoration of the Union. In reference to the battle of Murfreesboro some claim a victory, whilst others, who are more truthful, wickedly assert that "a few more such victories will send them all to hell!"

Lt. B. says that he counted no less than 500 ambulances filled with the wounded, and the city is crowded with the wounded—one vast hospital! There are in the city also about 8000 negroes. We congratulate the gentleman in being again restored to his friends, and to his command and his brave and gallant hero, Gen. John C. Breckinridge.
