SECRET MECHANISM OF GERMAN ZEPPELIN L-49

Germany has always carefully guarded the secrets of her Zeppelins—but here's a picture of the mechanism of Zeppelin L-49. It was not until the capture of this air monster before the crew had a chance to destroy her, that the extent of the German ingenuity in Zeppelin mechanism became known. The photo shows the navigation controls in the commander's cabin, looking forward. Fig. 1 indicates the steering wheel; 2, the dial of the signal telegraph; 3, the commander's own private parachute; 4, the ropes leading to the rudder; 5, the eyepiece of the bomb sight; 6, the oxygen tank.

OLD LADIES' HOME HAS LITTLE HEAT

Boiler Out of Commission for Second Time—Gas Stoves Commandeered.

Residents of the Old Ladies' home can testify that the saying about troubles never coming singly but in bunches is only too true. They have been without heat since last Wednesday as a result of the collapse of the boiler that was recently installed, and, although all the oil heaters that could be mustered were pressed into service, these have failed to give the necessary warmth. Consequently the residents of the home have endured the cold and hoped that warmer days would come by and by. Earlier in the winter the boiler in the basement in the of the institution gave way completely, due to what is thought to have been the infirmities of old age, and, after some delay, a new boiler was installed. The new boiler appears to have been defective as it also went down. After an inspection had been made it was thought that the installation of new sections would remedy matters. A few days ago, sent here from Birmingham, was found to be broken upon arrival in the railroad yards. Other sections have been ordered, and it was stated Saturday morning that there may be some heat at the home in the next twenty-four hours.

DUTCH SHIPS MAY SERVE TO TRANSPORT COTTON

New York, Jan. 5.—According to reports received here today by cotton brokers and shippers, a number of the Dutch steamships which have been held here and at other Atlantic ports for several months by embargo regulations, may be used within a short time to transport cotton from South Atlantic and Gulf ports to cotton manufacturing ports of New England.

The operation of the ships in this trade, it is understood, will be under the direction of the U. S. shipping board and the immediate purpose of their use is to relieve a shortage in raw cotton in New England mills with large contracts for war supplies. In addition, the use of the Dutch ships for this purpose will not only obviate the necessity of taking American tonnage from overseas trade, but will also take a burden from the rail lines.

Nashville, Jan. 5.—The body of Albert Blauvelt, the Chicago insurance man who jumped off a Nashville bridge with a rope fastened about his neck yesterday afternoon, was recovered from the Cumberland river this morning by a riverman. The neck was broken. Nothing has developed to explain the man's motive for destroying himself in such a startling manner. It has developed, however, that Blauvelt registered at one hotel Thursday morning at 11 o'clock and registered off that evening at 6. He appeared at another hotel Friday morning at 4, registering there, and appearing to be very nervous. The police are attempting to learn his whereabouts between Thursday afternoon and Friday morning in the hope that light may thereby be thrown upon his death.
