

MISS VIOLET MYRICK TO WED THOMAS SENTER

Wedding of Popular Young Couple Takes Place Thursday at Central Baptist Church.

A wedding of much interest is that of Miss Violet Myrick and Thomas S. Senter, which takes place Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Central Baptist church.

Easter lilies and palms are attractively arranged about the altar. Miss Harriett Nichols will render the nuptial music.

The bride will be attired in a tailored coat suit of blue cloth, worn with gray hat, gloves and shoes.

Miss Myrick is the youngest daughter of Mrs. J. J. Myrick, of Ringgold, Ga., but has spent a greater part of her time with relatives in this city.

Following the ceremony the young couple will go on a wedding trip to New Orleans and other southern points and upon their return will go to house-keeping in an apartment in the city.

Mr. Senter is connected with the Southern railway office. Mrs. Carl Senter, of Gainesville, Ga., will attend the wedding.

CRANDALL-VAN SCOY WEDDING IN NEW YORK

The marriage of Addison Bardshar Crandall, of this city, to Miss Alice C. Van Scoy, of Candor, N. Y., is announced by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Drew Van Scoy, the event taking place at the home of the bride, March 27.

Mr. Crandall is the son of Mrs. Bertha B. Crandall, the Chattanooga artist, and is a brother of Miss Katherine Crandall, former teacher of chemistry of the Chattanooga High school, and Irving Crandall, of New York.

The bride was a teacher of home economics at Cornell university. Both Mr. and Mrs. Crandall are graduates of Cornell university of the class of 1917.

BRIDGE PARTY GIVEN FOR MRS. FRASH, OF INDIANA

Mrs. Frash, of South Bend, Ind., was honored at a bridge party given Wednesday afternoon by Mesdames Ed Reed and J. H. Buchholz in the Hardwick-Hoghead. The rooms were decorated with roses and carnations.

Five tables were arranged for the game. Mrs. Frash is the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. S. Smith, in the Hardwick-Hoghead.

MAC DOWELL CLUB GIVES PROGRAM ENGLISH MUSIC

At a meeting of the MacDowell club, held Wednesday morning, with Mrs. D. A. Graves in Park Place, a program on English composers was given. The date was set for the annual election of officers, but owing to the limited time the election was postponed to another meeting.

During the business session report was made of the concert given by Mrs. Edward MacDowell but as all returns were not yet in it was impossible to state the exact amount realized. However, it is known that the event was a financial success, as well as an artistic one.

During the program at Wednesday's meeting a number of choice selections were given. Mrs. Morris Temple, accompanied by Mrs. R. A. Bettis, sang a group of old English songs. Mrs. Nevins Sloan played a nocturne. Mrs. W. F. D. Morgan sang "Apple Blossoms" and a Norwegian love song.

PLAYING OF SOLDIERS EXCITES MUCH COMMENT

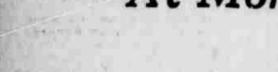

The playing of Messrs. Casale and Long, of the Fifty-second infantry, before the Chattanooga Woman's club, Tuesday afternoon, has been the occasion of much favorable comment. The program was arranged by Mrs. D. A. Graves, of the music department, who, it is stated, has been constantly discovering fine musical talent among the enlisted men at Fort Oglethorpe. Among the dozen or more whose talent has appeared to Mrs. Graves are Messrs.

THREE Drug Stores

Let's Make the World Safe for

(By Winona Wilcox.) East of the Atlantic the host that perished in battle this Easter tide is still uncounted.

West of the Atlantic comes the national "baby week" with its slogan, "Save the babies!" Gentle mothers shudder as they think of the wastage of war. They whisper, "Why cherish the child—to make, sometime, only a bubble of blood on the war brew?"

Nevertheless, this natural sentiment of mothers is exactly the worst of all possible sentiments at the present time. The baby is the chief asset, the most precious possession of the nation. If the baby is not saved, the nation falls, democracy falls.

Though all sensitive souls agonize with the wounded of the allied forces, now is not the time to cry out against the horrors of war. It is the time to hate the Hun who made the war, time to hold that hatred high before every alien resident of this country, time to destroy every vestige of German influence in this country. It is time to double our sacrifices for our armies, time to make the world safe for our babies.

"But I'm only a girl," or "an old ma," or "a spinster," someone complains. "What can I do to win the war?"

Hate war and hate the Hun enough to motivate yourself. Get into action somehow against barbarism, for civilization.

You can learn your part from the current baby week teaching: Wrong feeding and overfeeding. Not starvation, causes most of the sickness of children.

The parallel is perfectly plain, if unpleasant. The American adult overfeeds himself as well as his child. It is within the power and it is the duty of every adult in this country to help the allies every day as far as the war lasts: Eat only what you need, not what you want.

This has been preached so long and so loud that it sounds silly—to carelessly contented people. Nevertheless, with the buying of liberty bonds and thrift stamps it is actually the greatest service any civilian can offer the nation.

To endure the war stoically, to tell how terribly it makes us feel, to comfort our souls with knitting socks and sending checks to the Red Cross, is not the limit of a normal person's help. But we will not put forth all our strength unless we hate.

Some persons foster themselves that they are too civilized to hate, that it is fine to love what is lovely—little babies for instance—and to ignore what is hateful.

Contented people do not make sacrifices. As we would make the world safe for the baby we love, we must hate the Kaiser and his barbarians. Don't be too proud to hate. Hate enough to starve yourself, if need be. "Save the babies!" "Slay the Hun!"

RICE-MARTIN NUPTIALS SOLEMNIZED AT BRIDE'S HOME THIS AFTERNOON

A wedding of unusual interest in Chattanooga social circles was that of Miss Gladys Rice and Lieut. James Hunter Martin, of Athens, Ala., which was solemnized at the bride's home, 445 Douglas street, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The reception hall, dining room and parlor of the home were thrown into one large reception room for the occasion, which was elaborately decorated with spring flowers and palms. The bride and groom entered the parlor from the reception hall to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, rendered on the piano by Miss Louise Bradford, who also played the accompaniment to "Oh, Love of Mine," beautifully sung by Mrs. Clyde Wilkins, preceding the wedding ceremony.

During the ceremony, lending a touch of harmony and sweetness to the pronouncement of the vows, Miss Bradford played softly "To a Wild Rose." The ceremony was performed by Dr. E. E. Wiley, pastor of the "Centenary" church.

The bride, an unusually handsome and attractive young girl, looked charmingly beautiful in a costume of dark blue cloth, with hat and shoes to match. She carried a corsage bouquet of orchids and valley lilies. The maid of honor, Miss Katherine Melton, was beautifully attired in a dress of pink blue with hat to match. Her flowers were Aaron Ward roses and valley lilies.

Ross Richardson, of Athens, Ala., was best man. Only a few intimate friends and relatives were present, including out-of-town guests—W. L. Martin and Miss Macca Martin, of Athens, Ala., father and sister of the bridegroom, and W. E. Cunningham and C. C. Campbell, of Nashville.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Rice, and since her graduation from Central High school she has been active in church and social centers. She is accomplished and possesses a charming personality, which has made her a reigning favorite in the younger social set.

The bridegroom is a lieutenant in the regular army, having been transferred soon after he won his lieutenant's commission at the Fort McPherson officers' training camp, and was detailed to the Seventeenth infantry, then stationed at Fort Oglethorpe. This regiment was later divided up for patrol duty and Lieut. Martin's squadron was sent to Springfield, Mass., to guard the government arsenal at that place. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Martin, of Athens, his father being a leading business man of the little Alabama city.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin left immediately after the ceremony for Athens, where they will be given a reception at the home of the bridegroom on arrival. Later they will go to Springfield.

The couple received many handsome and valuable wedding presents, consisting of silver, cut glass, several substantial checks and a number of liberty bonds, from personal and family friends.

Frane, Taylor and Metzgar, as well as Casale and Long.

Mr. Casale is a violinist of fine ability and, as his name suggests, is of Italian extraction. Programs given each week by Mrs. Graves' committee at Fort Oglethorpe have been instrumental in bringing to light musical ability among the soldiers, which otherwise might have remained in seclusion, it is said.

The McLearen class of the Trinity M. E. church will give a social Saturday night at 8 o'clock in the Sunday school room.

VIRGINIA GIVING WORLD A FAMOUS PIANIST

John Powell, Exponent of Romance, Poetry and Beauty of Old South, Stirs New York.

John Powell, pianist, of Virginia, hailed by the critics as the Edgar Allen Poe of music, is creating a deep impression in the east, where he has been spending the winter since his return from many years of study in France. Says one of his reviewers: "His art expresses the romance, poetry and beauty of Virginia." He is a descendant of Col. Levan Powell, of Washington's staff, and bears a striking resemblance to his illustrious ancestor.

The Musical Courier devotes several columns to his work and tells of his influence upon the sculptor, Rodin, who rushed in tears into his garden at the completion of one of Mr. Powell's masterly interpretations of Chopin.

The young Virginian is playing the List "Kosert Solo," rarely attempted by pianists. He is also a composer whose productions are approved by the best critics.

The class motto is "One country, one flag, and the American Beauty rose has been chosen as the class flower.

The graduates are William Henry Edridge, Benton Haynes Pitts, Jr., Edna Skellern, Rebecca Maria Hamill, James Elmer Hixson, Constance Valeria Rogers, Myra Marguerite Selcer, Carrie Edna Harrison, Richie Hovser Hartman and Luther Hixson.

DR. GILMORE TALKS AT CHESTNUT STREET SCHOOL

Dr. Emma Gilmore, of the United States health department, addressed the Parent-Teachers' association of the Chestnut Street school Wednesday afternoon at 8 o'clock in the interest of child welfare and was strongly and practically presented.

Reports on the Red Cross work showed that the association and children of the school as well as the school itself had resulted in much work having been completed and more on hand.

Two quilts, one a knitted one, the other a quilted one, were almost finished. The boys of the school are very active in collecting magazines and papers for the soldiers. Mrs. George Killian, president of the association, presided. Mrs. H. Arledge was elected treasurer.

The committee on garden work reported being very busy and that a Red Cross and garden club would be organized in the future. About fifty ladies were present.

MISS MACPHERSON REVIEWS "PYGMALION" BY SHAW

The honor of George Bernard Shaw, as set forth in his play, "Pygmalion," was the subject of an interesting study conducted by Miss A. Marie Macpherson before the Drama league at a meeting held Wednesday in the courthouse. Mrs. Fred W. Hixson, leader, was in charge of the meeting. In presenting her theme, Miss Macpherson gave a comprehensive review of the drama with its sprightly plot and commendable motive. The meeting was well attended.

The next program will be conducted May 1, by Mrs. Y. L. Abernathy, when "The Twelve-Pound Look," by Barrie, will be given. Percy Mackay's "Thousand Years Ago" will be reviewed by Mrs. M. L. Blevins.

IDAH McGLONE GIBSON TELLS OF VISIT TO FRONT TRENCHES

Friend From Boston "Forgets" His Tin Hat and Coat—And What is Provided With Uniform for Trip.

(By Idah McGlone Gibson.) I was determined to get to the front and, of course, the French war office had refused me a pass.

Then I met a young friend from Boston. I had known his mother well. I said "Harry, I want to get to the front."

He looked me over rather superciliously and said, "You haven't the suit."

I thought how horrified his Bostonese mother would be if she could hear her boy speaking in this inelegant manner.

"I am not sure whether I have or not, Harry, but I want to try," I said. "What are you wearing under that skirt?" he asked.

"Riding breeches," I answered. "They'll do," was his comment. "What do you mean?" I asked.

"You must have sense enough to know that no 'skirt' could go to the front when it was in action," he answered, "but if you really mean what you say, meet us down the road about three-quarters of a mile tonight and I'll see that you get there." And he got up and left a khaki overcoat and a tin hat on a chair.

That night a most unseemly figure in khaki wended its way down the pitch dark road, and finally came to a place where a French soup kitchen was on its way to the communicating trench. The figure bowed silently and acknowledged an introduction to two French officers and fell in behind the soup kitchen.

From the conversation it was learned that on this night the exchange of com'c'os in the trenches was to be made, and when the soup kitchen arrived at the communicating trench, the men were just coming out.

Since I have been home, a mother has shown me the picture of her son, just after he had come out of the trenches at the English front, and she said, with tears in her eyes, "He looks thirteen years older."

I was glad to be able to tell her that this age would wear off in a few days after the men leave the trenches, but as the French polio stumbles out, covered with mud and caked with grime, he certainly does not look human.

There is nothing more beautiful in the way of fireworks than the French front at night. The star shells—shells sent up on both sides to light up "No Man's Land"—are constantly in the air. Then there are shells of different colors, which tell that gas is coming or to give the artillery commanders.

There the belching guns and here and there an airplane with dropping bombs makes one wonder if the nether regions will not be much like this in its terrible picturesqueness.

MENZLER TO LECTURE ON "CHILD AND HOME"

Third of Series of Free Lectures at Alton Park Schoolhouse Arranged by Principal.

Rev. C. C. Menzler will give his lecture, "Child and the Home," Friday evening at 8 o'clock at Alton Park schoolhouse. This is the third of the series of free lectures arranged for by the principal.

Mr. Menzler is secretary of the state board of charities, and has made this subject a study of several years. Former lectures have been highly pleasing and this one will be up to the standard. It should prove of great interest to all parents and is free of charge. It is obligatory that they do this, but that any service is entirely voluntary on their part.

A storm was raging at the time and the slayer escaped. Bloodhounds from Jackson have picked up a trail. Great excitement prevails at Denmark and the entire community is aiding in the search for the fugitive. Mr. Dickerson was a married man.

MOON CLASSIFICATION BILL PASSED HOUSE

Postmaster Howell Announces Civil Service Examination for Postal Service.

Postmaster Howell has received a communication from the district secretary of the civil service commission to the effect that a clerk-carrier examination is announced to be held at the Chattanooga office on May 1.

Postmaster Howell states that on March 26, last, the lower house of congress passed the Moon bill changing the classification of clerks and carriers. According to the provisions of this bill clerks and carriers will now enter the service at $1,000 and be promoted automatically to $1,500, the promotions to come at the rate of $100 per annum. The salary mentioned is based on eight hours' service daily and overtime is allowed at the same rate. The schedule of salaries mentioned, of course, applies only to clerks and carriers and does not include the employees acting in supervisory capacities—shiers, finance clerks, bookkeepers, etc. This bill will go to the senate immediately and it is expected to pass without opposition.

The communication announcing the clerk-carrier examination follows: "Sir: A clerk-carrier examination is announced to be held for your office on May 1, 1918. It is desired to secure for this examination a large

And then the noise. There is a word in the English language to describe the noise of the battle. No wonder men become wrecks of shell shock. The old story of being able to hear your own thoughts is perfectly illustrated here. Your refusal to respond to anything except the horror and fright occasioned by the noise of guns and shells here and there a sharp cry as a man is struck.

Not often, though, do you hear these cries, as very few men that they have been hit immediately after they have been wounded.

On the night of which I am writing in the khaki overcoat and the figure in khaki held out a trembling hand a bowl of soup then discovered the whole "face" of the man coming toward me, blown away, and blood spurting.

The man, however, did not seem to be hurt and as he held his hand for the soup, the spurted over it and he remarked with surprise: "It is blood."

He had hardly gotten the words of his mouth when he crumpled a fist of the trembling, horrified Frenchman in the corner, stumbled and fell, who was evidently almost in a state of collapse.

Harry, the young American, stepped up quickly and hissed in "his" "Buck up, buck up, or I'll knock your fool head off."

It was exactly what was needed to bolster up the pole of "the boy," when another man came stumbling past and deliciously said "It is a little bowl of soup from the 'bo hands. Harry thought it was a glass to get out of a bad scrape."

He said to the young Frenchman pushed into an ambulance, "You better let this 'boy' go back with Franche. He is delirious and in that it is his son."

The wounded Frenchman pushed into an ambulance and the trembling figure of "the boy" in khaki clung to the tail steps while the wounded soldier clasped "his" hand. Colder and colder grew this hand, when the ambulance arrived at the field hospital the man was dead.

Out into the darkness stumbled quaking, horrified "boy," and after seemed, endless miles along the road, when the ambulance stopped at the hospital at Gen. Pershing's headquarters, overcome with cold and nervousness. I was there ten days.

I understand now why the French war office will not give the French newspaper woman, that will take her to the front when the sector is
