WAR'S EFFECT UPON RELIGION

American Soldiers in France Show Unconventionality of Religion.

ABSENCE OF SECTARIANISM

Afraid to Seem Pious, Yet Boys Are Strong for Religion and for Chaplains.

(By William T. Ellis, the Religious Hamlet. Copyright, 1918, by the Ellis Service.)

American Headquarters in France.—American soldiers are so busy about the absorbing task of trying to get something like fundamental righteousness into the Germans that they have not much time for prayer-meetings and they are prone to pious talk.

Imagine a Roman Catholic priest saying, as naturally as though he had been in the seminary to speak so, "The boys like to look into the chapel and say 'hello' to our Lord."

There are more clergymen over here than appear on the roster of army chaplains. Most of them are in Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. service, though there are quite a number in the ranks.

There is current among the boys a sort of "religion" which is not a religion, but a sort of "religion" which is not a religion, but a sort of "religion" which is not a religion.

The great realities are too close to the life in the army for anybody to care for petty and man-made denominationalism. In all the countless general orders that have been issued by commanders of great armies during recent centuries is there one more significant than this statement from the commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary force: "Hardship will be your lot, but trust in God will give you comfort; temptation will befall you, but the teachings of our Savior will give you strength. Let your valor as a soldier and your conduct as a man be an inspiration to your comrades and an honor to your country. J. J. PERSHING."
