ANDREW JOHNSON.

The amount of good which a man accomplishes, or the evil he brings upon himself and others, is necessarily determined and prescribed by the extent of his social, moral, and political influence.

The amount of self which is the primary and secondary, the anterior and posterior, the first and last object of his life, as his history will sufficiently prove from the first public trust he enjoyed up to his accidental incumbency of the Presidential chair of the United States.

How his former constituents in this Congressional district relish this military "cut" in the Colonel, will be properly answered at the ballot box when he again presents himself before them as a candidate for re-election to Congress.

Letter from Persia.

The following interesting letter has been kindly furnished us for publication, by Dr Cunningham, of this place, written by his daughter, Mrs. S. J. Rice, widow of the late Samuel Rice, who was a Missionary among the Nestorians, and who died near Tabreez, Persia, some twelve months since.

Sirs, Persia, July 28, 1866.

DEAR PA—You have already received Mrs. Cook's thanks thro' Ma for the signal and very great benefit she believes herself to have obtained from your prescription, acetate of lead &c.

A servant of one of the Masters at Sir dreamed he went down to the city, took cholera, died was greatly lamented and buried. The next day his wife sent for him to come, as she had borne him a child. He went in the morning sickened and died the following night 1 Day before yesterday two young men were at work in the yard before the window where I write, mending chairs for Dr. Perkins apparently quite well, worked till dark, retired as usual, at 2 A. M. the mother of one came knocking at the gate to beg cholera medicine, it was given in vain. At ten o'clock A. M. the young man was in eternity! There stand his chairs now, in the shade before my eyes, half done and half undone! Is it not solemn! What is life! What is man! What are earthly hopes—human plans! Do you wonder terror is in all faces, and some are almost holding their breath to see what the Lord will do next! When I go up at the sunset hour and sit down by Samuel's and Robert's graves heaven seems very near and I almost envy the quiet blessed sleepers who fear death no more. "In heaven above, where all is love. There'll be no more sorrow there." I love to feel that I and mine are His, in whose Omnipotent hand are all our destinies. We feel safe and calm, and He is our refuge and our trust. Not even a sparrow falls without his knowledge. Mrs. Annie, Foster and Sophie are quite well and passing a quiet Summer. They comfort me very much I often feel overwhelmed with care for them.

If you were nearer I should often love to ask your medical advice. Miss Rice's case of chronic diarrhoea has loudly called for the attention of a physician. She is now near the Lake, taking salt baths, and writes that they are strengthening and beneficial. Many of our circles have no hope that she will be permanently relieved, and she between 45 and 50 years of age and has worked here with all her might 20 years. She is often advised to go home to America, but such is her devotion to this sacred work that she does not every doctrine he ever enunciated. He was wickedly betrayed and outraged the "Freedmen," who looked imploringly and hopefully to him as their benefactor, to deliver them from the wrongful persecutions of their old masters. Yes, Andrew Johnson, is a wild and untrammelled rage of wicked passions, has given himself up to such hardness of heart and reproach of mind, as to detest justice, crucify law, legalize murder, defy both man and God, and, in short, to change that light, which beamed upon our blood-drenched country with so glorious and hopeful effulgence, at the close of the late struggle, into almost the darkness and gloom of the Middle Ages. He can never, thank God, "swing around the circle" of events again, to the confidence and support of the patriotic and loyal masses of the American people.

Hon. N. G. Taylor in Maine—His Reception Rather Rough.

The Kittery, Maine, correspondent of the New York Herald, furnishes the following, under date of September 4th:

"This evening Colonel Taylor, of East Tennessee, one of the recently admitted representatives to Congress, came to Kittery, accompanied by Colonel Mann, of Portland, to address a Johnson mass meeting. Colonel Taylor fought nobly in the Union army during the war, and suffered heavily for his loyalty. He visited Maine some two years ago, and took up a subscription for the houseless Union men of East Tennessee. The Radical faction then sounded his praise throughout the length and breadth of the State, and the unqualified adhesion their leader here now gives to the policy of President Johnson is one of the hardest blows they have yet received. His second coming to Maine has carried consternation into their camp. He was roughly received."—E.

Yes! Colonel Taylor's "noble fighting in the Union army" was like the story of Nancy, her husband, and the bear. The man secured a safe retreat in the left of his cabin, and left his wife to fight the bear, crying the while, "Lay on Nancy! lay on Nancy!" After Nancy had killed the bear, her husband said to her, "Aint we brave fellows, Nancy?" Colonel Taylor never smelt gun-powder in the Federal army—he belonged to the Union army in no way nor form, neither would he permit his sons to join it. And so assure our Northern friends of these facts—so they may not be deceived. He never belonged to but one military organization, and that is known as Andy Johnson's "Bread-and-Butter Brigade;" into which he lately sold himself—soul and body—breaches and boots.—How his former constituents in this Congressional district relish this military "cut" in the Colonel, will be properly answered at the ballot box when he again presents himself before them as a candidate for re-election to Congress.

Death of a Rebel.

ROCKSWAY, New York, September 27.—Gen. N. Leadbetter, late of the rebel army, died of apoplexy at the Clifton House, C. W., last night. He belonged at Mobile, and left a considerable sum of money and valuable effects when he died.—Telegraphic Dispatch.

Hard on "Black Bill."

The Knoxville Way gets after "William B." in the following fashion: "Reverend! W. B. Carter, one of the orators of the late Johnson meeting in this city, is a very dark-skinned man. He has always been called 'Black Bill Carter.' But for the straightness of his hair he would pass anywhere for a negro. No mulatto or half-breed in the South is darker than 'Black Bill Carter.' In his speech here he complained that 'though an original Union man, he was disfranchised under the laws of Tennessee, while Judge George Brown, who was a rebel, could vote.' He added that his only consolation and hope of being permitted to vote, was that 'his skin was black.' He thought this would pass with the Radicals. We can tell the Reverend! gentleman he is mistaken. His black skin will not be a passport with Tennessee Radicals, because they know his heart is blacker than his skin, or that of any negro in the State. Radicals in Tennessee know he now has in his possession some twenty-two thousand dollars stowed away in the pockets of the bridges in 1861—money intended to be paid the brave men who did this work, and which should now be paid the widows and orphans of these men who died in rebel prisons and upon rebel battle-fields—money upon which the anti-rebel, Bill Carter, is living in affluence, while the widows and orphans of Union and others, who are entitled to it, are begging bread. Carter calls the Governor 'King Brownlow.' Says he is 'opposed to Brownlow having absolute power.' Well, he may be. If Gov. B. had 'absolute power,' Carter would now be in the penitentiary, with a striped suit on, breaking rock, where he should be for stealing thousands from widows and orphans of martyred patriots. It was not greater sacrilege in John A. Murrel to exercise the functions of a minister than in this traitor, coward and villain, William Brownlow Carter, alias Widow-Orphan-Killer—'Black Bill Carter.' If the black son of African descent, were as black-hearted and hypocritical as this fellow Carter, there would be no advocates of negro suffrage."

Giving them "Fits."

The Richmond Times, a rebel paper, after scorching old Bennett, of the New York Herald for going over to the Radicals, thus raps Raymond over the head, (that great Conservative.)

But we regret to observe that there are melancholy and most significant evidences that Henry J. Raymond, the author of the address of the National Conservative convention, has grown weary of the arid pastures of Conservatism, and is longing to return to the more attractive fields of Radicalism. This treason to the cause which he has most clamorously and vigorously espoused for three months, would be unparalleled in its infamy and enormity; but in deserting the cause of the Conservative ticket in New York, Mr. Raymond has inflicted a terrible blow upon the cause of the President. He has certainly a right to be very bitter against the party which recently, in National council assembled, selected him as its leading champion and mouth-piece. He has probably brought ruin upon the cause of the Conservative party in New York by declining to support Mr. Hoffman the Conservative candidate for Governor.

"Right in the Main."

The New York Herald, after expressing its amazement at the overwhelming results of the Maine election, which it attributes to such "ghastly scenes of disorder" as the New Orleans riots, "in which the guilty escape without punishment," draws the following significant conclusion: "Whatever may have been the real causes, however, operating to bring about the extraordinary results of the Maine election, it is too decisive against the Democracy and Conservatives to be limited to Maine. We apprehend that, as in all our political contests of the past of a national character, the result in Maine indicates the general drift of the election coming after it throughout the Northern States. The prospect now of a Conservative majority in the next Congress is very doubtful; the prospect of another Radical Congress is better than it has appeared at any time since December last. In short, this Maine election of 1866 will probably mark another new chapter in our political history and perhaps another reorganization of parties and another reconstruction of party platforms for the Presidential election, beginning with the close of the coming elections of October and November.

In fact nothing short of a miracle can save the Copperhead party now. The same causes which influenced Maine are at work in every State.

At Harville, Louisiana, on Saturday a Union soldier was hung by a mob and his wife and three small children driven from the country. The perpetrators of the outrage are of course, unknown, as usual.—Clarke Gazette.

GENERAL GRANT.

A Copperhead Falshood Exposed.—The Speech which the General did not make—His presence with the Johnson Party accounted for—Seward's Impertinence—General Grant and the Broad-and-Butter Committee, etc.

(Special Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune, Sept. 17.) PRITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—A mischievous report has been telegraphed over the country from Cincinnati, originating in the office of the Copperhead Enquirer, to the effect that Gen. Grant had made a speech in Wood's Theatre, in response to demonstrations in his honor, saying, in substance: "The President of the United States is my commander-in-chief. I consider this a demonstration in opposition to President Johnson, and I cannot read will not meet you. If you have any regard for me you will take your men away to their homes. I am greatly annoyed at this demonstration, for I came here to enjoy this theatrical performance. I will be glad to see you all when the President arrives."

I remain, dear Pa, Yours affectionately, SARAH JANE RHEA.

ARREST OF BOTH PARENTS. KINGSBORO, C. W., Sept. 15. Another case of fatal child hogging, in possible more revolting in shocking details than the recent Lindsay child murder in Medina, N. Y., occurred at Sarnia, a few miles from this city, on Wednesday last, the victim in this instance being a little girl 5 years of age, named Kate Sibley, the illegitimate daughter of Schuyler Sibley and a Miss Kate Davis, and the alleged rotundity leading to the cruel act being the refusal of the child to say its prayers. From the evidence elicited at the inquest on the body of the child, it appears that on the night in question the mother had beaten the child with a raw hide for nearly an hour, and when rendered insensible by pain and loss of blood, thrust it into a chair and went to bed. For a time the child was heard to moan as if in intense agony, but soon became quiet, and nothing more was heard until near morning, when a servant entering the room found the child dead, and immediately gave the alarm. Upon lifting the child from the floor, where it had fallen a most revolting sight was presented. The head, face and shoulders, were scarred and discolored from the terrible blows of the raw hide, while the body, from head to foot, presented a shockingly mangled and bloody appearance. Old scars, scarcely healed, were also visible upon the body, testifying to former cruel hoggings. The medical evidence showed that the injuries of the hogging were sufficient alone to produce death, but that serious internal injuries, the result of kicks or blows, had previously been received; and the entire absence of food for many hours had also something to do with the result. The child, in being examined, confessed that a few days previous to the fatal act, the father of the child had administered unto it a most unmerciful beating for not saying its prayers, and ordered her to do the same whenever it refused. The jury returned a verdict, criminalizing both parents, whereupon they were both committed to prison to await trial for murder.

"As Goes Pennsylvania so Goes the Union."

The gubernatorial election in Pennsylvania will be all one way. Mayor General Geary will undoubtedly be elected by a majority that will settle the question at issue in all the other loyal States, and revive the old proverb, "As goes Pennsylvania so goes the Union." Thousands of the supporters of President Johnson cannot conscientiously vote for Heister Clymer, and the President himself cannot desire the defeat of such a candidate as Geary. The chief importance of the Pennsylvania election, therefore, is in its bearings upon the next Senatorship.—N. Y. Herald, Sept. 17.
