PILAR TAKEN BY NATIVE POLICE. The Capture Most Important, According to General Schwan. MANILA, June 9.-General Plot del Pilar, the most aggressive and most persistent of the Filipino leaders, who was captured last night, as previously cabled to the Associated Press, was made a prisoner at Guadoloupe, six miles east of Manila, by some of the Manila native police. Upon information received that Pio del Pilar was to be at a certain house, Captain Lara and twelve policemen proceeded in a launch to Guadaloupe, where, aided by a detachment of the Twenty flow Large and the Twenty flow Large. the Twenty-first Infantry, they surrounded the house, captured the General, and brought him this morning to Manila. where he was positively identified before the provost marshal.

IMPORTANCE OF THE CAPTURE. WASHINGTON, June 9.—General Mac-Arthur has cabled the following report of the capture of General Pilar

"Manila, June 9, 1900.-Native police captured the insurgent general Pio del Pilar this morning. He was found in the neighborhood of San Pedro (Signed.) MACARTHUR General Schwan's estimate of the im-cortance of the news is contained in this statement: "The capture of General Pio del Pilar, cabled by General MacArthur this morning, is a most important one. Pilar was regarded as one of the most active and uncompromising of the native chieftains. He succeeded in withdrawing his tains. He succeeded in withdrawing his troops to the mountains, and eluding the several columns that were sent out to destroy him. ## HANNA TO SUCCEED HIMSELF.

Will Conduct the Coming Republican Campaign.

WASHINGTON, June 9.-It is stated on high authority that Senator Hanna will succeed himself as chairman of the Republican National Committee, and will conduct the coming campaign. The only thing which can change this programme, it is said, is some change for the worse in the Senator's health.

Senator Hanna and Secretary Dick had a long conference with the President to-day about political matters in general. Mr. Dick will go to Philadelphia next Monday, and Senator Hanna will arrive there on the 13th instant.

The President had a large number of callers to-day, among them Senators Allison, Lodge, and Spooner, and Representative Cannon.

PROGRESS OF CENSUS-TAKING.

Indians Refuse to Answer Questions, and Have Their Way.

WASHINGTON, June 9.-It has been reported to the Director of the Census that complete returns have been made from 175 enumeration districts, principally from 175 enumeration districts, principally in New York and other large cities. The entire enumeration of the large cities will be terminated by the middle of the month, and as soon as they can be checked and tabulated the results will be made public.

An numerator in the Indian Territory has informed Director Merriam that certain Indians there refuse to reply to questions contained in the census schedule. The Director advised him to let the matter drop, as an effort to compel the Indians to reply would probably lead to serious difficulties.

EXPOSITION HARVEST BEGUN.

Twice Last Week Number of Visitors Exceeded 500,000.

PARIS, June 9 .- The golden harvest of the exposition has at last begun. Twice this week the number of visitors exceeded half a million, which figure surpasses that half a million, which figure surpasses that of the 1839 exposition at a similar period. It is estimated that over 8,000,000 persons have passed the turnstiles. The greatest difficulty now is experienced in getting from the grounds at night, the street-cars and omnibus facilities being utterly inadequate to cope with the immense crowds. THE RESERVE TO SERVE THE PROPERTY OF THE PERSON OF THE PER CUPID WITH A JIMMY. THE RESERVE THE PROPERTY.

(Chicago Times-Herald.) When John Trumbull fell in love with vivacious and sprightly Gertrude Moore no one would ever have suspected that he was a scholar, a thinker and a settled man of 40. His general actions were those of a youth of 18 undergoing his first case of love. The upshot of it was that when these two became engaged Miss Moore Pulled Mr. Trumbull around by his philosophical nose and made him dance to her fiddling as suited her capricuous and changing moods. Matrimony found the same condition of affairs. Every domestic question was decided by Mrs. no matter whether it was the choice of an apartment or the selection of a new coffee grinder. Mr. Trumbull being still in a state of blinding affection and admiration for the little girl of 20 whom he had wooed and won, let her have her way, with the result that he was being henpecked to the queen's taste. But as the years went by, as the years have a way of doing, Mr. Trumbull gradually awakened to the one-sided state of affairs. Mrs. Trumbull, being selfish and possessing a thistledown intellect, fancied that it would not do to la Mr. Trumbull know that she was at all fond of him. Some old lady had told her once that when a man knows that a woman loves him his affection becames chilled came over John's heart. He still considered that dainty wife the smartest, cleverest woman in the world, but, strange to say, he was becoming aware of her peculiar powers of dictating and laying down the law. John was quiet and inoffensive, and just the kind of man that offers splendid opportunities for the woman with a will of her own. For a long time Mrs. John did not observe that her husband's substantial admiration was growing thin almost to a shadow. But when she did realize it, the blow was something fearful. It had been her opinion that even though she were to sell his best clothes to the rag man to burn the house up or turn his hair John would ever remain the same-faithful, adoring, enduring.

One morning John didn't kiss his wife like whipped cream in an ice chest. So she stuck up her nose-it stuck up of its own accord by the way-and went her ing him. She would do this, she would o that-what John thought didn't matual pace of bullyragging and worry-when he Went down town to business. She moped and wept and scolded the baby and the kitchen maid, and then decided that she didn't care. From that time on things went from bad to worse, and from worse to even worse than that Once in a great while when John's old time vision of love for his wife came up he would take her in his arms and tell her that she was the prettiest thing in the world. Following her old-time tactics, Mrs. John would return comment on his bad choice of a necktie or let loose the pleasant information that his collar was soiled on the edge. John's heart would sink and he'd tramp off to Work feeling like an orphan asylum in a derby hat and creased trousers.

As it was not John's nature to war against anyone, he simply kept himself out of Mrs. John's way. Sunday afternoons he went out for a walk. Sometimes he went over to the North Side to see an old college chum of his. These trips were his only dissipations.

One Sunday afternoon When he and his old friend were discussing some particular scrimmage that had taken place fifteen years back, the telephone bell rang, and a woman's voice begged to speak to Mr. Trumbull. He went to the

"All right, dear," said John, and home went, not stopping long enough finish up the recollections of the college

ed up on a little settee looking very much as she had looked When five years he had begged and entreated and kissed her into saying "Yes." She was twisting her handkerchief into little wads and ropes, and he knew by that that she was distracted about something.

"I know you think I'm a silly to feel this way when its not even twilight yet. But I know postively that somebody tried the kitchen windows while I was lying down, and I just couldn't get over it. always was afraid of burglars and ghosts." And then she had a nervous

John said nothing. He took out a copy of Spencer and lighted a cigar. After a time the baby was brought home and put to bed. Mrs. Trumbull had recovered from her nervousness and was peeking out from behind a window shade listening to a conversation that was going on in the court.

The servant employed in the apartment just below the Trumbulls' abode was in the flat opposite telling the occupants of that place that she was unable to get into the house. "I can't turn the key, and if you don't mind ma'm, I'l go through your window. The people didn't mind at all. They even held the girl's parasol and pocketbook while she clambered from one window sill to the other. Then there came a crash. It was a ter-rific crash. Had the girl fallen into the court? No. The sounds that came from the floor below were unlike those heard when Hendrick Hudson played nineping in the Adirondacks. At that point came a shriek, such as the stage heroine gives vent to when the villian gets after her with a butcher knife. It was sickening. Mrs. Trumbull waited half a second. then stuck her out the window, and with the help of half a dozen other feminine voices called: "Mary! Mary! What's the

The reply was a volley of sobs and squeals winding up with: "The flat's been robbed!" Mr. Trumbull was surprised to see hi wife with hair streaming down her back and hands clutching the folds of a bath robe, go scooting through the library out into the hall and down the stairs. In ten minutes she returned. Her ever were big and black and scared. Her teeth were chattering, and her hands were busy with each other. She curled up on the divan and looked at her husband.

"John, what do you think? The Smith's flat has been robbed and there's hardly a scrap of anything left. They came through the kitchen window. took some Persian rugs and Mrs. Smith's sealskin. And the silver's all gone, and the house-oh, you just should see it! It's knee deep with things that they've pulled out of the dressers and wardrobes John continued to read his Spencer.

"That't too bad." he said. Silence of five minutes. 'John," she spoke very she spoke very softly. 'Yes?" he asked not looking up from Spencer.

"John, do you know I'd just be scared stiff if you weren't here."

John smiled sadly. 'You won't go off on that hunting trip, m you? "Well—ll—ll," he drawled uncertainly. 'I just won't let you go, now. They might come in and take my old candlestick, or the baby, or my grandmother's set of china. And-I'm not a bit airaid when you are here. Honest, I'm not!"

John's chest swelled up. This was some thing new. He threw Spencer on the floor and went and looked at his revolver. Then he tried the dining-room windows. After that he threw his arms out and doubled them up to see if his muscle swelled up as it did when he was a lad at school. He walked back and forth through their bit of a flat and held his head up high. Then he sat down beside that little ty-rant of a wife and looked he in the eyes. She giggled hystetically and ran her fingers across his moustache, just as she used to do when poor John was so crazy with love for her that she could have pulled out every hair of his head and he'd never have known it.

'Dear," John said softly, "I never knew before that there was any place for me in this house, that I filled any want here. But now I find that I am useful, that I am a burglar-scarer. God bless that man that stole those things down stairs. It will be hard on the Smiths, but its a mighty fine thing for me."

And so they lived happy ever after.

Or for a week, as the burglary only took place that far back.

At a meeting of the City Bar, held yesterday morning, the following resolutions were adopted:

tribute to his memory, and to give voice to our sense of personal loss.

Henry Gibbon Cannon was a native and life-long resident of this city. His gea-demic education, begun and prosecuted during his boyhood in her best schools, was completed at the University ginia. He was born November and came to the bar in 1852, well equipped by the attainments of faithful study and with habits of industry and application, which gave assurance of success. He soon won an enviable reputation with the courts and the juries, and attached to adelphia and return at rate of one fare for the round trip, $7.50 from Richmond. Tickets to be sold June 15th to 19th, inhimself valuable clients. The outbreak of the war in 1861 found him in the enjoyment of a remunerative and increasing practice. This, however, he cheerfully abandoned when the peril of his State summoned her sons to the camp, the march, and the battle-field. He promptly enlisted in the Confederate army, in the Wise Legion, and rendered arduous and meritorious service with that command outside his own State, until, in 1865, he was transferred to Virginia. As an offi-cer of the staff of General McCausland, his sphere of duty was chiefly in the western part of the State, and in the memorable Valley campaigns of General Early he was engaged in the most trying > Recognizing that the law is a jealous Recognizing that the law is a fealous mistress, Mr. Cannon devoted himself to the study and to the exacting duties of his professional life, with a steading fidelity which withstood every temptation to court political fame or position. He never sought office, but office sought him, and he yielded his personal preferences so far as to serve his fellow-citizens of Pichmond as a member of the Bayrd ences so far as to serve his fellow-of Richmond as a member of the of Aldermen and chairman of its Finance Committee, in which capacity he randared most valued and valuable service for several years. With this exception, he passed his long life in this community passed his long his in the command the simply as a lawyer, and few among the honored and eminent men who have-adorned the bar of Richmond enjoyed the
